Issue #3: Quality Of Life

The quality of life of our citizens is something that we need to focus on. If elected I will work to have a comprehensive plan for both sidewalks and streets. Many of the sidewalks and streets are in such disrepair that it makes it hazardous to walk around our neighborhoods, especially for our senior citizens who may be physically impaired.

I have talked with many residents in the different neighborhoods of the ward, and they all complain that many sidewalks and streets have not been repaired in years. We should not have to rely on a 10-year-old boy entering an ice cream contest to have a street repaved. This happened this Spring when a young boy from East Elm Ave. entered and won the Rocky Road Ice Cream Contest. This boy's street was repaved for first prize in the contest. As your city councillor, I will work to make sure no other street in Ward 5 is known as the rockiest road.

Noise pollution continues to be a problem in the neighborhoods around the MBTA Red Line. We need to work with our state officials and agencies to find the best possible solutions without changing the character of these neighborhoods.

We need to develop a tree improvement program. As your Ward 5 city councillor I will work to improve your quality of life regarding all of these issues as well as any other issues my constituents bring to my attention.

Question #2

As a graduate of Quincy Public Schools, a parent of school age children and a member of the Massachusetts State Board of Education; Life Management Skills Council, I will work to make sure our schools have the proper resources to help our students attain the best education possible.

I agree with President Clinton's view that school prayer should be not banned in public schools and there should be some opportunity for students to have a moment of reflection. I also agree, wholeheartedly, with the recent court ruling that supports the North Quincy High School mascot, the Yakoo, as a traditional symbol of school spirit.

If we want our children to have the best education possible, we must instill values and pride in them. The education they attain should be a base that can be built upon in their adult life, whether they go on to higher education or begin a career in business. It is imperative that we give the students of Quincy the best education possible so that they will be able to compete with the challenges they will face in the future.

Stephen DurkinQuestion #2

I would say that one of the more critical issues for the City of Quincy as a whole would be promoting economic development. In order to ensure the continued financial health of the city and an expanding base, we need to focus on encouraging economic growth, particularly in downtown Quincy Center. This is a critical concern if we are to continue to provide important city services while, at the same time, controlling taxes on residents and businesses.

As a city councillor, I would intend to work with existing business organizations, the Mayor's Office and Planning Department and the Quincy 2000 Corporation in an ongoing effort to attract large retailers and other large businesses (including a hotel) to locate in Quincy. To be successful, we must make our city attractive to business entities by improving our transportation infrastructure, by controlling property taxes, by ensuring a consumer base for business and by continuing to enhance the city's appearance.

I'm running for the City Council because I love Quincy and I wish to continue in public service to help make sure that Quincy remains a great place to live, to work and to raise a family.

Question #3

I was born in Ward 5 and have resided in Quincy all my life. My wife and I chose to buy a home in Ward 5, three doors from where my grandparents lived. My grandfather owned and operated Heussi's Texaco in Wollaston Center for over a quarter century. We have raised our three boys in Ward 5 and have been affected by many changes in the ward.

I will work to make a difference as your next Ward 5 city councillor because of my commitment and dedication to the people of Ward 5. I have worked with young people of the ward for many years as a volunteer coach for the Koch Club Baseball League and St. Ann's Basketball Program. As a member of the Wollaston Park Association and other civic groups, I have worked to improve our quality of life for our residents. I have been a member of the Wollaston School Parent-Teacher Organization and served on the Beechwood Knoll School reopening task force.

My experience through my work and community activities prepares me for the position of Ward 5 city councillor. As the only candidate who has not run for public office before, I believe I will bring a fresh approach in finding solutions in dealing with problems of our neighborhoods.

As someone who grew up in Wollaston as the oldest of seven children, and having lived in the Quincy Hospital area for the last 10 years, I am very familiar with the many neighborhoods and families throughout Ward 5, and I am thrilled to have an opportunity to represent these families and neighborhoods on the City Council.

My 12 years of service on the School Committee have provided me with valuable experience in trying to improve our schools, setting policy, dealing with government agencies and public employee unions, and responding to residents' needs. With expected cuts in federal aid in years to come, perhaps the most important experience I would bring to the City Council is in dealing with multi-million dollar budgets. I have faced budget cuts many times as a school committee member, and I will apply that experience to my work on the Council. No other candidate for Ward 5 councillor can claim that experience.

Finally, I believe that my background as an attorney and as an elected office holder makes me well-qualified for the important role of representing the interests of Ward 5 before the Zoning Board of Appeals, Licensing Board, Planning Board, and municipal departments.

without making cuts in education and public safety. All too often, there are the first programs to be effected by cuts. With some creative restructuring of the budget we could start some much needed repairs of our sidewalks and streets.

The youth center and the speed watch programs are two issues that if put into place would not cost the taxpayers. The ways I am proposing to support these programs are through people giving time of themselves rather than money out of their pockets. We need to be creative to make all of the aforementioned work. If elected I will work tirelessly and vote against any tax increases that will place an added burden on the citizens of Ward Five. It's time for a change and some creative financing and I am the man with the experience to do it.

For many years our business merchants have suffered. Businesses have been forced to close and relocate which in turn has caused the consumers to go elsewhere. We need to get back on the track of building an economically stable community that would benefit all. We need to make Quincy more attractive for large businesses to move in. With larger businesses in our community should come competitive salaries as well as much needed benefits for the residents of our fine city.

Why should Quincy residents have to travel many miles for employment, when they should have the option to earn a decent income in the city where they live? If elected I will work cooperatively with Quincy 2000, Inc. to bring much needed economic stability back to this working class city. With recent parking changes this alone makes Quincy Center more attractive for new companies as well as consumers. At present we have some prime business properties that would be suitable for any major retail store. I would like to meet with our business owners to hear their concerns and suggestions of ways to make improvements as well as the results that they expect.

I have over the past 15 years had some extensive community involvement such as my positions with The Boston School Committee of which I was a non-voting member, also served on the Superintendent Search Committee. Founded in 1981 and served as the President of Metro Motorist Aid React which is a non-profit communications group that is still in existence.

To me I feel that my most satisfaction comes from the assistance I am able to give families through my involvement with The American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay. I bring with me 9 years of management experience. I am strongly committed to improving the quality of life and safety of the citizens of this community. I bring with me a feeling that comes from the heart.

The leadership ability which I possess is also an asset that can bring forth positive change. Government belongs to the people without the people there is no government and it's time we remind our elected officials that they work for us. A new era of government is what I can bring to the City of Quincy with no new taxes and plenty of much needed programs.

years. It can happen again, too many years have passed with it being empty. It killed a lot of business in Quincy Square when it closed.

rience with schools being a teacher.

I've worked with the seniors as chairperson of the Council on Aging and as former president of the Arthur Tobin Towers Tenant Association.

The project is done through Congressional funding.

According to Peggy Albee, project manager of the Cultural Resource Center, in Lowell, a part of the National Park Service, the church has a cooperative agreement with the National Park Service based on the fact that the Adamsses are buried there.

the City.

Although many development projects represent progress and are beneficial to the city, as councillor, I pledge to scrutinize any development proposal that comes before the city, and to fight any project that would be detrimental to our residential neighborhoods.

Issue #3: Accountability

While issues such as the clean-up of Wollaston Beach and Quincy Bay, support for our schools, and controlling taxes and MWRA rates will be important concerns for me as a city councillor, I think the primary job of a ward councillor is to be sensitive and responsive to the needs and concerns of ward residents. I pledge to be a visible, active, accessible and responsive councillor.

The role a ward councillor should be to make sure that sidewalks get repaired, that trees get planted, that streets get plowed and sanded, that steps be taken to curb speeding on the streets of the ward and that signs get erected to prevent parking problems for residents. These may be mundane concerns, but are the sorts of issues that really have an effect on people's everyday lives. I intend to be a councillor who addresses those concerns efficiently and responsibly.

Quincy & South Shore Board Of Realtors Changes Name

The Quincy & South Shore Board of Realtors has changed its name to the South Shore Association of Realtors (SSAR), a move board officers say reflects the organization's growth and expanded geographic area.

President James Stamos said the board recently received formal approval of the name change from the National Association of Realtors. Letters were then sent to the board's membership informing them of the new name, which Stamos stressed was more than just a nominal change.

"Adopting the name South Shore Association of Realtors was by no means a case of change for the sake of change," Stamos said. "It's really a reflection of where our membership comes from and of the changes occurring within our board and the real estate industry in general."

One of those changes, Stamos noted, was the 70 percent increase in the South Shore board's membership that resulted from last year's statewide adoption of "board of choice." Board of choice allowed Realtors to choose which of the state's 21 Realtor boards they wanted to join. Previously, Realtors were forced to join whichever board held jurisdiction over their geographic area, with large real estate companies often paying membership dues to several different boards in order to gain access to home listings in other cities and towns.

In the year since the adoption of board of choice, Stamos said, the South Shore board's membership has increased from 450 members to 750. Approximately 1,000 sales associates also participate in its Multiple Listing Service, which now provides Realtors with computerized access to home listings in more than 200 Massachusetts cities and towns.

"With so many new members, and with an increased geographic area, we felt it was time to change the board's name to one which better represents all of its members," said SSAR Co-Executive Vice President Geraldine Maloney.

According to Maloney, the board first applied to change its name in 1994, but its application was turned down at the state level. The National Association of Realtors, however, recently changed the criteria for such actions, eliminating the state-level approval. The board resubmitted its application for a name change directly to NAR during the summer, receiving official approval two weeks ago.

"The winds of change are blowing throughout the real estate industry," Stamos said. "With state-of-the-art computers and board of choice, the old geographic and bureaucratic barriers are breaking down."

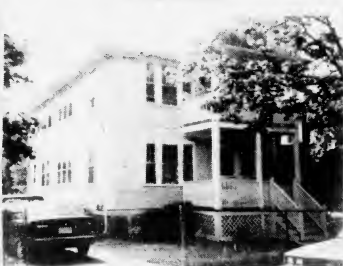

The removal of such barriers, he added, benefits not only Realtors but also buyers and sellers.

"When a seller lists his home with one of our Realtors, information on his home can now be accessed by Realtors and buyers in over 200 cities and towns across the state," Stamos said. "That's a lot of exposure, and that's good for the buying and selling public."

HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

Terminating Termite Troubles

(NAPS)—According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, termites are expected to cause more than $750 million in damage in 1995. Fortunately, homeowners who have their structures inspected and treated in time can avoid this costly problem.

Telltale signs of termite infestation include mud tubes extending from the soil to the structure or discarded wings on windowsills or in light fixtures.

"Winged termites will swarm in the spring and early summer," he said. "They fly toward bright lights and pry off their wings after landing. Then they search for a place to begin a new colony."

A trained professional can provide an inspection, identify potential sources of infestation and recommend the best method of treatment for your specific problem.

Here are some guidelines to help you select the best termite and pest control company to inspect or treat your home:

- Look for a reputable company with representatives experienced in termite habits, types of construction, treatment specifications and state regulations.

- Ask friends and associates to recommend companies they have used.

- Look for membership in industry associations that provide ethical guidelines and technical information.

Bellotti, Volunteers To Clean Up Wollaston Beach Sept. 16

State Rep. Michael Bellotti and local volunteers will gather in front of the Quantum Yacht Club on Wollaston Beach Saturday, Sept. 16 to help remove trash and other pieces of marine debris from along the shore.

The cleanup will be from 10 a.m. to noon. The public is welcome to participate.

The cleanup is part of Coastsweep, a statewide effort organized by the Massachusetts Zone Management to clean up the shore. Through the program, thousands of volunteers remove trash and other debris from almost 200 miles of Massachusetts coastline each year. Volunteers also collect data used to identify the sources of marine debris in an effort to help prevent the problem in the future.

Bellotti, who for the past two years has been working closely with the MDC's "Back to the Beach" program, said he feels the cleanup is just another positive step in the revitalization of Wollaston Beach.

"As anyone who has been to Wollaston Beach within the last six months knows, there has been a tremendous improvement in not only the water quality, but the beach appearance itself," he said. "This cleanup on Sept. 16 is just another step in the right direction to bringing Wollaston Beach back to what it once was, a fully enjoyable and functional beach."

Anyone interested in helping with the event should go to the Yacht Club Sept. 16 at 10 a.m. For more information, call Bellotti at 479-0111 or 722-2210.

Young Red Raiders Must Learn Fast

By KERRY BYRNE

"It's going to be tough. But if it wasn't tough, it wouldn't be football."

Such is the attitude North Quincy head football coach Ken McPhee, a former tough-guy offensive lineman himself, is taking as the 1995 season approaches.

Forget the temperatures dipping, the leaves changing color or the sudden explosion of the yellow school bus menace. If you follow the Red Raiders football team, there's one sure way to know that fall is here: McPhee will be spinning his usual sad-sack yarns of how his team will fare in the upcoming season.

He did it 13 years ago when he took over the Red Raiders program, he did it three years ago when his club went 11-0 and won the Div. 1B Super Bowl, and he's doing it again.

But this time, he may have good reason: the Red Raiders return only three players with significant varsity experience from last year's 6-4 club. They will rely on an untested crew to carry the load through the Old Colony League minefield, including a quarterback who has never taken a snap before. They also have a team repeatedly termed 'small' by McPhee; small in numbers (88 kids came out, the fewest in years) and small in physical size ("our offensive line is the smallest I've ever had").

"We certainly have some talented kids who have been working hard," said McPhee. "We're not doubting their abilities. But we have a lot of young kids who have to get seasoned real quick."

"We have just 13 seniors. We'll be starting five or six underclassmen on defense and four underclassmen on offense. I think we'll be alright though. We'll be competitive."

North Quincy opens at home Friday night at 7 p.m. against Stoughton. They handed the Black Knights a 22-7 loss at Stoughton to open the 1994 season. In a scheduling quirk, the Red Raiders will play seven of 10 games at Quincy's Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Over the final six weeks of the season, the only road test will be at lowly Silver Lake.

A hole in the North Quincy team was left by the departure of defensive coordinator Earl Metzler. Metzler took an assistant principal position at Sterling Middle School and administrative duties will keep him from coaching. McPhee will take over the defensive coordinator duties. Greg Wilson has joined the staff as offensive coordinator.

North Quincy's three returning veterans are senior Tim Zaniboni, senior Chris Ritchie and junior Brian (Muskie) Walsh. Zaniboni and Ritchie will be joined by Paul Picciano as the team's tri-captains.

Zaniboni will be called on to play up to five positions: tight end, line-backer, tailback, wing back and possibly one other.

"The real leader on the field is Zaniboni," said McPhee. "He was a second team all-star last year and is a very unselfish kid. We're looking for him to step up this season."

Ritchie, who will also be expected to "step up," will join Zaniboni at line-backer in North Quincy's base 5-2 defense and will see time at the wing back position.

If there is one player to watch this season, it will be Walsh. The undersized

(5-6, 165 pounds) running back and defensive end plays like a much larger man. He recorded 11 quarterback sacks from the defensive end position as a sophomore and made some spectacular runs as he spelled the since-graduated Sean Nee. Nee, who was Mr. Everything for the Red Raiders, may soon be forgotten if Walsh is able to build upon the flashes of brilliance he has shown in the past.

"Walsh is in the mold of Sean Nee but perhaps a little more durable," said McPhee.

Walsh will switch between tailback and full-back and will join Zaniboni as the only returning starters on defense.

Junior Charlie Plaskavits will man the other end position on the defensive line. They will surround tackles Eric Malames (senior) and Norm Connell (junior) and nose guard/tri-captain Picciano. Chris Washburn will also find time on the defensive front.

The secondary will be the strength of the defense. Junior Tom Coughlin will likely get the nod at strong safety, though he will be challenged by sophomore transfer Steve Rose. Rose will be a double blessing for the Red Raiders; he has the potential to be an outstanding football player, and he transferred here from OCL rival Barnstable.

Senior Mike Ferguson will play free safety while senior Matt Kieley and sophomore Pat Egan will man the corner positions.

Others who may see time in the secondary are Shaun Donovan, Paul Greeley and Shawn Johnson.

"This is the strongest secondary I've had in a while," said McPhee. "Maybe the strongest I've ever had."

The coach did express concern over the fact that some of his secondary players had developed slight injuries during the pounding that comes with preseason preparations.

Scheduled to lead the offense at quarterback is senior Jim Rendle.

"Jim has never in his life played quarterback be-

Battle Div. 4 Power East Bridgewater Saturday

A Season Of Firsts For The Presidents

It's a season of firsts for the Quincy High School football team.

First-year head coach Peter Chella, in his first-ever head coaching position, will lead a team of primarily first-year junior and sophomore players onto the field. They will be wearing new uniforms and running a new offense in a quest for the school's first Old Colony League title.

In their first game of the 1995 season, the Presidents will face a stiff test at East Bridgewater Saturday afternoon. The Div. 4 powerhouse closed the 1994 season with a Super Bowl appearance. East Bridgewater returns nine starters on defense to go up against Quincy's three returning offensive starters.

The first game fills a non-conference spot on the schedule that was filled last year by Div. 1 Super Bowl champion New Bedford. Along with eight games against the usual cast of Old Colony League characters, Quincy will host non-league opponent Marshfield. Last year the Presidents opened the season with a 13-0 win at Marshfield.

It is not business as usual for Quincy. With a grand total of four returning starters, and a team that will rely on speed at the skill positions to carry the club, the unit that takes the field Saturday afternoon will be barely recognizable next to the three-yards-and-a-cloud-of-dust team which carried the Presidents to a 6-4 finish last year.

"We can't run at people anymore, we don't have the personnel," said Chella. "We do have a lot of talented skills position people, though. We want to spread out the field, put people in motion and make defenses cover the entire field."

What it means is that it's hard to predict what the Presidents are going to do this season. With new blood and a slew of young talent, they could surprise a lot of people. On the other hand, the untested group may find themselves in over their heads in some ball games.

Those skills position people who will be called upon to handle the ball are senior running back/linebacker Bill Dunn, senior wide receiver/cornerback Mike Sheffer and junior quarterback Mark Glynn. Those three, along with offensive guard/nose guard Peter Kolson, are the only players who saw significant playing time last season.

Kolson will be joined at guard by senior Jake Drohan. The tackle positions will be manned by juniors

Don McCarthy, Jason Little or Paul Daley.

Starting the offense at center will be sophomore Dan Nichol, who, at 14, may be the youngest starter in the Old Colony League. He is sure to make his presence known in each ball game and will be the Quincy High player to watch over the next three years.

The offense will have a new look, with Dunn the main man in what will be a one-back set on most occasions. In two-back formations, junior Kevin Connolly will move from the slot position to tailback and Dunn will become the fullback. They will provide an interesting 1-2 punch: Connolly is small, quick and possesses great balance. Dunn is the throwback, the diesel, the kind of football player who devours raw meat and washes it down with battery acid.

"I think we have enough, with Dunn and

North Quincy Girls Prove They Can Win

Before the season started, North Quincy girls soccer coach Paul Bregoli talked the talk.

After two games, his club was shown they can walk the walk.

With a 1-0 win over Plymouth South Friday and a 5-1 win against Boston Latin Monday, the Red Raiders have equaled their win total of the entire 1994 season.

The coach, however, is not about to take it easy. "We've accomplished what we set out to do so far," said Bregoli. "But, what's that saying? 'If you're satisfied with what you did yesterday, you haven't done anything today.'"

In the early stages of the opening game against Plymouth South it looked like the season would open on the wrong foot. The Panthers jumped on the Red Raiders early. But, due to the exceptional defensive play of Sara Mulvey, Joclyn West, Rachael Powers and Kelly Kegan, the Raiders fended off the onslaught and were able to turn the tables.

With 15 minutes to go in the first half, senior captain Kristen Kelley got control of the ball and managed to find the back of the net for the game's only talk.

Junior goalie Lisa Bragg stood tall as she held off a late game flurry. She made an amazing save on a near breakaway to prevent the equalizer from being scored.

Senior Liz Fitzpatrick was cited by the coach for her brilliant play. "Liz was just fantastic. She got to every single ball that came her way," said Bregoli.

The second game lacked the drama, but was more impressive, if not for the coach, at least for the North Quincy faithful.

Freshman Betsy Stone got the ball rolling with a first-half goal. Sophomore Kristen Keohane and Kelley gave the Red Raiders a 3-0 cushion at the break.

After Latin's lone tally, junior Hillary O'Donoghue made it a 4-1 game. Sophomore Katie Koch iced the game when she raced through the Latin defense, made a move just inside the goal area to deke the final defender, and hit a low shot past the goalie's outstretched right hand.

"We had to get off to a good start so that the girls knew we could play with anyone," said Bregoli. "The first win kind of set the tone. This second game was huge because it kept the momentum going. Now we have some big challenges ahead of us."

North Quincy was scheduled to face a stern test Tuesday as they traveled to Falmouth. The schedule does not get easier with games Thursday against Barnstable, Saturday at Brockton, and Monday against Silver Lake.

Bregoli feels his team will have to play better, capitalize on every opportunity, if his club is to continue its winning ways.

"We didn't play as well as we could, and the girls know it," he said. "We had a lot of opportunities to score in both games where we weren't able to."

"We also have to get the system down better. The girls are still learning it. They don't always know why or when they should be in a certain position."

fore," said McPhee. "But he came in and looked poised and confident. Greg Wilson has done a nice job coaching him."

Rendle's back-up, Coughlin, was a junior varsity tight end last year.

The wide outs will be Kiely, Egan and Ferguson. The main men in the backfield will be Walsh and Zaniboni with Johnson, Donovan and Ritchie filling in where and when needed.

Stoughton will provide a formidable opening opponent for the Red Raiders.

"They're a very good football team," said McPhee. "They've got a big fullback who runs at you and blocks well. Their tailback is a legitimate big-time football player. They're not big up front, but they're bigger than us."

North Quincy's schedule is the same as last year with non-conference games against Stoughton and Don Bosco and eight games against Old Colony League foes. They will play in nine consecutive Friday night games before meeting Quincy for their annual Thanksgiving morning clash.

McPhee was philosophical about the lack of experience which his team will carry on to the field Friday night: "Hey, the only way you get experience is just to strap the helmet on and go out and play."

"We're young, but it's cyclical. Two years from now, or maybe even next year, we'll be a much more experienced club."

Connolly, to have a decent running game," said Chella.

Eric Nunez will be opposite Sheffer at the wide out spot. Getting the ball in the hands of these two will be important if the Presidents offense is to move the ball the ball effectively; last year Sheffer averaged 30 yards per reception while Nunez was a speed merchant on the JV team.

John Ryan, who saw varsity action over the last half of the 1994 season, will be the primary tight end.

It will be up to Glynn, who will likely get the nod at QB over John Hanafin, to spread the ball around. "Glynn was not mentally prepared when he came to camp," said the coach. "But he's still an experienced quarterback. He can throw the ball well, run the option and is cool under fire - not a lot of guys are at this level."

The offense may struggle, perhaps more mentally than physically, as the players learn to deal with a new and more advanced offensive system instituted by offensive coordinator Bob Noble which includes a great deal of motion, an option package, and multiple formations.

"There will be some growing pains, particularly on offense," acknowledged Chella.

It is a notion that leads the rookie coach to believe that the success of his team will hinge on the performance of its defense.

"If the defense starts making plays, my feeling is that we will be O.K.," said Chella. "The middle is good with Dunn at linebacker and with our tackles."

"The outside perimeter and off-tackle is where we've struggled during our scrimmages. We need people to make plays in those areas."

Presidents defensive coordinator Bob Keuther had planned on using a 4-4 defense but, after assessing the personnel situation, may lean more towards a 5-3. "We just felt that we need another down lineman to work at stopping the run," said Chella.

The defense will hinge on Kolson at nose tackle and Dunn at middle linebacker. Dunn will likely be flanked by Ryan and Anthony Lallis or Tim Santos.

Joining Kolson on the front wall will be seniors John Moss and Scott MacPherson and junior Don McCarthy. The ends may be manned by two sophomores, Steve Wiltshire and Steve Maze, each of whom had impressive seasons with the freshmen squad last year.

Sheffer and Connolly will play the corners and junior Mike Russo will round out the secondary at safety.

Chella was asked to sum up his experiences so far: "Every day is a different thing," he said. "We're not sure what to expect."

"We're a young team, a rebuilding team. We have kids learning new things each day, hopefully picking up the things it takes to become a winning team. Now we just have to translate those things from the practice field onto the playing field."

"There may be some pains, but at some point these kids will gel."

GIANT SINKHOLE that opened Sunday after a rain-swollen culvert blew out beneath Burgin Parkway is examined by Michael Buccheri and Brian Boidi of Nina Excavators of Quincy. Officials said traffic on the roadway will be restricted for at least another two weeks.

On Burgin Parkway

Traffic Problems Remain While Sinkhole Is Repaired

Traffic will be restricted on a stretch of Burgin Parkway for at least another two weeks as crews continue to work to stabilize a huge sinkhole on the southbound side of the road.

At press time, officials had no estimate of how long it will take or how much it will cost to completely repair the roadway and return traffic to normal.

The 30-by-15-foot hole, located between the School Street overpass and Star Market, opened up Sunday when a rain-swollen culvert blew out beneath the road. It is near where the Army Corps of Engineers has been digging a 25-foot-deep retention basin and a 180-foot-deep shaft as part of its Town Brook flood control project.

City officials said Quincy will not have to pay for the repairs, since the $18 million flood control project is jointly funded by the federal government and the Metropolitan District Commission. The Army Corps of Engineers will oversee all repairs.

Meanwhile, morning and evening drivers will be inconvenienced on the section of the road between Granite and Penn Streets.

Officials said on weekdays between 6 and 11 a.m., the city plans to open both lanes to northbound traffic. During the remainder of the day on weekdays and all day long on weekends, one lane will run northbound and one will run southbound.

At press time, officials said it is possible the roadway will soon be completely closed from 8 p.m. to 5:30 a.m. between Granite and Penn streets to allow crews to work.

Signs will guide morning and evening drivers to detours through surrounding neighborhoods that will lead them back to Burgin Parkway.

Councillor Timothy Cahill suggested that officials from the DPW and BFI be invited to attend the council's next meeting to discuss the matter, saying both sides should be heard.

"I don't think we should leave this hanging," he said. "There's too much at stake here to leave it hanging for people to wonder if the city is getting a good deal or getting ripped off."

Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien, chairman of the council's Disposal and Recycling Committee, agreed that the dialogue will be helpful.

"There are so many numbers to get to the bottom of the issue," said Chretien.

Young Michael D'Amico and veteran Stephen Durkin topped the Wards 4 and 5 city council fields in Tuesday's light preliminary election vote.

D'Amico, a 20-year-old college student making his second bid for the Ward 4 seat, led incumbent and runner-up Tom Fabrizio, 40, by a 180-vote margin.

Durkin, 39, who gave up his School Committee seat to make a bid for the Ward 5 council seat, rolled to an easy victory. Durkin's vote was 1,102--673 more than the second place Steven Reilly, 37, a lieutenant at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office.

In Ward 4, Gregg Rennie, 29, a financial advisor, finished third with 248 votes and Michael Larkin was fourth with 114.

In Ward 5, third spot went to Sabina Kavanagh Stenberg, 64, a real estate broker and one-time chairwoman of the Quincy Council on Aging, who had 106 votes. Dennis Dockham, 32, a retail store manager, was fourth with 66 votes.

D'Amico and Fabrizio will square off against another in the Nov. 7 final election as will Durkin and Reilly.

The Wards 4 and 5 contests were the only preliminary contests Tuesday.

More Ward 4 than Ward 5 voters went to the polls Tuesday. The turnout in Ward 4 was 34.66 percent or 2,420 of the registered voters there.

The Ward 5 turnout was 23.68 percent--or 1,772 of the registered voters there.

The election count may have been the fastest in the city's history. The polls closed at 8 p.m. and the results in both wards were computer tabulated by 8:45 p.m.

D'Amico as an 18-year-old made an impressive run against Fabrizio two years ago in his first bid for office. D'Amico came within 277 votes of Fabrizio who was also the incumbent then.

Durkin, who grew up in Wollaston and now lives in the Hospital Hill area of Ward 5, said he has had his eye on the Ward 5 city council seat for some time.

"I've always wanted to represent Ward 5 on the city council. I'm really thrilled about the prospects of representing Ward 5 on the City Council," Durkin said.

Reilly, making his first run for elective office, said he is looking forward to challenging Durkin in November.

"I'm sure Steve (Durkin) is going to run on his record and I'm going to run on his record also and we'll find out the differences between us," Reilly said.

The City Council will discuss the city's rubbish and recycling contract with Browning-Ferris Industries (BFI) at its next meeting Oct. 2.

Council President Michael Cheney has criticized the contract in recent weeks, saying the city pays too much for rubbish pickup and does not get enough for its recyclables.

On Monday night, Cheney introduced resolutions to the council asking the mayor to audit the recycling program and to let the review the new request for proposals (R.F.P.) that will be sent out by the Department of Public Works before the current contract expires June 30, 1996.

Arbella Makes Significant Donation To Kids Voting, Other Contributions Sought

Arbella Insurance Company Wednesday announced a significant contribution to Kids Voting of Quincy, the voter-education program for public and private school students.

"The concept is outstanding," said Arbella President Richard Brewer. "I'm happy to have our company involved."

Kids Voting of Quincy--organized earlier this year by local business, school and civic officials--is seeking additional sponsors to assure the program's success.

The purpose of the program is to educate Quincy students about voting and the democratic process, with special emphasis on Quincy's upcoming general election. Participants will cast a Kids Voting ballot on election day at the regular polling places.

Sponsors hope that in addition to instilling lifelong voting habits in the students, the program will help increase adult voter turnout by having youngsters accompany their parents to the polls.

Quincy public and parochial school teachers from kindergarten through high school recently began teaching a curriculum that will educate students about the American voting process and the Quincy election.

Arbella's contribution is the latest donation to the non-profit, non-partisan program. Earlier this year, The Patriot Ledger, Stop and Shop Supermarkets and the Quincy Kiwanis Club made significant contributions.

But the Kids Voting Fundraising Committee is actively seeking other donations.

"We would like to make this program as broad-based as possible," said Scott Low, publisher of The Patriot Ledger and a member of the fundraising committee.

Low, banker Chuck Simpson and Liz Chase Marino of Stop and Shop comprise the fundraising committee. Donations can be made any committee member or by contacting School Supt. Eugene Creedon, chairman of Kids Voting of Quincy.

You can also contact Harold Crowley, executive director, Kids Voting of Quincy, at 3 Flagg St., Quincy, MA 02170, or phone 471-6881.

Still 911 For Emergency Service New Telephone Number At Police Dept.

The Quincy Police Department has begun to implement a new telephone system and number.

The department's new main number is 745-5700. Those who call will be put through to a computerized directory that will announce a list of extensions for specific departments.

At press time, Police Chief Francis Mullen could not be reached for comment. Data Processing Director Bob Brennan, who is working to implement the system, said a complete list of department extensions will be available at a later date.

Brennan said the department is switching to the Nyxex-Centrex Phone System currently used by all other city departments, excluding Quincy Hospital. Although the rest of the city switched to the system in January 1992, the police department had to wait because its contract with AT&T did not expire until this past summer, he noted.

Brennan said once the implementation of the system—which began this past weekend—is fully completed, the department will be able to provide more efficient service while saving money at the same time.

"It will give us one unified phone system throughout the city, excluding the hospital," he said. "People will be reach to dial directly anyone they're trying to reach without going through an operator."

Brennan added that four operators who work for the department will be re-assigned.

He also noted that callers should still dial 911 for emergency service.

SNORING: A SLEEPER OF A PROBLEM

It may make for a few laughs on a TV sitcom, but snoring isn't funny when it threatens your health. Factors that can contribute to snoring include enlarged tonsils or adenoids, structural deformity, nasal congestion, smoking, and obesity. Chronic, loud snoring that is punctuated by brief periods of silence ending in a snort can be a sign of sleep apnea, a condition in which the patient stops breathing for brief periods. In addition to the distress and sleep loss of anyone within earshot, sleep apnea can contribute to such conditions as high blood pressure, irregular heart rhythm, headache, drowsiness, irritability, and even death. Anyone who snores heavily and has such symptoms should consult a doctor. If your partner informs you that you suffer from this condition, see your doctor to see if there are steps you can take to increase your well-being and that of those around you!

At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, located at 700 Congress St., in Quincy, we take a full family history when considering your symptoms and offer health recommendations as well as treatment. We specialize in treating heart problems, hypertension, and cholesterol. Call 472-2550; office hours by appointment. Convenient parking. We're here to meet all your medical needs.

McCauley Leaving GOP Seat

There will be at least one local open seat in next year's Presidential-state election. Former Mayor Frank McCauley will be finishing a four-year term as Republican state committeeman and will not seek re-election.

McCauley, who is running unopposed this November for a two-year term on the School Committee, says: "I believe in serving in one elective office at a time and my choice is the School Committee. I want to concentrate on that."

McCauley notes that the deadline for nomination papers for state committeeman is around Nov. 10.

"I'm making it known now," he says, "to give anyone interested in running for the position plenty of notice."

The district used to comprise Quincy, Braintree, Avon and Holbrook but now meanders from Quincy to Holbrook and Norwell and through parts of Braintree, Abington and Rockland.

Rep. Michael Bellotti is the Democratic state committeeman and he apparently will seek re-election.

WILL HE OR won't he? Congressman Joseph Moakley is having a difficult time deciding whether or not to seek re-election next year. Moakley, who recently underwent a liver transplant, in one day said he would not run and a few hours later said he would. The next day he said he might not.

If he decides finally not to seek re-election—and observers think that will be his final decision—don't overlook Norfolk County Dist. Atty. Bill Delahunt as a potential candidate for the seat. He was not included in a Boston newspaper's recent list of possible candidates. But he would be a serious contender if he decided to run.

He lives in Quincy which isn't in Moakley's 9th Congressional District but you don't have to live in the district to run. The fact that most of Norfolk County is in Moakley's district, would be a big plus for Delahunt.

A FUNDRAISER for Larry Chretien is set for tonight (Thursday) from 6 to 8 p.m. at The Adams, 1 Adams St., Quincy Center. Tickets are $100 per person and are available at the door by calling 472-1400.

Chretien is vacating the Ward 3 seat to run for city councillor at-large.

[Before]

CITY SOLICITOR Steve McGrath was still sporting that mustache as we went to press. He says the reaction to it so far has been at least 2-1 in favor of him keeping it. (That's what he says.) It's a pretty thick mustache. You're not using Turfbuilder are you, Steve?

IN A RECENT column we speculated on the chances of a woman being elected mayor of Quincy. Conclusion: It will happen one of these years.

In the 107 years Quincy has been a city 28 men have been elected mayors but no women.

Two or three women have tried and the one that came the closest was Grace Saphir who ran against incumbent Walter Hannon in 1973. She polled 10,416 votes to Hannon's 15,492.

Saphir, now a resident of East Sandwich, sends along a note in response to the column:

"Yes, though I am not a feminist, I know that when women do make it (mayor), they'll do a fine job."

"With former Mayor (Amelio) Della Chiesa and the Honorable Senator Charles Hedges behind me, I nearly succeeded. They now call me 'the almost mayor.'"

"Some people were worried because of future appointments such as the superintendent of the hospital. They needn't have worried. She, too, would have been a woman—had her all picked out! She was a graduate of the Yale University School of Nursing and a Lt. Commander in the Navy."

"As for the public works position, that was open. I remember calling Charlie Herbert, the DPW commissioner and saying, 'Charlie, let's clean up the City of Quincy.'"

"He answered in his witty fashion, 'Grace, what do you mean, physically or morally? Bless him, I hope he is still around.'"

"My best to you and your fine paper."

Thanks for the note, Grace. And, yes, Charlie is still around—and hasn't changed a bit.

Great Hill House, Houghes Neck, Quincy, Mass.

THIS QUINCY PICTURE POSTCARD view of the Great Hill House in Houghes Neck was postmarked in 1910. Located at the foot of Sea Avenue, the hotel was established just before the Civil War and operated by James Mears until he died. Because it was widely known for its shore dinners it helped establish Houghes Neck as a tourist destination. Now the site of a parking lot for the Quincy Yacht Club this building was torn down to build Nortemans Pavilion, also a famed seafood enterprise, operated by the Norteman family who had a farm nearby. Nortemans was so close to the back of the Yacht Club that a stairway connected the kitchen of the pavilion with the club's dining room.

Opposes Construction On Bird Sanctuary

[A copy of the following letter, dated Sept. 6 and addressed to the Quincy Conservation Commission, was sent to The Quincy Sun for publication.]

Dear Members of the Commission:

We are writing to express the Quincy Citizens & Wollaston Park Associations' opposition to any contemplated building on the bird sanctuary acreage at Marina Bay, Squantum.

ability" by Continuum Care of MA., Inc.

The Squantum Marine Bird Sanctuary is an integral part of nature's wildlife existence, as it provides a resting place and flyaway location for thousands of sea and other birds and animals annually migrating along the New England Coast.

We take this opportunity to suggest that an ideal location for Continuum Care in our area would be right at the Jordan Marsh warehouse, a quarter of a mile away from the bird sanctuary. It is a very large, one-story building that could be readily redesigned and altered to accommodate a senior citizen apartment complex, a nursing home, a delightful shopping mall, auditorium for recreation, and all the amenities that a gorgeous suburban seaside site could offer to seniors desirous of a unique location with sea, lots of sun, lots of parking and good fresh air. We feel that the Jordan Marsh property could be converted to an ideal Continuum Care facility.

We trust that the Conservation Commission will reject the Marina Bay Bird Sanctuary as the site of any test borings, and order that no future proposals for the destruction of the bird sanctuary will be considered--and affix your formal decision on any deeds on this property.

Hospital Thanks Quincy Emergency Management

[A copy of the following letter, dated Sept. 12 and addressed to Quincy Emergency Management Deputy Director Tony Siciliano, was sent to The Quincy Sun for publication.]

Dear Tony:

Last night, we at the Brigham & Women's Hospital learned what it is like to be in a flood; a tremendous amount of water came in through our foundation walls and tunnel penetrations.

The amount of water was just too much for our small sump pumps to handle. We called on the Boston Fire Department, but to no avail. Finally, we put in a call to the Quincy Emergency Management team, who responded with two heavy-duty trash pumps to save the day.

I wanted to thank you for your quick assistance, and especially want to extend a special thanks to your chief radio operator, John Chetwynd. John also works for us at the hospital as a p.m. mechanic. Both you and I are fortunate to have a person who is so dedicated to our needs.

Once again, thanks for your help.

$3M In Bonds For Highway, Library

By PAUL HAROLD

City Treasurer David Houston was prepared to open bids on $3 million in bonding for highway and library projects this week.

The borrowing would provide for the widening of upland Rd. and the extension of Newport Ave. to Sagamore Ave. The total cost of the highway work was $4.3 million with the difference paid by the state and the MBTA.

The amount of $300,000 was appropriated for the construction of the new Adams Shore branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library at Riverside Ave. and Sea St.

Houston noted that the new borrowing brought the total city debt to $12,498,000.

MORGAN MEMORIAL CENTER PLANNED

Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries proposed the construction of a distribution center on the edge of Swingle's Quarry, a few hundred yards to the west of Willard St.

The plans for the center were discussed at the city council meeting, but met with skepticism from health department officials because of the proposed conveyor belt that would dump unsuitable materials from the warehouse into the quarry.

KEEL LAID FOR ASSAULT SHIP

The keel was laid at the General Dynamics shipyard for the first of four LSD-class vessels to be built at Quincy as part of a contract valued at $88.7 million.

Golden Apple Cake

While preparing for a cookout last week (our last biggie for the summer), I found a recipe for apple cake that my mother used to bake. All of our children fondly reminisced about the familiar taste of the cake.

Golden Apple Cake

- 2 1/4 cups flour
- 1 1/2 cups sugar
- 3 1/4 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 stick butter or margarine
- 2 large eggs (unbeaten)
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 2/3 cup milk
- For the apple layer
- 2 large apples
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 2 tablespoons sugar

First, cut the apples as you would if you were preparing a pie. Add the cinnamon and sugar and set aside.

For the cake, in a large bowl, place the dry ingredients. Add the melted butter or margarine with half the milk. Beat for a minute. Add the eggs, the rest of the milk and the vanilla and beat for 2 minutes at high speed.

In a well greased and flour sprinkled baking pan, place half the cake mixture. On top of that, layer carefully the apple slices, then top it with the cake mixture and swirl it around carefully until blended. (Don't worry if some of the apple slices show through the top layer. It all blends in when baked.)

Bake in a 350 degree oven for 35-40 minutes. It can be served with heavy whipped cream or ice cream.

"These local grants play a major role in the cultural and economic vitality of our community," said Keough.

gratitude for their dedication and hard work in making quality programs available to residents," added Morrissey.

Deadline for all local cultural councils to accept applications is Monday, Oct. 16. Organizations and individuals interested in applying for grants should call Keough at 376-1322.

Impacy Quincy Survey Shows:

Alcohol, Marijuana Use By Quincy Youth Drops

Use of alcohol and marijuana by Quincy youth appears to have dropped in the past year, according to results of the 1995 survey. (over 3,000 youth participated in the survey, which was administered by Impact Quincy last spring. The results were released at the IQ Coalition meeting last week.

"This is very encouraging news," said Project Director Mitch Finnegan. "Most of our young people are choosing not to use any substances, and the number of those who do has dropped. It appears that our community's many efforts at prevention are Finnegan off."

QUINCY COALITION FOR THE PREVENTION OF ALCOHOL, TOBACCO & OTHER DRUG PROBLEMS

Finnegan credited a number of different efforts with bringing about the reductions. "Our community has taken some important steps to create more protective factors for our young people," Finnegan stated. "The public schools have increased their level of health education; the Mayor and Recreation Department have opened up more gymnasiums so youth have healthy alternatives; the Teen Centers continue to expand their programs; the Police Department have continued their efforts through both the DARE and PAL programs. All of these, and numerous other efforts, must be credited with helping to reduce the rates of use."

Alcohol continues to be the most commonly used drug among Quincy's youth with 36 percent of all 7th through 11th graders reporting use. This represents a six percent drop in the rate of use compared to last year's results. As expected, the number of youth using alcohol increases along with their age, growing from 22 percent of seventh graders to 50 percent of 12th graders. This year, sixth graders participated in the survey for the first time, and indicated that almost 10 percent of them have used alcohol.

The amount that young people drink continues to be a concern, as over 65 percent of all high school youth report either drinking until they feel drunk or drinking five or more drinks in a row. "This could in no way be considered appropriate rates of use, even for adults," said Finnegan. "Of the kids who are drinking, most are drinking very heavily."

Marijuana use appears to have dropped slightly, with 23 percent of the youth reporting use, said Finnegan. Last year's results had shown a doubling of the rate of marijuana use from 1993 to 1994. Recent national surveys have shown that this trend of increased use is continuing throughout the country.

Tobacco use among young people stayed about the same, with girls once again smoking at much higher rates than boys, according to the survey.

Use of all other substance appears to have remained constant or to have dropped slightly, with the exception of psychedelics, such as LSD. "Use of psychedelics appears to have increased from five to seven percent of our youth," said Finnegan. "This is a trend that we will try to address through continued education and prevention efforts."

One area of great concern revealed through the survey was the number of young people who rode in a car with a driver who had been drinking at heavy rates. Of all the young people who rode with a driver who had been drinking, almost half rode with someone who had more than five drinks in a row.

"The drinking and driving information is very alarming," said Finnegan. "Many of our young people are knowingly getting into a car with someone who had been drinking very heavily, even when they could have gotten a ride with someone else. This is an area that we will need to make some major efforts at addressing."

Also disturbing was the easy access to alcohol for most young people, and the perception that kids have more fun when they are high. Over 90 percent of all high school age youth reported that it would be very easy for them to get alcohol, primarily from adults who would buy it and illegally provide it to them. Over 70 percent said that they believe kids have more fun when they are high.

Finnegan had a final reminder of the implications of the survey results. "If we are serious about reducing the risks and negative effects of alcohol, tobacco, and other drug use among our children, we must look at the norms and attitudes that we communicate to them through our control and use of these substances."

Information from the survey will be available through a series of informational fliers from Impact Quincy. The first one is entitled What Our Youth Say About...Alcohol, Tobacco, and Other Drugs, and is available from the Impact Quincy office. A detailed report of all the information released last week is also available at the office at 15 Cottage Ave., Quincy Center, or by calling 472-6027.

Telemarketing Fraud, Part II

What consumer-soaking schemes are all the rage these days?

Among the major scams of the 1990s are postcard sweepstakes offers. In a recent pole, 30 percent of Americans said they had responded to such mailings, sometimes sending hundreds of dollars to "register" for a seemingly fabulous prize or trip.

False charities are another popular consumer con.

Telephone troublemakers claiming to represent everyone from police officers to the disabled take advantage of Americans' generosity to the tune of billions of dollars each year. Adding to the problem is an array of fraudulent appeals—in newspaper ads, on TV and by mail—about business and investment opportunities, vacation homes, and even "miracle cures," for everything from baldness to cancer.

What Can You Do

In the face of this onslaught of fraud, the best course for consumers is to beware. Here are some pointers so you won't be conned by the pros:

- If a caller asks for your credit card, bank account or social security number to verify a free vacation, a prize, or a gift, say "NO" and hang up.

- If your calling a 900 number in response to an advertisement or something you received in the mail, make sure you know all the charges up front.

- Before you agree to support a charity that calls seeking money, ask for written information about its finances and programs.

Conservation Commission Meeting

The Quincy Conservation Commission was scheduled to meet last night (Wednesday) at 7:30 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

On the agenda was a notice of intent filed by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority for conducting of geotechnical and hazardous material borings and install ground-water monitoring wells in Squantum and Merrymount Park as well as a 100-foot buffer zone regarding land subject to flooding.

Meetings are open to the public.

REAL ESTATE MARKET

Presidents Hill At The Turn Of The Century

By ARTHUR FOLEY
Several years ago I picked up a Real Estate promotional handbook put out by "Swithin Brothers," who called themselves "the largest handlers of Real Estate in the City of Quincy."

They were the sales agents for Presidents Hill, Presidents Hill Annex, and Cranch Hill Real Estate. As near as I can guess, this was published around 1905.

For this article, I'll concentrate on Presidents Hill. See the reproduced map from the handbook. Looking at the map, one immediate observation is the two streets named Whalley Road which is now Monroe Road and Goffe Street which is now Presidents Lane. There's a history behind the change of names which I'll talk about in a later article.

Two homes on the map are still standing, the Bateman House which was the Montillio home and which is now owned by Dr. Kent Hill, president of Eastern Nazarene College, who naturally lives on Presidents Hill. The other existing home is the Burgin House on the corner of Fairmount and Goffe. The large Lawton Estate is now gone, subdivided into several house lots. In fact, the home built by former Mayor Tom Burgin in 1952 at 11 Dixwell St. sits on one of those lots. By the way, this beautiful home is presently on the market with our office.

Historically, some of the older, better neighborhoods in Quincy were built on hills and an excerpt from the handbook explains why:

"Being on a hill, this locality is entirely free from any noise or business bustle or other objectionable features and insures perfect drainage."

Today, the drainage isn't an issue because most areas are protected by storm drains, etc. But in those days, being at the top of the hill versus at the bottom could mean a big difference to your daily lifestyle.

Another excerpt from the handbook states, "The property is dotted with fine trees, a large proportion having been imported by Mr. Adams."

Many of these beautiful Copper Beech trees still flourish on Presidents Hill. Since we have mentioned Dr. Adams it's worth noting that a large portion of Presidents Hill was originally part of "The Adams Farm." When I bought my home on Presidents Lane in 1973, the title search showed the Adams Family Trust formed in the 1880s had a restriction that prevented anyone from constructing a home that cost less $2,500.

It didn't take very long for that restriction to become obsolete. Little did they realize that the cost of a "Grande Home" in 1890 would equal the water/sewer cost in 2010.

State Treasurer And Republican Gubernatorial Hopeful Visits Quincy

Malone's Message: 'We Need To Do More With Less'

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

State government should do more to promote business and lessen the tax burden on families and individuals, Treasurer Joseph Malone said in a visit to Quincy last week.

Malone, who says he will seek the Republican gubernatorial nomination in 1998, highlighted his achievements and stressed government's need "to do more with less" at a joint meeting of the city's three service organizations. Approximately 100 members of the Quincy Kiwanis, Lions and Rotary Clubs attended the luncheon at the Quincy Neighborhood Club last Thursday.

In his 30-minute address, Malone spoke of streamlining the state treasury department since taking office in January, 1991. In addition, the treasurer said state government must do more to encourage business throughout the Commonwealth while reducing taxes.

"I think the biggest challenge that we face as a state is if we are going to be able to successfully compete in a global marketplace, is that we drive down the cost of living and we drive down the cost of doing business."

"I think what we've heard from Raytheon is an indication that we need to wake up and make sure that we make Massachusetts a place where companies can successfully compete with other companies from other places like North Carolina, Arizona or any other place," Malone said. Raytheon, the state's largest employer, has threatened to relocate its operation if its share of state taxes are not reduced.

"From my standpoint,"

Malone continued, "I think there are cases where regulations often times becomes too much of a set of red tapes and not enough common sense. Certainly we all want to make sure that our environment is protected, that the workplace is safer for employees, but it reaches a point of overkill."

"All of us in Massachusetts need to be vigilant to make sure that we bring about that delicate balance where on the one hand we protect those things that we want to protect through regulations, that we deliver services that need to be delivered to senior citizens or students who need to be educated or the truly needed, but on the other side of that scale, we must make sure that the goose the lays the golden eggs, the free enterprise system, is kept alive and well."

"I believe that is going to be the key to our future here in Massachusetts."

Malone became the first Republican state treasurer in Massachusetts when he was elected in 1990. He was re-elected to a second four-year term last November by a 2-1 margin. He and Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci will likely be the main contenders seeking the GOP gubernatorial nomination in 1998. Gov. Weld has said he will not seek a third term.

Malone was introduced at the meeting by former Quincy Mayor Frank McCauley, McCauley, a member of the host Lions Club and one of the city's prominent Republicans, was hired as the executive director of the State Retirement Board after Malone took office four and a half years ago.

McCauley, who supported the Weld and Cellucci ticket as well as Malone in 1990, said he will back Malone.

"I will be with the treasurer (in the race for governor in 1998)," McCauley told The Sun. "That is in no way any disrespect for Paul Cellucci but I think Joe Malone's accomplishments are substantial."

"Joe's got a good message and a powerful message. I think he would be a stronger candidate in a general election when it gets down to a Democrat and a Republican."

Malone summed up his message to the service club members this way: "Our attitude is we're going to do more with less."

Since taking office, Malone has cut operating expenses, reduced the state payroll and fashioned the Mass lottery into the most efficient in the country. He said cutbacks were made without reducing public services.

As an illustration, Malone recalled the old state treasury bank which existed for the sole purpose of cashing checks for employees at the State House.

"There were 12 tellers who worked behind the teller windows as you'd find at your local bank. Collectively they were being paid about $450,000 a year. Then there was a million dollars of cash sitting there in the vault in the treasurer's office that existed so that the transactions could be made. That wasn't drawing any interest. Then there was the $50,000 insurance cost to insure the million dollars."

followed by a hypnosis session and further discussion. Comfortable clothing is suggested.

Pre-registration is not required. For more information, call the hospital's Public Relations Department at 773-6100, ext. 4018.

"When you added it all up, at a time when the state had gone four consecutive years with spending more than it was bringing in; three consecutive years with high tax increases; we had the lowest bond rating in America; with five months to go in that particular fiscal year, there was a projected deficit of $800 million, I thought to myself, 'this is clearly an operation that is no longer necessary, one that we can't afford.'"

"I was sworn in on a Thursday and by Monday we had literally taken those walls down and replaced that whole operation with an automated teller machine which does not cost the taxpayers a dime. That became to us a symbol of what we wanted to do throughout our entire operation."

Malone said the Massachusetts Lottery has one of the lowest overheads in the country. "The national average for lotteries is that eight percent of their gross sales go to overhead. We now run our lottery on 2.3 percent of gross sales toward overhead."

"When you consider that we have $2.5 billion in sales, by saving that five percent, it does along way toward buying books or hiring teachers or hiring police officers or whatever other need is necessary at the city and town level."

Malone said the delivery of lottery products has also been streamlined.

"When we arrived, there were state employees who would deliver tickets to the 7,000 agents throughout the state. . . We put the routes out to bid with companies like UPS, Federal Express and others and the low bid didn't come in at the $2.5 million that it used to cost us. The bid came in at $600,000."

"Instead of taking 15 days from when agent number one used to get their tickets to agent number 7000 got theirs, we are now able to deliver those tickets in 24 hours. So the cost is dramatically lower and the service is dramatically better."

Those cost-cutting measures, Malone said, have created a "culture where the employees who work for you . . . get the message and they say, 'the way in which to be part of this team and be a successful part of this team is to find other ways to stretch a dollar.'"

Malone said public servants must find ways to save taxpayers' money while providing essential services. He noted a state employee proposed merging the state's two pension funds. At the moment, Massachusetts is the only state which has two separate pension funds serving the same beneficiaries.

"That means you have two staffs, two sets of lawyers, two sets of consultants, two sets of custodians. The bottom line is duplication leads to an extra $15 million being wasted," Malone said. "We put legislation on the table that would consolidate the two (funds), no downside in terms of performance, and it's been 18 months and we are making some progress in getting through the Legislature."

The treasurer noted the typical American family is seeing more than 40 percent of its household income is being "absorbed" by government.

"That wasn't the case a generation ago when I know my parents were able to put aside a little bit of something for their future and for their kid's future."

"Now we're in a situation where unless we reverse that trend the America dream that we've all felt was wonderful and unique to this country, may end up being in jeopardy."

Malone said cutting costs and streamlining government "doesn't necessarily mean you have to stop helping families and individuals meet their challenges. In fact I think it's just the opposite. Some of the programs we've created over the last four and half years have become national models."

For example, Malone noted the state has struck a deal with Fannie Mae whereby more than $300 million has been made available as downpayments for home mortgages.

The program allows households with annual income of up to $68,000 to put a five percent downpayment on a mortgage, instead of the standard 10 or 20 percent. It also enables households to pay up to 33 percent of their monthly income on a mortgage compared to the average 28 percent ceiling. Borrowers are not required to have two mortgage payments in the bank at the time of closing.

"Massachusetts families were able to purchase homes as a result of the program. It didn't cost the taxpayers one dime," the treasurer said.

Other examples Malone pointed out included:

- Venture capital program which invests $50 million in Massachusetts start-up and mature companies that want to grow.

- College savings program involving 68 Massachusetts colleges and universities. Essentially, the program allows participants to pre-pay college tuition at today's costs. "No matter what happens to the cost of that tuition, and it has been going up, college tuitions in general, at three times the rate of inflation. . . you've locked in to a college tuition," Malone said.

- School curriculum where children learn about "the ABC's of our economy" like mortgages, interest rates, profits, and balancing a checkbook. Since the program began 18 months ago, more than 40,000 children in over 200 school systems have opened up bank accounts in 100 participating banks, Malone said.

"When you consider the Japanese save seven times as much as we do on a per capita basis and the Germans save four and a half times as much as we do, we think this is a step in the right direction."

The final drive Friday night summed up what the green-as-grass North Quincy High School football team has to contend with this season: They played tough defensively but gave up two big plays leading to a 13-7 deficit late in the game.

With under a minute left to play, 160-pound Red Raiders center Joe McCarthy snapped the ball to a quarterback, J.R. Rendle, who, going into the game, had never taken a snap before. Throwing to a group of first-year varsity receivers, he moved the team to midfield but was unable to finish the job before time expired. Masters of the two-minute offense are not born overnight - particularly when the rest of the team is in the same boat experience-wise. Only two Red Raiders, fullback/linebacker Tim Zaniboni and tailback/defensive end Brian Walsh, started last season.

"Our inexperience hurt us," said North Quincy (0-1) coach Ken McPhee. "But we'll get better. We're young and our kids played hard and I'm proud of them."

The Raiders will strap the helmets on again Friday night at Veterans' Memorial Stadium at 7 p.m. as they host defending Old Colony League champion Falmouth. Last season the Clippers sailed past the Red Raiders, 27-8.

Against the Stoughton Black Knights (1-0), North Quincy's Walsh put his team up in the first quarter with a spectacular 38-yard reverse-field, broken tackles, run-to-daylight romp.

The powerfully built 5-foot-6-inch, 175-pound Walsh took a pitch and attempted to sweep around right end. Stoughton star of the game John Scibeck was about to tackle him for a 10-yard loss but Walsh quickly reversed direction. Aided by a series of solid blocks, including one by Rendle (the pro game would be so much better if quarterbacks threw blocks like they do in high school), Walsh was able to turn the corner around left end.

He then appeared caught in a midfield scrum, but somehow emerged from the pack on the opposite side and raced down the right sideline and in for the touchdown. The run, which covered about 100 yards, capped a five-play, 72-yard march and was the highlight of Walsh's 24-carry, 136-yard effort.

Jim Finn, whose stellar punting would keep the Raiders in position to win the game, kicked the extra point.

The Black Knights answered midway through the second quarter with an eight-play, 65-yard drive. The bulk of the yardage came on a 46-yard Alex Tarpey-to-Scibeck pass which put the ball on the North Quincy 12 yard line. Fullback John Pires, moved to tailback on the scoring play, capped the drive with a 2-yard plunge. The extra point tied the game at 7-7.

With six minutes left in the fourth quarter, Scibeck broke an off-tackle play and went on a 70-yard scoring scamper to ice the contest.

"I thought we played well defensively," said McPhee. "They beat us on two long scoring plays and that was the difference in the ball game."

The North defense did fare well against the large and experienced Stoughton line. The Black Knights returned all five starters to their offensive line this season. They managed to run up 255 yards of offense, but nearly half of those came on Scibeck's two long plays.

Junior defensive end Charlie Plaskasovitis led the Red Raiders defense. He single-handedly killed a Stoughton drive in the first half with consecutive tackles in the backfield which accounted for a loss of 10 yards.

Late in the third quarter, Plaskasovitis blocked a punt deep in Black Knights territory, allowing his team to take over on the Stoughton 26. Three running plays put the ball on the 10, but the drive fizzled after a penalty and two incomplete passes. Finn attempted a 27-yard field goal but missed under a heavy rush.

The Raiders hoped to spring Walsh on another big play on their next to last drive in the fourth quarter. Starting on their own 21, North used nine straight running plays, eight by Walsh and one 6-yard gain by Sean Johnson, to move the ball to the Stoughton 37.

Facing a fourth and 15, Rendle threw a short pass to Tom Coughlin who lateraled to Walsh. The play picked up 9 yards and the ball changed hands.

Matt Kietly, who had a strong game offensively and defensively, helped the Raiders get the ball back for one last drive when he slammed Scibeck out of bounds shy of the first down, forcing Stoughton to punt.

Quincy Blanked By East Bridgewater

The Quincy High School coaching staff knew there would be growing pains this season, and Saturday's first game against powerful East Bridgewater proved to be an example.

The Vikings went 60 yards for a touchdown on the first play from scrimmage and never looked back, beating the Presidents, 34-0.

The game certainly provided a contrast in teams. East Bridgewater (1-0) boasted a grizzled veteran group which last year went to the Div. 4 Super Bowl and this year is likely to go undefeated. Quincy (0-1) put on the field a young, talented crew, but one with only a fraction of the varsity experience as its counterpart in this battle.

Things do not get any easier for the first-time Presidents. Saturday afternoon they hit the road for a 1:30 kickoff at Bridgewater-Raynham. Quincy has yet to win a game against the Old Colony League opponent. In each of the last two years, Quincy held early leads against the Trojans, but was unable to hold them.

"B-R has a quick, tough team," said Quincy coach Peter Chella. "They have a young quarterback and a young line, but a very good tailback.

"I don't think they're quite the caliber of East Bridgewater, but they will be a very formidable foe."

The Trojans opened the season with a 13-7 win over Woonsocket.

In the Quincy game versus East Bridgewater, the long touchdown run which opened the contest was as much a psychological blow as a physical one to the Presidents.

"We were hoping we could hold them the first series and keep their running game in check," said Chella, for whom this was his first-ever game as a head coach. "With youngsters like we have it's easy to lose composure. I was concerned about us getting into a position like that. Once they scored two touchdowns, we were back on our heels."

The powerful Vikings ground attack would strike for another touchdown late in the first quarter when Matt Keegan, who scored the first TD and added the two-point conversion, crashed in from 8 yards away. The Presidents stuffed the second two-point conversion try.

A 45-yard run by Kevin Connolly and a 30-yard reception by John McLaughlin would put East Bridgewater up, 27-0, at the half.

The Presidents mounted two potential scoring drives, but were unable to finish them off. Midway through the second quarter, Mark Glynn connected on short passes to wide receivers Eric Nunez and Mike Sheffer, and ran for 10 yards on a fourth and inches play, to keep alive a Quincy drive that began on its own 23. They marched inside the Vikings 30, but an interception at the 10 yard line ended the threat.

In the fourth quarter, Quincy churned out a five-plus minute drive highlighted by Sheffer's drive-sustaining 10-yard reception. But again the Vikings defense, which knew the Presidents had to throw, came up with an interception at the 10 yard line.

East Bridgewater would close the scoring with a 21-yard touchdown run by Will Harden early in the fourth quarter.

"Defensively, we've got to start hitting people," said Chella. "They didn't do a thing we didn't expect. (Defensive coordinator) Bob Keuther did a great job. We were in position to make the plays, we just didn't do it. The rudiments are there for a good football team."

"I suppose most of the kids had first-start jitters."

Cross-Country

Presidents Sweep Taunton In Opener

The Quincy High School girls and boys cross country teams opened the season Friday with wins over Taunton.

The Quincy girls, expected to be among the class of the Old Colony League, topped the Tigers, 17-38. The boys team, which should also be improved, won, 21-34.

Senior Liz Sawan, sophomore Julie Dunn and junior Kathryn Lencki gave the Presidents girls a sweep of the top three spots. Junior Erin Flaherty and senior Maryann Ashworth placed fifth and sixth, respectively, to close out the Quincy scoring. Erin Djerf also ran well.

It was an impressive beginning to what should be a strong season for the girls cross country team, which is captained by Sawan and Ashworth.

"The girls are looking to have a good season," said Presidents coach John Franceschini. "We were picked with Falmouth as the teams to beat in the OCL coaches poll."

Quincy was scheduled to take on Weymouth this past Tuesday and will travel to the Cape to face that strong Falmouth club on Wednesday, Sept. 27.

The Presidents will get a boost with the return of senior Suzanne Civitarese and promising freshman Lisa Barrett and Rachel Picard, each of whom were unable to run in the opening meet.

"Depth and quality of that depth" are the factors that have helped lift the Quincy girls from the bottom of the Old Colony League pack in recent years, according to Franceschini.

"In previous years our talent level dropped off considerably after our top three runners," he said.

This season Sawan, Dunn and Lencki should regularly place among the elite runners, with Flaherty, Ashworth, Djerf and Civitarese shoring up the spots that in past seasons would have provided points for the opposition.

The boys managed to win despite being without the services of the graduated Jim Lencki, who this year is running for Merrimack College on a cross country scholarship.

Quincy claimed the top two spots against Taunton thanks to the work of junior Matt Langille and senior co-captain Hubert Lam.

Freshman John Sorensen captured the fourth spot, sophomore Chris Haidul placed sixth, and senior co-captain John Duffy finished eighth.

"We've got the type of team you could call a pack," said Franceschini of the boys squad. "There's no one clearly above the rest like Lencki was last year."

The coach expects Lam, Langille and Sorensen to be his most consistent runners. The Presidents should also receive strong contributions from sophomore Henry Wan, senior Jed Donnelly, junior Fred Plett and freshman Sean Sperber.

"We're ecstatic that we did so well," said Franceschini. "The boys league in particular will be strong, but we're very inspired by what has happened so far."

Quincy Youth Soccer

Rain Dampens Schedule

Sunday's heavy downpour led to the cancellation of the majority of games in the Quincy Youth Soccer League. Only Saturday's under 14 games were played.

Alexis Miranda sparked the winning effort by scoring one goal and assisting on tallies by Kelley Linane and Rebecca Favorito. Katie McEvoy also handed out an assist. Elise Bowes, Roisin Callanan and Jacqueline Murphy played well.

Laetitia Lutts scored of an assist by Jennifer Conley for Ink Spot. Giving solid efforts were Marianne Casper, Lynda Wilson and Katelyn McEvoy.

Elks of Quincy tied That's Italian, 2-2.

Lauren Enos and Caitlin Golden tallied for Elks. They were set up by Amy Satkevich and Lauren Enos. Heather Renken, Julia Matos and Morgan Peterson played well.

Caitlyn O'Donnell and Amy Papile netted the That's Italian goals. Tanya Higgins, Kathryn Gates and Casey Ridge looked sharp.

Della Barba, CPA battled to a 2-2 deadlock with DeWare Funeral Home.

Katie Kelly and Stephanie Queripel scored for Della Barba. They were both assisted by Jill Nicholson. Janet Yankun, Kristin Lee and Colleen Lahar played well.

Boys Under 14:

Labor Guild picked up past BFI, 8-4, thanks to Mike Campanale's three-goal effort.

Chris Roach, P.J. Leth, Joey Flynn, Billy O'Brien and Paul Burke also scored for the winning club.

Roach and Burke handed out two assists each while single assists were made by Flynn, Campanale, Terrance Doherty, Matt Penella and Ryan Graeber. Mark Dunn, Tim Braca and Graeber played outstanding games.

Brian Desherl did all he could for BFI, scoring three goals and assisting on Joe Torrey's tally. Torrey aided Desherl on a goal. Gregg Walsh, Tim Lombard and Davy Kusy played well.

Atty. George Burke played to a 4-4 tie with AFSCME.

Billy Miller led Burke with a hat trick. Paul Griffith netted one goal. Assists were booted by Steve Marinilli, Jay Grazioso, John Lupio and Sean Owens. Kevin Shea and goalie Matt Joyce gave superb efforts.

Goalkeeper Paul Wise did the near impossible, going from one end of the field to the other to score for AFSCME. Aamir Moin, Louis Goldstein and Dan Cabral also tallied. Assists were made by Matt Miller and Cabral.

Steve Rochon scored all three goals as Holmann Oil spilled past Citizens Bank, 3-0.

Matt Petit and Paul Cremen picked up assists. Petit, Derek Kelly and keeper Paul Skarzenski looked sharp.

Shaun Jafarzadeh, Kris Farr and Kevin Weeks paced the Citizens effort.

Youth Football

Manets, Elks Win

The Quincy Youth Football League season opened in grand fashion last weekend as the Houghs Neck Manets fended off a last-ditch effort by the Quincy Point Panthers to post a 6-2 win.

Manets quarterback Dan Kelly scored the game's only touchdown when he busted through on a sneak. His club took an intentional safety late in the game, but the strategy almost backfired. With time running out, Panthers QB Marc Robertson switched to receiver and strong-armed halfback Didier Alther moved to quarterback.

Alther heaved three balls into the end zone, the final one which glanced off Robertson's fingertips as time expired.

The Manets were led offensively by Kelly, tight end Mike Chenette and running back Justin Curran. Defensively, John Santos and Mike Feeley were the stoppers.

Panthers Jason Bennett, Brendan Donaghue, Josh McLaughlin and Larry and Keith Antonellis played tough ball games.

In the opening day's other contest, the West Quincy Elks marched past the North Quincy Apaches, 44-0.

Last season the Apaches went through the entire regular season without being scored upon.

Emerging Elks star halfback Jason Oriola led the onslaught with three touchdowns. Ryan Sparrow ran in two reverses for scores. Quarterback Matt Gardner scored one TD and one two-point conversion, while Mike Turner punched in three two-point plays.

James Shea led the winning defense and Chris Lunaghini made an impressive interception to squash an Apaches drive.

Rain this past Sunday led to the cancellation of the Week 2 slate of games.

Race Raises $15,000 For Charities 1,300 Brave Heavy Rain To Honor Degan

The third annual William F. Degan Road Race proved yet another success for organizers who hope to keep alive the memory of the fallen member of the U.S. Marshall Service and Quincy resident.

"The reason why we do this race is so that Bill will not be forgotten here in Quincy," said Rick Fitzpatrick, a race organizer and Degan's brother-in-law. "We hope to do this for another 100 years."

Close to 1,300 runners braved a torrential downpour to take part Sunday, including law enforcement officials from around the country. They were able to raise $15,000 for charities such as Quincy DARE and USMC Charities.

"This is something I'm involved in because Bill was a part of my family," said Fitzpatrick. "It's good to see that the rest of the community feels as strongly as we do; that Bill died for his country doing his job."

Fittingly, a Quincy man, Steve Sousa, and a Quincy woman, Tracy Corrigan, took top honors in the 10K division of the Degan Road Race.

Carlin Kiera of Quincy and Sean Dillon of West Roxbury placed second and third in the Men's 10K division.

Rounding out the women's top three were Rebecca Carazza of Hopkinton and Janet Moakley of South Boston.

In the Men's 5K race, State Police officer Mike Drummy of Andover took top honors. Chris Sarno of Medford and Kevin McCue of Quincy placed second and third, respectively.

In the Women's 5K race, Gayle Laing of Braintree finished first. Two Quincy residents, Lynn Freedman and Erin Flaherty, rounded out the top three.

"Everyone was there for the same reason," said race organizer Dan Stock. "Not because of U.S. Marshall Degan or Lt. Col (USMC) Degan, but because of Bill Degan the guy from Quincy with two kids."

"His real friends know what kind of guy he was."

THEY'RE OFF—Some of the 1,300 runners participating in the third annual Bill Degan Memorial Road Race leave the starting line on Southern Artery. The race, sponsored by Citizens Bank, raised $15,000 for the Quincy DARE program, the Marine Corps' Toys for Tots program, and the city's police and emergency management departments.

Surprising North Girls Knock Out Boxers

After starting off 2-0, the North Quincy High School girls soccer team fell to two Cape teams, Falmouth and Barnstable, only to rebound with a convincing win over Brockton.

The Red Raiders were scheduled to play a big game at home against Holbrook yesterday (Wednesday) at 3:30. They travel to Weymouth Tuesday, Sept. 26 for a 5 p.m. game.

The Red Raiders (3-2) knocked out the Boxers, 6-1.

North's Kristen Kelly put her team on the board at 12:46 when she took a Hillary O'Donoghue pass and scored from 10 yards out. It became a 2-0 game when freshman forward Dorothy Cronin notched her first varsity goal by converting a Kristen Keohane cross.

Kelley netted her second goal of the game and fourth goal of the year after Liz Fitzpatrick fed her from 35 yards out. Kelley beat the Brockton defenders, scoring at 8:50. Fifty seconds later, freshman Betsy Stone scored thanks to a cross from Laurie Flynn.

The rolling Stone got her second of the game and third of the year by taking a Sara Mulvey assist and drilling a low hard shot to the far post.

O'Donoghue closed the Red Raiders scoring ledger at 16:15 when her corner kick hooked in, fooling the Brockton keeper.

"The girls responded well after our lackluster effort at Falmouth," said NQ coach Paul Bregoli.

North goalie Lisa Bragg, who was rarely tested, lost her shutout when April Dingwell's direct kick from 30 yards away found the net.

Seeing a lot of time and playing well were Laura Shea, whose clear saved a sure goal in the second half, Ann Parisi, who showed lots of hustle at left wing, Mulvey, who made several outstanding defensive plays, and Kelly Wigmore, who had several chances in the second half.

Falmouth had their way with North Quincy, 8-0.

The Clippers outplayed the Raiders in every phase of the game. However, several individuals turned in fine performances for North, including freshman Rachael Powers, sophomore Jocelyn West and seniors Kelly Keegan and Jessie Ceurvels.

North drew a gut-wrenching 1-0 decision at home against Barnstable, despite dominating play for the entire first half.

A failure to convert on five or six scoring opportunities (sounds like a certain professional football team from these parts) led to the loss.

"We totally outplayed Barnstable and should have beaten them easily," said Bregoli. "I was pleased with the total team effort and the level of intensity."

Stone, Flynn, Shea and senior Annie Bergen had the best chances, but the Barnstable keeper turned each shot aside.

A defensive breakdown 1:26 into the second half resulted in the game's lone goal.

North Quincy's best scoring chances in the second half came off the feet of Bergen, whose low hard shot was deflected wide, and Stone, who just missed getting to a ball in a scramble out front.

Playing well for the Raiders was the midfield trio of O'Donoghue, Ceurvels and Fitzpatrick.

OCTANE RATINGS EXPLAINED

The octane number (referred to as the anti-knock index) that drivers see on the pump is an average of two octane rating methods. Both methods involve the comparison between the tested fuel and a special reference fuel (isooctane), which has an octane rating of 100. If the tested fuel has 90% of the knock resistance of isooctane, it has a 90 octane rating. Now, let us return to the two octane rating methods — motor octane and research octane. The former more closely reflects a fuel's performance under high-speed, high-temperature conditions, and part-time throttle use, while the latter predicts relative performance under low-speed, mild knocking conditions. The research method typically yields results 6-10 points higher than the motor method. Thus, the two ratings are average.

Sports Spotlight

By KERRY BYRNE

It promised to be a big weekend for the local football faithful, the pigskin purveyors, the gallery gods of the gridiron.

Instead, it became a football flop, a pigskin pounding, a gridiron gaffe.

Yup, the four local teams, North Quincy High, Quincy High, Boston College and New England Patriots, combined for the big O-for this weekend. The big O-for is a rare feat which occurs only when Mars is in retrograde and Orion the Hunter appears to slay Andromeda while hoisting a mighty flagon of mead.

I, your humble football servant, who brazenly suggested that all four would win last week in a column that never got printed because certain editors and publishers suggested I had a slight case of dementia for picking the Pats over 49ers, was perhaps the only person on Earth to be at three of the four. (My flight to the City by the Bay Sunday was cancelled when someone called the airline to say that a crazed lunatic, known only as the Football Guy and believed to be traveling with nothing more than a toothbrush, the clothes on his back and a very bad football card, would be on the flight, and would probably attempt to cop a cheap feel off some unsuspecting stewardess.)

Anyway, back to my point, and I do have one. Friday I witnessed a good ball game, but one that didn't go quite the way we had hoped as NQ lost 13-7. The brightest spot: Red Raiders tailback Brian (Muskie) Walsh kept people on the edge of their seats. He's a touchdown waiting to happen.

Saturday was a bit more tough to take. Quincy High? 34-0. Ouch. But I'm sure that the young lads, under the able leadership of Pete Chella, will provide plenty of excitement as the season progresses.

Saturday night things did not get any better, as the beloved Boston College Eagles showed the firepower of a water gun in losing 23-13 to Michigan on national television. The Big 11, as it shall now be deemed by me in all football-related matters, looks virtually unbeatable this year.

Which brings me to my football suggestion of the week: Anyone looking to find out what the college game is all about should make the trip to Happy Valley, Pa., on Nov. 18 for the Michigan-Penn State donnybrook which could decide the Big 11 Rose Bowl representative and quite possibly destroy once again any chance we have of seeing a legitimate national title game. The Nittany Mountains, Central PA, mid-November - When the gods created college football, marching bands, cheerleaders, Samuel Adams beer, RV's, Bronko Nagurski and 96,000-seat stadiums, this is what they had in mind.

Again, I digress. On to the Sunday debacle as Drew Bledsoe was beat like a pinata in a 28-3 loss to the 49ers. Ouch Ouch. After they reattach all the parts, he should be OK. But, still, the Patriots have about as much chance of scoring in the red zone as I do at a convention of Victoria's Secret models. Both would be nice, but aren't about to happen.

I'll leave you with my football question of the day: Did anyone else stay up to 2 in the morning last week watching Knot Rockne: All American on some pathetic second-rate cable channel? Or am I the only one who can appreciate such a movie despite the fact it features the worst acting this side of Plan 9 From Outer Space?

Ronald Reagan as legendary Notre Dame star George Gipp? Ouch Ouch Ouch. Remember how he played up that role when President, smiling to hide the fact that his government was, at any given time, engaging in murderous activities in small nations across the globe? Well, his performance was worse the first time around.

Jim Lencki, 1995 graduate of Quincy High School, is on a cross country scholarship at Merrimack College this year.

The freshman began his career with the Warriors this past weekend at the Bryant College Invitational in Smithfield, R.I.

Chris Cunio returned to the Merrimack College men's soccer team this past weekend.

It should be a strong season for the senior and his teammates as the Warriors return 16 lettermen to a team that won a school-record 16 games last year.

Two young Quincy men are again leading the defense for the Mass. Maritime Academy football team.

In a 16-13 win over Nichols College, senior Jon Columbus had nine tackles and senior Chris McCallum added five as MMA held Nichols to 37 yards rushing on 31 attempts.

Junior Brian Fitzgerald of Quincy is leading the Nichols College men's soccer team in points through six games this season.

First Time In 20 Years Sheets Makes History With 2nd Straight 'No New Taxes' Proposal

By MICHAEL WHALEN

For the first time in 20 years, a Quincy mayor has called for no increase in property taxes for two consecutive fiscal years.

Mayor James Sheets' announcement last Friday is a historical one, according to city officials.

Marion Fantuccio, chairman of the Quincy Board of Assessors, said the last time the city had no property tax increase two consecutive times was in Fiscal Years 1975 and 1976.

Fantuccio said it has happened only twice before in the city's history: four straight years in 1943, 1944, 1945 and 1946 and back-to-back years in 1955 and 1956.

City Auditor Bob Foy said a strong fiscal year that resulted in a cash surplus of $5.7 million for the city has helped make it possible to hold the line on property taxes.

"Everything this year was a plus," said Foy.

Sheets said he is "beyond thrilled" about the chance to once again keep taxes down.

"It really helps our seniors and our families and our businesses," he said. "We are in very sound financial condition."

Foy and the mayor both credited a number of factors for this year's surplus. They said department heads and employees made sound decisions on employee health insurance and other city expenses that saved money, the city took in more automobile excise taxes, building and license fees than the previous year and the more stable economy has made it possible for delinquent property taxpayers to settle up with the city.

Sheets first announced it was possible there might not be a tax increase this year in the June 15 issue of The Quincy Sun, although he also said at the time that a small tax increase may be necessary.

Last week, however, city officials learned that the city ended Fiscal Year 1995, which ended June 30, with a $5.7 million cash surplus, an amount $2 million higher than last year's surplus. Officials received the word Friday from the state Department of Revenue, which certified the year-end balance.

The mayor said he plans to use some of the $5.7 million to hold the line on property taxes and another $1 million for a "stabilization fund" which will be used mainly to offset possible sewer rate increases.

In addition, Sheets plans to spend some of the money for city improvements. Among his proposed expenditures are:

- $250,000 for new police radios.
- $250,000 for new fire-fighter protective gear.
- $200,000 to open school gymnasiums four nights a week to provide supervised activities for Quincy youth.
- $150,000 for police foot patrols which will be utilized eight hours a night at Brewers Corner on the city's southwest side of the city and on Washington Street in Quincy Point.
- $150,000 for professional development for teachers who will be using new computer laboratories this year.

"When we learned about the surplus, we wanted to try and give back as much to the people as we could," said the mayor.

Sheets' proposed expenditures must be approved by the City Council before the money can be used for those purposes.

The mayor's "no new tax" proposal last year actually called for a one-cent increase in residential property taxes—from $14.57 (per $1,000) the previous year to $14.58—but no increase in the commercial, industrial and personal property (CIPP) rate, which remained at $30.58.

The one-cent residential increase resulted in a minimal increase of $3 on the average Quincy homeowners' tax bill. The previous year, the increase was $154.

Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers said he is glad Sheets asked for the appropriation, adding that the building has never looked better.

"The Parker School really looks fantastic," he said.

McCauley Urges 'Go Slow' Approach To Proposed Point Elementary School

Former Mayor Francis McCauley is urging city officials to take a "go slow" approach to the elementary school proposed for Quincy Point.

School Committee Vice Chairman Daniel Raymond and School Committee Ronald Mariano have recommended that a school be built on an 1.8-acre site at Cleverly Court and South St., across from the Fore River Shipyard.

The new school, they said, would alleviate overcrowding at the Sterling Middle School by having some students there shifted to the Point-Webster School and students from the latter to the new school.

The Raymond-Mariano proposal has received backing from parents of the Sterling and Point-Webster Schools and initial support from Mayor James Sheets.

But McCauley, who is running unopposed for the two-year term on the School Committee, says he has concerns about the proposal.

In a communication to Mayor Sheets, City Council President Michael Cheney, School Supt. Eugene Creedon and Raymond, he said:

"In recent weeks, I have followed with much interest and some concern a proposal by two school committee members to build an elementary school in the Quincy Point area."

"While school enrollments have been increasing over the past several years, a thorough study of the school enrollment situation should be completed before a final decision is made to build a multi-million dollar school facility."

"A number of questions come to mind, among them:

"What will it cost to build a new facility?"

"What will the total cost including debt service be?"

"Where are school enrollments heading in the next several years?"

"What, if any, are the alternatives to the construction of a new school?"

"Are potential sites near the Fore River Shipyard free of contamination?"

"Given the importance of this decision, a 'go slow' approach is urged," McCauley said.

Weymouth Co. Seeks To Build Recycling Center At Shipyard

North Shore Recycling Fibers of East Weymouth is hoping to develop a regional recycling center at the Fore River shipyard in Quincy Point.

The company, drawn by the shipyard's railroad link, wants to relocate in a 3.5-acre parcel in the shipyard and to bid on Quincy's recycling contract, according to City Council President Michael Cheney.

Cheney, who called the offer "a good proposal for the city," said in return for Quincy's help in obtaining a spot at the shipyard, the company has offered to buy for the city four recycling trucks and institute recycling in senior citizens' housing as well as apartment buildings and condominiums.

Cheney has been critical of Quincy's current contract with Browning-Ferris Industries and has begun talks with officials of North Shore Recycling Fibers.

The proposal for the recycling center, however, faces several hurdles.

The shipyard is owned by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority which is currently working on a deal to sell most of the shipyard to a company that plans to build barges and tankers at the site. MWRA officials said that $10 million deal currently takes priority but did not rule out the possibility of a recycling center at the shipyard.

Cheney said he thinks there is enough room for both projects at the 180-acre shipyard.

Mayor James Sheets said he will give the recycling center proposal "serious consideration" but is concerned about environmental hazards at the site.

Cheney, however, said since the shipyard can only be used for industrial purposes, there will always be environmental concerns there.

The recycling center proposal also needs the approval of the City Council and Planning Board. Public hearings also need to be held before the proposal can become a reality.

Parker School To Receive $72,000 For Repaving, Sidewalk Renovations

The Parker School will receive $72,000 for the repaving of its playground and parking areas and renovations to its sidewalks.

The City Council appropriated the money for the work Monday night. The cost will be charged to the revenue of Fiscal Year 1996.

Michael McFarland, executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets, said the mayor wanted the improvements made to complement recently-completed renovations at

$5,000 Donated For Fire Dept. Defibrillator

Only one of the city's eight fire stations is now without a defibrillator.

The City Council Monday night accepted a gift of $5,000 from Frances George of Quincy to purchase a defibrillator for the city's Central Fire Station in Quincy Center.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said Mrs. George donated the money in memory of her late husband, George E. George.

"My heart goes out to her for being so generous," said Gorman, who added that Mrs. George is the first individual to donate a defibrillator to the department. Other fire stations in Quincy have received defibrillators donated by companies, he noted.

Gorman said the department's North Quincy Station is the only one in the city currently without a defibrillator and he is hopeful one will be obtained in the near future.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

At this time of the year, most people's thoughts turn to the coming change in the season, and the beginning of school. Kids of all ages will be standing, walking, running and in all ways populating the streets. . . so, let us all take a little more caution when driving. . . But we'd like to take this thought beyond the basic "School's opening, drive safely" theme, to include some other hopes for the coming school year.

We hope that all teachers, administrators and students approach the new school year with a zest for teaching and learning, to provide the best education that is possible. And we would like to see all the parents of school children examine their own ideas and behavior to make a positive commitment to help in the education of their own kids. . . Too often, people criticize the schools, the teachers, the administrators and the kids for what some people feel is a general malaise among our youth. When, in fact, a lot of the blame for this malaise starts and grows in the home. . .

Let us remember that schools, teachers and parents working together can mold young minds and head them in a positive direction.

$20,000 Appropriated For Cable Contract Negotiation

The City Council Monday night appropriated $20,000 to hire a legal firm to negotiate a new contract with Continental Cablevision, which provides cable television service to the city. The money will be charged to the revenue of Fiscal Year 1996.

City Solicitor Stephen McGrath said his department negotiates most contracts on behalf of the city but that cable contracts are a specialized area in which the firm in question, Horton and August of Boston, have a strong expertise and successful reputation.

McGrath said his department will be aware of the negotiations as they proceed.

He also noted that the city's current contract with Continental was signed in 1981 and expires in July of next year.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

Holy Spirit, you who gives meaning to and shines light on my path so that I may reach my goals, you who gives me the divine grace to forgive and forget the evil done unto me and which is with me at every moment of my life. I want in this short dialogue to reassure you one more time that I do not ever want to be separated from you, no matter how grand the worldly possessions may be, my desire is to be with you and my brothers in perpetual glory will not be lessened. (One should say this prayer 3 days in a row without mentioning the request, within 3 days the divine favor shall be granted, no matter how unobtainable it seemed.) Publish this prayer as soon as your request is granted.

Stice Family Commission Director

By MICHAEL WHALEN

School Committeewoman Linda Stice has been named executive director of Mayor James Sheets' Quincy Commission on the Family.

Stice, 46, will be introduced in that capacity during a joint meeting of the 17-member commission and its 22-member advisory board, the Family Council, Thursday, Sept. 28 at the commission's temporary headquarters at the Senior Drop-In Center, High School Avenue, Quincy Center.

Sheets, in making the announcement this week, said he thinks Stice is a good selection for the position.

"I think she'll do a fine job," he said. "It's a part-time position, but knowing Linda Stice, she'll be involved a lot more than that."

Stice said she was thrilled to receive the news and added that she knows of no other community that has an organization such as the Quincy Commission on the Family, which is designed to help needy Quincy families by providing them with a database of information about education, health, domestic violence, recreation and drug-related problems.

"I think that this is an incredible idea that the mayor proposed to the city," she said. "It's work worth doing. It's probably the most exciting job I've ever had."

Stice, who holds degrees in psychology and elementary education, is a graduate of Harvard University, the University of Florida and the University of Wisconsin. She said the family is "the most powerful societal institution that human beings have," adding that she looks forward to working to combat problems that tear families apart.

Stice said she first plans to research whether other organizations such as the Family Commission do in fact exist in other communities throughout the country. If they do, she will study them to see how they are operated.

She added that she will then begin implementing some of the many plans Sheets has devised for the commission, including a service directory for families, a citywide family survey, information/hot line, and others.

Stice was selected for the position from among four finalists by a panel that includes Quincy Personnel Director Kathleen Yaeger, Michael McFarland, Sheets' executive secretary and Park, Forestry and Cemetery Department Executive Director Thomas Koch. The panel sent their recommendation to Sheets.

The mayor said that prior to that panel's recommendation, a previous group consisting of Planning Director Richard Meade, chairman of the Commission on the Family; Family Council Chairman Martin Ervin and commission members Carol Neitlich and Sheila deBettencourt whittled down the original pool of 50 applicants to 10 and finally to four.

Sheets said Stice will receive an annual stipend of $22,000 as executive director. Her position will be funded by proceeds from the Quincy City Store, Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) and private monies, he added.

Assistant City Solicitor James Timmins has ruled that although Stice in her new capacity will be paid by the city—specifically, the Planning Department—there is no conflict of interest in her accepting the executive director's position.

Timmins, in a memorandum written to Sheets, noted that while municipal employees are generally prohibited from holding more than one paid position with their respective municipalities, members of the Quincy School Committee are by law considered "special municipal employees" who are exempted from the state's conflict of interest statute.

Stice, who noted that she has foregone full-time employment opportunities to devote her energies to the School Committee, said she would not accept the position on the commission if there were a conflict.

"I would not want to do any less in my role as a School Committee member," she said.

No Red Line This Weekend

MBTA Red Line Transportation and Construction Manager Fred Jones announces that Red Line trains in the City of Quincy will be shut down from Saturday at 5 a.m. to Monday, Oct. 2 at 4:30 a.m.

Jones said expansion joints on the Neponset River Bridge must be replaced, necessitating the shutdown. To compensate, he said, the MBTA will run 45 buses Saturday and 38 buses Sunday.

Buses will use the following route: From Braintree Station Busway to the Quincy Adams Busway, up Burghway to the rear of the Quincy Center Station, up Newport Ave. to the Wollaston Station, up Newport Ave. to the North Quincy Busway, from there to the JFK Station Busway in Dorchester where the Red Line may be boarded.

Jones said normal service will resume Monday, Oct. 2.

Curbside Leaf Collection Oct. 9

The city's six-week curbside leaf collection program will be held Monday, Oct. 9 through Friday, Nov. 17.

Department of Public Works Program Manager Michael Wheelwright said the program is being held earlier this year because of the hot, dry summer the region experienced.

"It's been a real dry and a real hot year," said Wheelwright. "There's an awful lot of leaves on the ground already."

Wheelwright said the city should collect between 3,000 and 4,000 tons of leaves this fall and about 2,000 tons during its collection next spring. Generally, the about 5,000 tons of leaves are collected every year, he noted.

Browning-Ferris Industries, which collects the leaves for the city, is paid $42 per ton to do so, Wheelwright noted. He added that the leaves are brought to the composting area behind the DPW Building at 55 Sea St., and while most of the compost goes to the city's sanitation landfill in West Quincy, the city takes some of it for donations to places such as the Long Island/Boston Harbor Nursery and Urban Gardens in Boston.

Residents should place leaves on the curbside with their rubbish and recyclables. Wheelwright said leaves can be placed in trash barrels, large paper bags or clear plastic bags.

"Trash barrels are the best, but they must be filled with leaves only," he said. "Paper is preferable to plastic because it's biodegradable."

Wheelwright added that the city has set aside a seventh week for leaf collection which will be used if necessary.

For more information about the program, call Wheelwright at 376-1901.

New President Screening Team Created Dec. 15 Date Set For QC Finalists

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy College Board of Governors has approved the composition of a 13-member screening team that will submit the names of three to five finalists for the permanent presidency of the college by Dec. 15.

The board approved the makeup of the screening committee Monday night.

Board Chairman Daniel Raymondi said he is more than satisfied with the fact that the board is moving so quickly to replace Quincy College Interim President Linda Wilson, who recently announced she will not seek an extension of her one-year contract which expires Jan. 1.

"I was very pleased with the process that was developed by the board," said Raymondi. "I think the board responded very appropriately and professionally to the situation."

Raymondi said the formula chosen for the screening committee is the best one possible because it is representative of all constituencies of the two-year college, which has campuses in Quincy and Plymouth.

The committee will consist of five members of the Board of Governors, three members of the contract faculty, one member of the professional staff, one member of the senior staff, one student, one member of the Plymouth Campus Council, a non-partisan group that advises the administration at the Plymouth Campus and one community member.

Raymondi said each constituency will be allowed to submit a certain number of names of people it believes are willing and qualified to serve on the screening team. By a vote of the full board, Raymondi added, he will choose the members of the screening team from those lists.

For example, Raymondi will choose three names from a list of six submitted by the faculty union.

RETIRED QUINCY Fire Captain Frank Lyons of Quincy recently caught a 47 and a half-inch striped bass fishing off his summer residence in Rocky Nook, Kingston. He went fishing with his son, Tom Lyons, also a Quincy Fire captain and his great-grandchildren, Bill Burchill, age 2, and Caitlin Burchill, 5.

Irish Restaurant/Pub Approved

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A new Irish restaurant/pub will soon replace Barnaby's restaurant in Quincy Center.

The Quincy License Board Tuesday granted a request from T.C.B.C. Inc., which does business as Barnaby's to transfer all of its licenses to Samthan Inc., which plans to open an Irish establishment to be called Bad Abbots Pub & Friery. The site is located at 1546 Rear Hancock St.

Atty. Joseph McParland told the board that his three clients, Ann, Peter and Lisa Kerr, plan to do substantial renovations at the establishment which will offer Irish food and entertainment. He also showed board members a graphic of the plan.

"It looks like it's going to be lovely," said Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue.

McParland said his clients want to maintain the same hours of operation at the site, which they will take over Oct. 15. They also plan to speak with the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association about their new business, he added.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey said he, Fire Chief Thomas Gorman and City Clerk Joseph Shea, the board chairman will meet with landlord Tony Politano to work out a few minor outstanding issues concerning the property. Among them, he noted, are the replacement of the sprinkler system and matters regarding the boiler and storage rooms and a cab stand at the site.

Mulvey said the board welcomes the new business but is somewhat saddened to see Bernard Sharpe and the other Barnaby's owners leave the area.

"They did a great job there," said Mulvey. "They're a class act."

National Night Out Program

QUINCY AND BOSTON officials recently got together at the Adams Inn in North Quincy to mark the first time Quincy has participated in the National Night Out program which is designed to prevent crime by strengthening ties between communities, emphasizing neighborhood involvement and preventing drug use among teenagers. School Committee Protests Federal Education Cuts

The Quincy School Committee has passed a resolve opposing cuts in federal education to the Quincy Public Schools.

Copies of the resolve were sent to Senator Arlen Specter, House Speaker Newt Gingrich and Congressman Robert Livingston.

Copies were also sent with thanks for their votes opposing education cuts to Senators Edward Kennedy and John Kerry and Congressman Gerry Studds.

The resolve follows: "Whereas, local public schools are facing the likelihood of deep, far-reaching cuts in critical federal education programs, and

"Whereas, recent polls show that, while a large majority of Americans favor balancing the budget, almost 80% oppose cutting educational programs to reduce federal spending, and

"Whereas, the federal budget needs to reflect the high value the American people place on education, and

"Whereas, the federal investment in the education of our children and youth is critical to the future competitiveness of the American economy, the education needs of disadvantaged children and the opportunities for all Americans, and

"Whereas, federal investments in education help to offset the costs of services to special needs students, and

"Whereas, severe cuts in education programming for school children across the country could put local districts and communities in the position either of raising local property taxes or cutting educational programs, and

"Whereas, Congress recently enacted deep cuts in FY 1995 spending for education and is currently debating the most devastating cut in the history of federal education funding in the appropriations for FY 1996.

"Therefore Be It Resolved that The Quincy School Committee of Quincy, Mass supports a strong federal investment in education and urges the U.S. Congress and President Clinton to reject cuts in the federal education budget and make federal investment in the education of the American children a priority in this Congress."

Burger King Restaurant To Address Litter Problems

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Burger King restaurant at Adams and Robertson streets has agreed to take care of a litter problem on its premises.

Manager Michael Wilbur met with members of the Quincy License Board to discuss the matter Tuesday. City Clerk Joseph Shea, the board chairman, noted that the meeting stemmed from a "small complaint" he received from Ward 3 City Councillor Lawrence Chretien who became aware of the problem after hearing from residents on Robertson Street.

Wilbur acknowledged that there is a small litter problem on the Robertson Street side of the restaurant property. He noted that the restaurant formerly had a rubbish barrel on the premises—although it does not now—and added that he ordered two trash receptacles last week that should arrive in the near future.

Wilbur said he is more than happy to cooperate with neighbors, although he added that the restaurant has not received any complaints from area residents.

Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue said her department also has not heard from anyone in the neighborhood.

"As far as I know, they [Burger King] have been cooperative as far as the litter is concerned," said Gallahue.

Board members agreed to place the matter on file.

Pool Hall License Granted For Former Shooter's Site

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy License Board has granted a request from a South Quincy businessman to open a new pool hall at 1585 Hancock St., the site of the old Shooter's Club in the Quincy Market Fair Mall.

George Pepdjonovic, who until recently owned a baseball card shop on Franklin Street for several years, told board members Tuesday he will run the new business, which is to be called The Eight Ball, with members of his family. The establishment, which will offer a smoke-free environment, will include 10 pool tables and soda and snack machines, he said.

Pepdjonovic added that he has spoken to the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and he is interested in taking an active role in the business district. He said he hopes to open the business on or around Nov. 15.

The board granted the requested hours of Monday through Thursday from noon to 11 p.m. and Friday through Sunday from noon to midnight with the stipulation that during school hours, no one age 16 or younger will be allowed to frequent the establishment.

"We don't want kids in there during that time," said Police Chief Francis Mullen.

Ayers, Bellotti To Speak At Beechwood Breakfast

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers and Rep. Michael Bellotti will speak at the 8 a.m. Current Events Breakfast at Beechwood on the Bay, Wednesday, Oct. 4.

Ayers' topic will be "Programs and Resources for Persons of Varying Abilities."

He will discuss the Equipment Exchange Program and demonstrate vehicles with lifts and other modifications.

Bellotti will discuss his efforts to pass Alzheimer's

Disease legislation which would create a central office of services. He will also discuss Quincy College course offerings for senior citizens and will hold office hours at Beechwood that day from 9 to 10 a.m.

More than 100 parents and residents attended the meeting voicing support for a proposed elementary school in Quincy Point. Ronald Mariano, Point Elementary Principal Phil Connolly, Supt. Eugene Creedon, School Committee Vice Chairman Daniel Raymondi, School Committeeman Sean Barry and Sterling Middle School Principal Richard Hutchison. Mariano and Raymondi have proposed construction of the new elementary school in Quincy Point. The plan will reduce overcrowding at Sterling. THE SECRET EPIDEMIC

What disease seriously affects five million American youths between 14 and 17, is disabling to at least ten million adults, and causes over 300 deaths a day in the U.S.? If you guessed alcoholism, count yourself in the minority of people who understand that alcohol is one of the greatest health threats in our country today. The reason for the "secret" may be that it is not always easy to tell when social drinking crosses the line to problem drinking. Here are some signs to watch for: regular heavy drinking, especially alone or in the morning; lost school or work time due to drinking; becoming angry when questioned about drinking; hiding alcohol or empty bottles; and unexplained weight loss, sleep problems or low energy.

P.S. Babies of alcoholic mothers may be born with fetal alcohol syndrome, which can cause serious mental and physical defects.

If a member of your family struggles with alcohol, don't suffer alone—see your doctor for help. For more information, visit COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, at 700 Congress St., in Quincy, or call me or Dr. Lisa Antonelli at 472-2550. Office hours by appointment. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. I am also board certified in cardiology and internal medicine.

The big political question this week:

Can Tom Fabrizio come back or does Michael D'Amico have too much momentum going for him to be overtaken?

Fabrizio, the incumbent, has some work to do if he is to catch D'Amico, the challenger, who stunned him in last week's preliminary election for the Ward 4 city council seat.

It's doable. But Fabrizio has some ifs, ands and buts to contend with while history might be in D'Amico's corner.

And speaking of history, D'Amico would be making some if he goes on to win Nov. 7. At age 20 he would be the youngest elected to the City Council.

(John Smith was elected in 1916 at 21 and seven months. Thomas Burgin was 22 when elected in 1924.) Let's take a look at what happened last week and what might—or might not—happen in November:

D'Amico topped Fabrizio by 180 votes—1,082 to 902—while carrying three of the five precincts.

Both took their home precincts but D'Amico fared better in his (Precinct 1), beating Fabrizio by 121 votes. Fabrizio carried his own Precinct 2 by only a 43-vote margin.

D'Amico took Precincts 4 and 15 by 19 and 90 votes while Fabrizio won Precinct 3 by only seven.

Gregg Rennie and Michael Larkin who placed third and fourth in the preliminary election could play key roles in what happens Nov. 7. Rennie got 248 votes and Larkin 114.

If you add their combined 362 votes to D'Amico's it means three challengers together polled 1,444 votes—or 542 more than what Fabrizio got.

But it doesn't necessarily mean those Rennie and Larkin votes would go over to D'Amico in November because if they weren't votes for Fabrizio, they weren't votes for D'Amico either.

Those votes could mean a lot in a close election in November. Who will get most of them?

D'Amico didn't endear himself to either Rennie or Larkin or their followers at candidates nights by making an issue of them not voting in an election. It could turn them and/or their followers to the Fabrizio camp.

Rennie, incidentally, has also known the Fabrizio family for a number of years. He was their paper boy. Fabrizio, it would seem, has a pretty good chance at picking up a Rennie endorsement.

History, however, may be holding D'Amico's hand. No one can remember a ward councillor losing in a preliminary election and then going on to win in the final election.

And five ward councillors have been defeated by

Sunbeams

By Henry Bosworth

challengers in elections since 1961.

William Ellis lost to Richard Barry in Ward 6 in 1961. Albert Barilaro was defeated by James Sheets in Ward 4 in 1973. And that same year in Ward 6, Vincent Smyth lost to Dennis Harrington. Warren Powers lost to Steve McGrath in Ward 5 in 1977. And Tom Nutley was defeated by Bruce Ayers in 1991.

The Barilaro-Sheets election might be of special interest to Ward 4 voters this year.

Barilaro had five challengers and was first in the preliminary election with 1,016 votes to runner-up Sheets' 744.

Sheets, making his first bid for office, came roaring back in the final to win 2,584 to 1,627.

That might not be too encouraging to Fabrizio who finished second as an incumbent in the preliminary and now faces an uphill battle in the final. But he might take heart from two-at-large elections when two incumbents looked like they were in serious trouble in the preliminary race but came up big winners in the final.

John Quinn went from fourth place to first in 1967 and George McDonald did the same thing in 1969.

DEPUTY FIRE CHIEF Joseph Walsh will be a candidate for the Republican Committeeman seat former Mayor Francis McCauley is vacating to devote his time to his new School Committee duties coming up in January. McCauley is unopposed for the two-year school term.

Walsh comes from a long-time Republican family. But now there is one staunch Democrat in it. His wife, Joann Condon Walsh, former Ward 6 city councillor and one-time mayoral candidate, is an active member of the Quincy Democratic City Committee.

Meanwhile, Denis Tardo, a member of the Quincy Board of Registrars is thinking of running for the seat. If, he says, there is no conflict with him being on the Registrars board.

AND IF YOU Democrats are wondering, Rep. Michael Bellotti is a definite candidate for re-election to the Democratic State Committeeman seat. Bellotti, incidentally, has been spending a lot of time in the state committee district and throughout the state helping Democrats running in special elections.

A FUNDRAISER FOR Steve Doherty, candidate for the Ward 3 city council seat, is set for Friday, Oct. 6, 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. at Maria's Restaurant at the Presidents Golf Club. Tickets, $15 per person and $25 per couple, are available by calling 472-3296 or may be obtained at the door.

Sample Boring Approved At Bird Sanctuary

The Quincy Conservation Commission will allow Continuum Care Corporation to take a sample boring from an area known as Squantum's unofficial bird sanctuary.

The company has said it needs to take the boring, as well as three others on a nearby lot, to prepare its plans for a sprawling housing for the elderly and health care complex in Marina Bay.

Bird lovers, including the Quincy Citizens and Wollaston Parks Associations, have expressed concerns that the boring would damage the sanctuary.

Conservation Commission Chairman Chris Carroll, however, has said a visit to the area earlier this month proved otherwise.

Carroll said the commission also has specified that Continuum Care has to give the city the results of the boring tests even if they show the land is not buildable.

The commission has yet to review any plans for the project, but Continuum Care has already applied for its special permit from the City Council which has scheduled a public hearing on the project for Nov. 13.

The project includes 120 units of elderly housing, an 80-unit facility for elderly who need assistance, a 132-bed nursing home, and a medical office building.

COURT HOUSE AND HIGH SCHOOL, QUINCY, MASS.

Street end of Coddington Street in Quincy Square looking toward the old Quincy District Court House, the Coddington School, (now Quincy College) and Quincy High School. A master plan developed by the city planning board in the 1920's called for lining both sides of this street with large public buildings all the way down to Sea Street with today's buildings were built in accordance with that plan. Not built though, was a large coliseum planned on what is now Faxon Field. The old court house was torn down in the 1980's and hopefully the site will soon become the location of a new downtown hotel.

Library Is More Than A Place To Get Books

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The Thomas Crane Public Library is more than a place to get books.

It is a place where "not quite ready for school" children come and sit in a circle during the story time with proud parents nearby. It's an exciting place where families gather at the child-size tables to share the picture adventures that unfold with each turn of the page. It's a busy place as teenagers crowd the computers, the reference room, and sit at long tables by their stacks of books in a last minute rush to complete research assignments. It is a quiet place where adults can reflect and read books, periodicals, or even consult the Wall Street Journal.

"Standing Room Only" is the rule for the many educational, entertaining and cultural enrichment programs sponsored by our staff and the Friends of the Library.

It's a place to get public forms and make copies. It's where cheerful, competent, professional and helpful service is provided by the staff, whether advice on best sellers, business market research or historical data.

It's a place for everyone, all ages, all groups, city wide.

In August of 1822, John Adams deeded a portion of his library to the town inhabitants and their successors. This was the forerunner of the public library system of Quincy. At a March town meeting in 1871, the citizens voted for the establishment of a town library.

Today, among Quincy treasures is an architectural gem: The Thomas Crane Public Library, designed by one of America's greatest architects, Henry Hobson Richardson. It's a place that makes Quincy residents proud, reflects our self-esteem and is the heart of our community. A visit to our library is not just a place to get a book; it's an emotional experience.

For many years it has been a fine library. It is now an excellent library. Now, this pride of Quincy Center and our citizens, needs expansion to better serve the community. With community support our Thomas Crane Public Library will be outstanding tomorrow.

We Are Their Only Hope

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Trophy hunters and trappers will take to the woods this fall to harass and kill wildlife.

For the first time in 22 years, leghold traps will be legal on land this fall because of a recent Supreme Judicial Court decision upholding a regulation permitting use of the padded leghold trap.

At the South Shore Humane Society's annual meeting Oct. 3, open to all, a representative from ProPAW (Protect Pets and Wildlife) will explain the initiative petition filed with the Massachusetts Attorney General in order to at last place a wildlife protection question before state voters on the 1996 ballot. The meeting will be held at the Thayer Public Library, 798 Washington St., Braintree, from 7 to 9 p.m.

Coordinated by ProPAW, the petition would prohibit cruel traps, end the chasing and hunting of bears and bobcats with dogs and would eliminate the statutory requirement that hunters and trappers control the Fish and Wildlife Board. The board now consists of seven members, appointed by the governor, five of whom must have held for at least five consecutive years a sporting license in the Commonwealth. It is appalling to know that the barbaric leghold traps can be legally set on your private land without your permission, putting children and pets at risk of harm or entrapment, and you do not have the right to remove or touch them!

Our population is comprised of at least 90 percent non-trappers or hunters. It's about time that our defense against cruelty to wildlife should come to the fore. We have voices; they do not.

The South Shore Humane Society urges you to come to the meeting Oct. 3, if but to sign or pick up a petition. We need to gather 65,000 certified voter signatures by Nov. 22, so time is of the essence. This could be the most significant victory for wildlife this century. We are their only hope. Let's defend them for a change!

Senior Housing Proposed For Houghs Neck

By PAUL HAROLD

A $2.6 million housing for the elderly complex was proposed for Houghs Neck this week, as announced by Quincy Housing Authority Chairman Dr. Peter Corea.

The six-story, 150-unit building would be built on land adjacent to the Houghs Neck Congregational Church by Peabody Construction. Corea called it an ideal site because it was close to churches, transportation, stores and library.

EARLY PAYMENTS SAVE CITY $100,000

In response to a plea from Mayor James McIntyre, taxpayers turned in more than $800,000 in early tax payments in only five days. As a result of these payments the city would not have to borrow in anticipation of revenues, thus saving $10,000 in interest charges.

Earlier in the year, City Treasurer David Houston had to borrow a record $1.5 million to keep the city operating until tax payments were received.

VARIANCE SOUGHT FOR SONS OF ITALY HALL

The Zoning Board of Appeals heard arguments in support and opposition for a variance for the proposed Sons of Italy Social Center at 104-108 Quarry St. Twenty-nine persons registered support, including five abutters. Atty. Paul Hunt, who represented the lodge, said the two parking areas would provide parking in excess to that required by law.

Opposition came from neighbors on Smith St. who expressed concern for additional traffic.

In other business, the ZBA considered a request by Robert Colman of Colman's Sporting Goods to tear down an unused commercial garage and a two-family house at 31-43 Mechanic St. to expand his store and provide for parking for 35 cars.

Bellotti Alzheimer Bill Gains House Passage

State Rep. Michael Bellotti announces that House Bill 3121, which he sponsored, has passed the House and is now in the Senate.

The bill, which would establish a state Office on Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders, should be voted on by the Senate this fall. The purpose of the office is to advise the governor and his administration on matters of policy, programs, services and other information affecting the more than 100,000 residents of Massachusetts with dementia-related illness.

"Presently, services to persons with Alzheimer's and their families are provided by a number of different agencies and are not well coordinated," said Bellotti. "Having an Alzheimer Office within state government will allow us to develop more effective and efficient ways to deliver needed services, and will help to leverage funds to pay for them."

Dan O'Leary, executive director of the Alzheimers Association of Eastern Mass. Inc., said, "We are very pleased with the House of Representatives who passed this bill. They should be commended for their swift action on this important piece of legislation."

Bellotti added, "An Office on Alzheimers Disease will help promote public education and awareness about dementia and will also go a long way in helping those families cope with the many challenges posed by this disease. I have heard from a number of Quincy families who strongly support this type of legislation."

Bellotti said he would continue to work to make this legislation law as quickly as possible.

John McDuff To Receive MSPCA Human Hero Award

John H. McDuff Jr., president of the Quincy Animal League, has been selected to receive the MSPCA/American Humane Education Society 1995 Human Hero of the Year Award.

Dr. Gus Thornton, MSPCA president, said the award is presented to a person who has "gone above and beyond the call of duty to save the life of, or significantly promote the welfare of, one or more animals."

The award will be presented at a banquet to be held at the Westin Hotel in Waltham Oct. 19.

McDuff organized the Quincy Animal League in 1982 to help repeal the Massachusetts Pound Seizure law. Following that successful effort, he worked to bring about the construction of a new city animal shelter and this year led the drive which resulted in the banning of performing circus animals in Quincy.

JOHN McDUFF, Jr.

When informed of his selection from over 50 nominees statewide, McDuff said:

"I feel this award belongs to all members of our league who have, over the years, worked to improve the lives of animals. Without our sticking together, none of these changes would have taken place. I am honored to be chosen for this award, and I will be accepting it on behalf of all the dedicated friends of animals in our city."

Spotlight On Business

Business Booming At 5-Month-Old Store Two-Sister Team Makes Ginger Betty's A Success

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Teamwork is a word that's taken to a new level at Ginger Betty's, 10 Tyler St., North Quincy.

The Quincy-born sisters who opened the store in April—Beth Veneto, 28, and Karen Veneto, 36—have taken an innovative pastry shop/bakery concept and turned it into a thriving, successful business. And they've done it virtually by themselves.

The store services non-profit organizations, businesses, special functions and events, and individuals. Among the items sold are unique gingerbread products, wedding cakes, gourmet cookies, breads, pies and more.

But the amazing thing about Ginger Betty's is not so much its considerable selection and or its enviable production. What really makes the business special is the fact that it's all done by two people.

"It's just us working here," said Beth.

"We do all of it," agreed Karen. "But we have had our family and some close friends help us out in a pinch."

The pair has received other help as well. Their business was one of the first graduates of the Retail Incubation Program offered through Quincy 2000, and they also received guidance from Don Rielly at the Boston College Small Business Development Center. The two programs offer courses and additional assistance for people opening new businesses.

Beth also credited their landlord Tom DiPesa, who owns Sam's Variety which is located in the same building at the corner of Tyler Street and Billings Road, with assisting in the renovations at their store.

But the driving force behind Ginger Betty's is the Veneto sisters, who had the background and the knowledge—as well as the courage—to turn their dream into a reality.

Karen graduated from Sacred Heart High School in Weymouth in 1977 and received an associate's degree after taking a post-graduate culinary course offered by Quincy Junior College in 1979 before furthering her studies in Minnesota and Chicago. She has worked as a pastry chef for major hotels in New York and Boston and has won several awards for her handiwork.

Beth, a 1985 graduate of Quincy High School, graduated from the New York Institute of Technology in Long Island with a degree in hotel and restaurant management in 1990. She worked briefly in New York before returning in 1991 to Massachusetts where she has worked for several local catering companies.

It was while she was still attending school in New York that Beth began making gingerbread houses in order to earn a little extra money. She said her sister taught her everything she knows about creating such delicacies.

"She's a great pastry chef," said Beth. "She's one of the best in the Boston area."

Karen said it was a little more than a year ago when her sister approached her with the Ginger Betty's concept. She noted that the "Betty's" half of the name was derived from Beth's nickname, Betty.

The pair decided that Karen would handle the majority of the baking while Beth would generally be in charge of the front-office work. After finding the available space they needed at 10 Tyler St. (with the help of DiPesa's sister Liz, with whom they are acquainted), they opened the store five months ago.

Since then, the business has taken off like a rocket. Ginger Betty's products are sold in a number of South Shore businesses, including several in Quincy: The Common Market, Handshakes Cafe, Pasta and Pizza, and Wanna Bagel.

Beth noted that the store's goods have also been sold at a number of outdoor festivals and events—including this summer's Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival—and will be available at others, including the upcoming North Quincy Sidewalk Fair scheduled for Sept. 30.

The store has also donated products to non-profit service organizations such as Father Bill's Place and DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended).

"We just like to help out whenever we can," said Beth. "I think the two of us would rather get recognition by doing something like that than some other way."

The store itself has become a favorite of local children. It features furniture painted in pinks, purples and other bright colors; a gingerbread house-shaped design built into one of the store's walls that stretches from the floor to the ceiling, a giant gumball machine, gingerbread people painted on the walls, penny candies, and other attractions.

"It's fun that kids like to come here," said Beth, who added that the store has hosted several children's birthday parties. "When they do they say, 'Wow, it's like Fantasyland!'"

But the two said they want to move the business into different directions in the future. They want to hold more workshops outside of the store at which local residents—particularly children and senior citizens—can make their own pastries, something they have already begun doing.

They also plan a number of special holiday treats for Halloween, Thanksgiving and Christmas. The two sisters said they are expecting even better business over the holiday season and are hoping to hire a part-time employee at that time, since they are currently the only employees at the store.

"We want to keep coming up with new ideas and news items," said Karen. "We're trying to concentrate on specialty cakes and things like that. We want to keep being different."

The store is open Tuesday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Beginning Oct. 1, it will be open 8 a.m. to 1 p.m.

To place an order, drop by the store or call 472-4729.

Sponsored By NQBPA North Quincy Sidewalk Fair To Be Held Saturday

The North Quincy Business and Professional Association (NQBPA) will hold a Sidewalk Fair Saturday on Billings Rd.

The event will be held from 8 to 4 p.m. During that time, the shopping area will be closed to vehicular traffic. NQBPA Vice President Eric Stoeckel said parking will be available at the Vane St. lot behind West Coast Video at a cost of 25¢ for five hours.

The fair will include games and prizes for area youth. The highlight of the games will be a basketball shoot-out sponsored by Quincy Chiropractic. Stoeckel noted, although smaller games including a bean-bag throw and baseball and hockey events will also be held.

In addition, merchants will offer their goods outside their shops for a discount price.

Stoeckel said the NQBPA Sidewalk Fair held this past summer--the group's first since 1992--was a success for the merchants, but this weekend's event places more of an emphasis on community involvement.

"We're trying to make a commitment to the community and bring attention to North Quincy," he said. "It's a great neighborhood. And we [NQBPA] have several new faces and a pretty diverse group now, so we hope to have summer and fall sidewalk fairs every year."

Stoeckel said children up to age 18 who participate in games will be eligible for free food prizes at Purdy's Gourmet Ice Cream and Coffee House and Buccini's Mr. Sub. Children should hold onto the tickets until 2 p.m. when a winning ticket number will be drawn for the surprise "President's Award" sponsored by Doran and Horrigan Insurance.

Stoeckel said among the other sponsors and featured attractions are: Curry Hardware, moonwalk; Stoeckel Insurance, Irish Musical Surprise; Joyce and Gendreau Jewelers, jewelry making and West Coast Video, Happy the Clown.

Boston Financial Data Services Expands At Presidents Place

Peter Elliot & Co., Inc. announces the recent expansion of Boston Financial Data Services (BFDS) at Presidents Place.

The transaction is the latest in a series of new leases, renewals and expansions which totals more than 100,000 square feet of office space and 13,000 square feet of retail space at the 350,000-square-foot complex.

According to Peter Brown, executive vice president of Peter Elliot & Co., Inc., exclusive leasing and property management firm for Presidents Place, "The ability to expand was a primary concern for BFDS when it chose to move into this building earlier this year. Now, a little over six months later, they have grown and are in need of more space."

"We are extremely pleased with their success and glad Presidents Place has been able to accommodate their expansion needs."

BFDS is a 21-year-old joint venture of State Street Bank and DST Systems, Inc. of Kansas City, with headquarters at Two Heritage Drive in Quincy. Brown said that new employees were hired at their headquarters, BFDS realized a need for more room and moved into Presidents Place brings Boston Financial's total office space to 50,252 square feet.

Representing both BFDS and Citizens Bank were Peter Elliot & Co., Inc. brokers Peter Sullivan and Peter Evans, and Senior Vice President/Director of Property Management John Cullinane.

Presidents Place is located at 1250 Hancock St., Quincy Center. More than 1,100 employees work in the 350,000-square-foot office/retail complex, which is owned by Citizens Bank of Massachusetts.

Flynn participated in the Community Rounds program held recently at the hospital. Participants spend a half day learning about the hospital through observation and discussions with hospital staff. Prepare For Plumbing Emergencies Now

Some of the most exasperating home repair problems crop up when something goes wrong with the plumbing. And serious difficulties can lead to costly repair bills. Planning for plumbing emergencies now can save you money and headaches later.

"Fortunately, a properly-installed system should not cause you many problems," says James N. Stamos, president of the South Shore Association of Realtors. "Better yet, some common minor plumbing hassles, such as clogged drains and leaky faucets, probably can be treated successfully by those industrious homeowners looking to save a few dollars."

All you need is a little knowledge, a few tools and a common-sense approach to problem-solving.

"I might add that the successful home plumber also knows when it's time to call in a professional," Stamos advises. "After all, there's no room for pride when you have a basement full of water."

Your first step should be to do a little homework on the subject of plumbing. Browse through home repair books at the library or book store. Most will offer easy-to-follow advice on how to fix a variety of things around the house. Books containing detailed diagrams and user-friendly instructions are the best. With so many "do-it-yourself" books on the shelves, picking out only one or two suitable volumes may be your biggest dilemma.

Now it's time to tour your home and become acquainted with the plumbing system. Learn the location of all shutoff valves, particularly the main shutoff valve. A good place to look for the main valve is near the water meter.

Shutoff valves for sinks, commodes and other fixtures ordinarily are located beneath the fixture in question. However, in some homes, they might be found in the basement or crawl space. Use these valves—when accessible—to cut off the water supply to malfunctioning fixtures.

"Make sure that adults in the family know the location of the main shutoff valve since it controls water to the entire house," Stamos advises. "It could mean the difference between a dry and a flooded basement."

Of course, if your home has a septic tank buried in the yard, you should know where it is in the case of an emergency. Your yard may suffer considerable damage in a plumbing emergency if not found quickly.

You can locate a septic tank with the help of the blueprints for your home. If the blueprints are unavailable, check with the builder or previous owner.

What type of tools should you have on hand for plumbing emergencies? A plunger, an adjustable wrench, an auger and a screwdriver will be enough for most drain problems. For leaky faucets, you'll also need assorted washers, a resealing tool and some packing thread.

A reliable hardware or plumbing supply is a good source for tools and for answers to your specific questions.

While you won't be able to handle every plumbing emergency yourself, armed with a little knowledge, a few tools and common sense, you should be able to trim costs for minor repairs. But in a real emergency, call in the professionals to avoid even bigger and most costly plumbing repair costs down the road.

The South Shore Association of Realtors is one of more than 1,800 local boards and associations of Realtors nationwide that comprise the National Association of Realtors. As the nation's largest trade association, NAR is "The Voice for Real Estate," representing nearly 750,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry.

COASTSWEEP '95 was held along the Bay State's coast this past weekend as volunteers set out to clean beaches. Among those sprucing up Wollaston Beach were Central Middle School seventh graders Sarah Wilson (left) and Rebecca Ballard.

Beach Cleanup 'Huge Success'

State Rep. Michael Bellotti has called a Wollaston Beach cleanup he held recently "a huge success."

Bellotti, along with 50 volunteers, worked for several hours picking up debris along the length of the beach. The group picked up more than 50 bags of trash for disposal.

The cleanup was part of Coastsweep, a statewide effort organized by Massachusetts Zone Management to clean the shore. Bellotti was joined by representatives from several community organizations including members of the Montclair-Wollaston Association, Beechwood by the Bay Community Center, Atlantic Neighborhood Center, and Squantum Community Center along with a group of students from Central Middle School and several residents from Wollaston, Squantum and North Quincy.

Following the cleanup, Bellotti hosted a luncheon at Nostalgia on Wollaston Beach where music was provided and Clover the Clown entertained the children.

"I look forward to doing this again next year and believe that with continued efforts like the one we had today, Wollaston Beach will again become what it once was--an enjoyable and functional beach--as well as a beautiful part of the Massachusetts coastline," said Bellotti.

Ayers Supports Bill On Sex Offenders

Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers, chairman of the council's Public Safety Committee, recently introduced a resolution to the council in support of pending State House Bill 2638.

The bill mandates that city police be notified when sex offenders are released from prison.

Ayers said he is giving his full attention to focus on the seriousness of the bill.

"People have the right to know what is going on in their community. City and state officials must protect the well-being of every person in our neighborhood," he said.

The bill will soon be coming up for a third reading before a vote is taken on the matter, Ayers noted. He added that all residents should write their local representatives to voice support for the bill and the resolution so the measure can be acted on in a timely fashion.

Ayers also praised Quincy's State House delegation for their support, particularly Rep. Michael Bellotti.

Ayers has been an advocate for the bill from the beginning and introduced a similar resolution last year.

"This is a very sensitive issue to many residents in my ward and I will continue to fight until it is passed," he said.

Citizens Bank, MBTA Shuttle To Raise Money For YMCA

Citizens Bank has enlisted the involvement of the water shuttle's 3,000 weekly riders to raise money in support of youth programs at the South Shore YMCA in Quincy.

The bank announced recently it will donate $1 to the YMCA for every punched 10-ride ticket that it brought into a Citizens branch in Boston or the South Shore.

"This is a marvelous collaboration with the MBTA," said John O'Connor, regional president of Citizens Bank. "This campaign will not only raise program funds for the YMCA, it gives South Shore residents an active role in the fund-raising campaign."

"This is a great example of a public-private partnership at work," said Transportation Secretary and MBTA Chairman

James Kerasiotes. "It's wonderful to see such a creative idea to help finance a local youth organization."

Shuttle customers will see the promotion on the back of the tickets and on posters detailing where to turn in their used tickets at the participating branches.

MBTA Interim General Manager Robert Mabardy added, "This is a simple way for our riders to support a worthy cause."

'Tiger Express' Quincy-Bound Friday

Quincy Siege Of Trojans Falls Short

Bridgewater-Raynham remains Quincy High School's unconquered football foe of the Old Colony League.

In seven tries since joining the OCL, the Presidents have been unable to topple the Trojans. In 1990 Quincy fielded its best team in decades; they went 8-1-1, with the tie coming against Bridgewater-Raynham. In 1993 and 1994 strong QHS teams had a horse in running back Sam Brown, but that old trick didn't work against the Trojans. Both times Quincy took early leads; both times they watched the leads slip away.

Saturday, Quincy's frustration continued despite a spectacular defensive effort with a 6-0 loss in a hard-fought war of attrition.

Though the Presidents (0-2) lost, the effort, at least defensively, marked considerable improvement in the one week since their 34-0 loss to East Bridgewater.

"The defense was 180 degrees different from the first game," said Quincy coach Peter Chella. "The adjustments we made during the week worked out great. Now if the offense improves, we'll be a good team."

If the offense gets on track, the Presidents will have a shot at winning this week against Taunton. The Friday night game is Quincy's home opener. Last year the Presidents ran roughshod over Taunton and its 'Tiger Express' run-and-shoot offense to the tune of 38-18.

The defense will be called upon to continue its play against Tigers star running back Eddie Holt - Taunton's biggest offensive threat. Last week the Tigers lost, 42-21, to Plymouth South.

Saturday the Quincy D held the Trojans (2-0) to 147 total yards, and just 33 in the second half.

A 1-yard run by Ken Banard in the second quarter was the only score.

The Presidents defense stacked up well against the run and forced three turnovers. The first was a spectacular over-the-shoulders interception by cornerback Mike Sheffer on the first play of the game.

In the fourth quarter, B-R took over in Quincy territory. Banard was about to break a long gain, but a hit by defensive back Kevin Connolly forced a fumble which Jon Ryan recovered.

On the next offensive series for the Trojans, Banard fumbled a pitch and the Presidents recovered just 21 yards from the B-R end zone.

However, a failure by Quincy's offense to move the ball following either fourth-quarter turnover was their ultimate downfall.

Boston Marathon Training Program At YMCA

The South Shore YMCA will offer a Boston Marathon training program beginning Monday, Oct. 16 at 7 p.m.

The purpose is to educate, motivate and train runners of all levels properly for competition in the 1995 Boston Marathon.

Education seminars will be given, along with a Saturday morning run. Also included are a before and after health fitness evaluation and Nautilus strength training.

For more information call Gayle Laing at 479-8500, ext. 135.

The struggling offense has mounted just 206 total yards in two games.

"We're going to look at films and find out what the problem is on offense," said Chella. "Maybe we have too many kids going both ways. I don't know. But we may make some changes."

Linebacker Bill Dunn had a tremendous game for Quincy. The Presidents made numerous stops in the backfield, and Dunn was usually leading the charge. Sophomore defensive end Steve Wiltshire held his ground fiercely against the usually potent Trojans ground game.

B-R quarterback Keith Lane was hammered just about every time he attempted to pass. Defensive tackle Scott MacPherson bottled up the middle and made a day out of belting Lane.

Ryan and defensive linemen Dan Nichol, Pete Kolson, Don McCarthy and John Moss also got in on the action in the Trojans backfield.

Ironically, it was an outstanding defensive play by MacPherson which led to the game's only score. In the second quarter, the Trojans had a fourth and 7 at the Quincy 25 and Lane went back to pass. MacPherson broke through the line and crushed the quarterback. As he was bringing Lane to the ground, his hand unintentionally grabbed the facemask. A 5-yard penalty was called, which kept alive the B-R drive. Four plays later, Banard scored.

"This is a game we could have won," said Chella. "I'm upset that we didn't. B-R is consistently one of the better teams in the league. The kids realize now that we can hit with them, but I don't want them to be happy with a loss."

First Road Game Friday At Plymouth South

Speedy Clippers Sail Past Red Raiders

By KERRY BYRNE
North Quincy High School football coach Ken McPhee kept his seniors in the locker room for a few extra minutes following his team's 35-0 loss to Falmouth Friday night.

"They're the 14 kids who have stuck with the program," said McPhee. "We're going to get better, and they'll be the reason why. I just wanted them to know that."

Perhaps better days are not that far away as the Red Raiders (0-2) have a winnable contest at Old Colony League opponent Plymouth South (1-1) Friday night. The Panthers lost to North Quincy, 27-7, last season.

"This is a game we have a chance to win," said McPhee. "Our kids will be ready to go. We'll give it our best shot."

Plymouth South, which is in only its second season as a program following the recent split of Plymouth High School, is coming off a 42-21 win over Taunton. They have a potent passing attack led by strong-armed quarterback Ryan Fryer. But that could play into North Quincy's defensive strength in the secondary.

Falmouth (2-0), the defending OCL champion, got off to a stunning start against the Red Raiders as junior running back Willie Ford, who at 6 feet 3 inches and 195 pounds is being eyed by a number of college scouts, went 64 yards for a score on the game's first play from scrimmage. The extra point kick by Tom Bushy, who was a perfect 5 for 5, put the Red Raiders in a 7-0 hole less than 30 seconds into the game.

Falmouth held a 21-0 advantage at the end of the first quarter following a 76-yard Joe Gohring to Eric Foster touchdown pass and a 2-yard plunge by Jason Gourdin.

Gohring would score from 1 yard out in the second quarter as the Clippers went into the break leading, 28-0.

"The coaches thought we were flat getting off the bus," said McPhee. "And they're a very good team, no doubt about it. We can't come out like we did against that type of team."

The game may have had a different tone if the Red Raiders were able to capitalize on two early opportunities. Following Ford's long touchdown run, North came up with a sustained drive from its own 41 to the Clippers 13. Running back Brian Walsh (20 carries, 109 yards, his second 100-yard game of the season) gained 39 yards on the drive while Sean Johnson, who has a couple of nice runs on misdirection plays this season, added 7 yards on a first-down carry.

With the ball on the 13, the Raiders lost 5 yards and on the next play Gohring intercepted a pass at the 13.

North Quincy would again threaten to score late in the first half. They took over on their own 41 with 55 seconds to play. Quarterback J.R. Rendle hit Tom Coughlin for a 32-yard gain on the first play of the drive. The connection was NQ's longest pass play of the young season.

Twenty yards on three carries by Walsh, coupled with a Falmouth facemask penalty, put the ball on the 4 with time for one more play. Rendle threw to Coughlin in the right flat but the rangy receiver was met by a crowd of defenders and stopped at the 1 yard line.

"We're moving the ball well," said McPhee. "We're just not moving it far enough."

Rendle, who has handled the QB duties well despite no previous experience at the position, has been victimized by a slew of dropped balls.

A massive 18-play, 66-yard drive in the second half by Falmouth would end in a 5-yard TD run by Joe Marshall. The drive took 10 minutes off the clock and basically eliminated any chance the Red Raiders had of mounting a comeback bid.

The undersized North Quincy offensive line of center Joe McCarthy and guards Paul Picciano and Steve Stentiford, tackles Norm Connell and Eric Malames, and tight end Charlie Plaskasovitis has done an admirable job paying the way for Walsh's 245 rushing yards in two games. Walsh has frequently found large holes in the enemy defensive line thanks to their work and that of fullback Tim Zaniboni.

Receiver/defensive back Matt Kiely continues to make key plays on both sides of the ball.

Sophomore defensive back Pat Egan has played tough against the run while linebacker Zaniboni and nose tackle Picciano have made big hits.

North Girls Continue Impressive Run

The North Quincy High School girls soccer team split two games last week, making its record 4-3 over a difficult first two weeks of the season.

The mark is the best start in school history.

"This was a tough stretch of games for us playing seven games in 13 days," said Red Raiders coach Paul Bregoli. "The kids responded well and for the most part played hard in every game. Unfortunately, we have had only four practices since doubles ended, so it has been difficult to correct some of the mistakes we've been making."

The Red Raiders are in the midst of a big week. They traveled to Weymouth Tuesday, will make the trip to Bridgewater-Raynham today (Thursday), and will square off against rival Quincy Saturday at 5 p.m. at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. The Quincy-North Quincy boys will play at 7 p.m.

North Quincy's win last week was a 2-1 non-league victory over Holbrook.

Laurie Flynn scored both Red Raiders goals in a game in which each side dominated different stretches.

Flynn converted a shot from in front after the Holbrook keeper made an initial save of a Rachael Powers' bid.

She got her second tally at the 31-minute mark as she knocked home a cross from Kristen Kelley, giving her team a 2-0 lead.

The Red Raiders owned the first half as play was continually in the Holbrook end. However, North failed to convert on several glittering chances, including runs by Kelley and stopper Liz Fitzpatrick, that would have put the game away.

A defensive lapse late in the second half allowed Holbrook to creep back in the game. Laura Yerkes broke in on North Quincy keeper Lisa Bragg. Bragg got a piece of the ball, but not enough to prevent it from trickling across the goal line.

The momentum shifted in the second half as the Bulldogs pressured the Red Raiders for the equalizer. Bragg made several fine stops and was aided on defense by Laura Shea, Kelly Keegan, Powers and Hillary O'Donoghue.

Powers had the task of marking Yerkes in the second half and did an excellent job of shutting down the Holbrook forward.

North Quincy's best scoring chances in the second half came from senior striker Annie Bergen, Shea and Kristen Keohane.

"With each game we're getting better," said Bregoli. "You'll see a much improved team over the second half of the year."

Earlier in the week, the Red Raiders suffered a 7-2 loss to undefeated Old Colony League power Silver Lake.

Bergen gave North Quincy a 1-0 lead five minutes into the match when she converted a Kristen Kelley corner kick.

The lead would last until the 21-minute mark when the Lakers would strike for five goals in a decisive 10-minute stretch. Sophomore forward Candy Reich took over, booting three goals in a four-minute span. Silver Lake struck for two more before the 31-minute mark as the stunned Red Raiders entered the half with a 5-1 deficit.

In the second half, freshman wing Betsy Stone tallied her fourth goal of the season by heading in a perfectly placed indirect kick from Bergen.

Despite the loss, the Red Raiders had several good performers, including Keegan, O'Donoghue, Shea and Jocelyn West.

sweeper Kelly Howard.

Sophomore left wing Kerry Duffy netted what would prove to be the game-winner less than 18 minutes later. Kim Mackey set up Duffy for the decisive goal.

The defense would gang tough throughout the game as senior Janet Kane, junior Katie Sullivan, sophomore Becky Mackey and freshman stopper Leanne Martin bottled up the Panthers attack.

Keeper Mary Kelly preserved the winning margin by pulling a number of would-be goals out of the air.

Flaherty saved a potential goal when she raced from midfield and made a tough tackle at the 18-yard line. Howard also stopped a goal from coming in with a shot block in the crease.

Sophomore center forward Jessica DiBona added an unassisted insurance goal at the 6:02 mark of the second half.

"The girls know now that if they play as a team they can succeed," said Herring.

Cross-Country

North Girls, Boys Split

The North Quincy High School cross country teams opened the season last week against Old Colony League rival Bridgewater-Raynham.

The North girls won with a 26-29 decision while the boys fell, 29-27.

The Red Raiders were scheduled to host Silver Lake Tuesday (Sept. 26) in what was expected to be a see-saw battle. Friday they travel to take on the Falmouth Clippers. The Falmouth girls have been picked to win the OCL.

Senior captain Kelly

Duggan opened up a big lead at the 2-mile mark of the 3.1-mile race on her way to a first-place finish that led the Red Raiders girls (1-0) to victory over the Trojans. It was her first-ever varsity win.

Surprising junior Lauren Molloy challenged for second before placing third. It was the first time she had scored in a meet.

Colleen Cotter took fifth and freshmen Ashley Crawford and Juliann Jones rounded out the North Quincy contingent with eighth and ninth place finishes, respectively. The frosh performers scored points that allowed the Red Raiders to clinch the victory.

On the boys side, sophomore Bryan Linskey paced the Red Raiders (0-1) with a third-place finish. A promising sign was that only 18 seconds separated the top six scorers. North Quincy juniors Greg Burke and Jimmy Wan were in that pack with fifth and sixth place showings, respectively.

Rounding out the Red Raiders group were senior Kevin McCue (seventh), junior Matt Quinn (eighth) and sophomore Mike Devin (ninth).

Dec. 15 Date Set For QC Finalists

Community members interested in serving on the screening committee should send a letter of interest by noon Oct. 6 to: Chairman Daniel Raymondi, Quincy College Board of Governors, c/o Dr. Stephen Kenney, Quincy College, 34 Coddington St., Quincy, MA 02169.

The screening committee should be in place by the beginning of next week, according to Raymondi.

"We should have a working committee by the end of the first week in October," he said.

The formula for the screening committee was developed on the advice of a private consultant who recently conducted an all-day workshop on the process of a successful search at the college.

The Board of Governors

also has outlined a set of leadership qualities the screening team must use to assess applicants for the permanent presidency. Raymondi noted that one of the requirements is that the new president will hold an earned doctorate, something that has not been specified in the past.

"The Board of Governors felt very strongly about that," he said.

Raymondi said he expects the number of candidates for the position to be "in the hundreds," noting that more than 100 people applied for the interim presidency last year before Wilson was selected. The screening team will choose between three and five finalists on or before Dec. 15, and the Board of Governors will conduct those finalists before selecting the new president, he added.

Raymondi said he is grateful to the members of the Board of Governors, Dr. Kenney, who as coordinator of the search process has been chosen to act as a liaison between the board and the school faculty and all members of the Quincy College community who have shown an interest in the process.

"I look forward to the fruits of this presidential search process, which I think will be a tremendous success," he said.

Raymondi noted that he hopes to have the permanent president in place by Jan. 1, but said if that is not possible interim arrangements that will not disrupt the college will be made. He added that the Board of Governors will discuss the possibility of needing an acting president Nov. 20.

Over 500 Here For USS Salem Assn. Reunion

The seventh annual reunion of the USS Salem Association, to be held today (Thursday) through Sunday in Quincy, will be the largest for officers and crewmen who served on the heavy cruiser.

This year's gathering is particularly noteworthy, as the ship itself will be the focus of the group's activities.

The USS Salem, which was commissioned in 1949 and decommissioned in 1959, is now the cornerstone exhibit of the US Naval Shipbuilding Museum at the Fore River Shipyard.

The museum is located on the site of the shipyard where the USS Salem was built.

"She returned to Quincy last fall," said Association President Bob Daniels. "And now the crew is coming home to her."

"More than 500 past officers and crewmen, along with their guests, will converge on the area to see something many of them haven't seen in more than 40 years."

A number of high-ranking officers, including at least one former captain of the Salem, retired Admiral Allan B. Roby, will be on hand for the homecoming and reunion.

Highlight of the reunion will be a visit to the former US Sixth Fleet flagship Saturday. Ceremonies on the ship will include the Association's traditional memorial service, which will be conducted on the fantail of the ship.

Other activities planned include optional tours in the Quincy area today and Friday, a forthcoming ball and admiral's reception Friday evening, the Mayor's breakfast Saturday morning, and a special concert and cookout hosted by Mayor James Sheets and the City of Quincy at Merrymount Park Saturday night. The activities will conclude with the annual farewell breakfast and business meeting Sunday morning.

For more information call the Sheraton Tara Hotel at (617) 847-0600.

ATHERTON HOUGH SCHOOL recently held an assembly in conjunction with the Kids Vote program which will allow Quincy students in Grades K-12 to vote at the same time as their parents during the city's municipal election Nov. 7. Students, including second grader Matthew Shaw who is speaking into the microphone held by Grade 1 teacher and Kids Vote coordinator Maris Qualter, made wishes for changes they would like to see take place in Quincy as a result of their votes. SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Have you ever had a day that didn't begin just the way you thought it would? You got out of bed with the confident feeling that the day would be a great one... And there was no soap in the shower - The toast burned and you spilled your juice and you had to change your shirt. You finally get to work late and find you had left your briefcase home!

Do you wonder why there are days like those? I believe there is a purpose for such days. I believe we can learn from adversity what we sometimes can't learn from prosperity. I believe that adversity causes some people to break down, and others to break records.

When you have such a bad day, try making a list of all the adversities and then ask yourself this question: "What can I learn from these difficult situations and what was God trying to teach me?" There is a reason He brings us good days and not so good days. There is a purpose in all our life's encounters. Each day is a new one and each will bring its lessons with it. Have the courage to face each day with the attitude that you will prosper from it even if it brings some adversity rather than prosperity.

Social Security Is 60 And Still Working

By CAROL BOYLE

Social Security celebrated its 60th birthday on Aug. 14. As one of the most successful programs to grow out of the Great Depression, it is in some ways the victim of its own success. Many people take it for granted while others worry about its future.

As a basis for viewing the program's future, it helps to look at the record—what it has accomplished and how it is performing right now:

- Currently, the Social Security Administration (SSA) serves 43 million Social Security beneficiaries, five million individuals who receive Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits, and 141 million workers who are paying into the system.

- Out of each dollar you pay in Social Security taxes, only about one cent goes to pay for the administrative expenses necessary to run the largest social insurance system in the world.

- Every month, 99.8 percent of SSA's beneficiaries receive their checks in the right amount, at the right address, and on time. And, this service has been ongoing for more than a half-century through an era that has witnessed the nation at war, in recession, at peace, and in prosperous times.

- The largest single SSA workload is processing requests for new and replacement Social Security cards. Every working day, about 70,000 applications are taken and for 94 percent of them a response is in the mail to the customer in less than five days—with a 99.7 percent accuracy rate.

- The primary purpose of the Social Security number is to help track the earnings of workers who pay Social Security taxes. Social Security benefits are based on earnings reports submitted by employers and credited to the worker's Social Security number. Every year, more than 220 million earnings reports are received from thousands of employers across the country; 99.6 percent of those earnings are accurately posted to SSA's records.

- Every year, more than three million new claims for monthly benefits are filed by retirees and their dependents and by widows, widowers, and children of workers who have died. These claims are processed and the first check is ready to mail in about 14 days—with a 99.8 percent accuracy rate.

- Each year, 230,000 claims for Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits are received from people aged 65 or older. Their first payment is ready in about 17 days, with a 96 percent record of accuracy.

- Every year, SSA receives more than 60 million reports of changes of address, marriage, divorce, death, and other events that affect a person's eligibility for Social Security benefits. Social Security representatives with "online" access to beneficiary files record the new information and update the files instantaneously.

$250,000 Appropriated For Sidewalk Work

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The city has appropriated $250,000 for major work on Quincy's sidewalks.

The City Council appropriated the money at the request of Mayor James Sheets from the city's free cash (cash reserve) account Monday night.

Sheets said at press time the money will be divided so that each of the city's six wards will receive between $41,000 and $42,000 worth of work. Complete sections of sidewalks will be replaced, something that will benefit all Quincy residents but particularly senior citizens and young mothers, he added.

"Our concern is mainly for our seniors and for women who push baby carriages," he said.

Sheets said the city's free cash surplus of $5.7 million this year made it easy to appropriate the money from that source. Last year, the free cash surplus was $3.5 million, and $600,000--$100,000 for each ward--was used for similar renovations, which Sheets said was the first major sidewalk work in years.

The mayor noted that he decided upon the $250,000 figure this year because Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton said that would be an appropriate amount given the number of requests from individuals for sidewalk repairs. The DPW currently has "a pile" of such repair slips, he said.

"You have to invest the people's money where they live," said Sheets. "This is one of the ways we strengthen our neighborhoods."

Several councillors voiced support of the appropriation Monday night, including Councillor Timothy Cahill, who noted that he has disagreed with how the Sheets admini-

Sheets Takes Steps To Eliminate Confusion

Operators Called Back To Answer Police Dept. Phones

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Mayor James Sheets is bringing back telephone operators to help city residents become adjusted to the new automated Nynex-Centrex phone system being used by the Quincy Police Department.

Sheets made the announcement at press time Tuesday, saying the operators are needed because the new system is confusing for residents and "too cold and impersonal."

The city began implementing the new system at the department two weeks ago. Quincy Data Processing Director Bob Brennan, who helped oversee the installation, said at the time the new system will help save the city over $100,000 and ultimately provide easier access for callers to the individuals they are trying to contact.

Sheets said at press time, however, that his office has received a number of calls from people who have expressed frustration over having to wait through a lengthy, computerized directory listing a number of individual department extensions. City councillors expressed similar concerns Monday night, saying they also have received a number of complaints.

The system is currently using two operational main phone numbers: 745-5700, the new number that was introduced with the Nynex-Centrex system two weeks ago and 479-1212, the longtime number that initially was replaced but quickly was brought back to help cut down on caller confusion.

Sheets said he is concerned that the system is causing so much frustration, adding that it may be particularly difficult for senior citizens and those who do not speak English very well to adjust. He said the new telephone

Burgin Parkway Repairs May Be Complete Oct. 16

The giant sinkhole that has diverted traffic on Burgin Parkway for the past two weeks should be completely repaired on or before Monday, Oct. 16, according to Quincy Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon.

At press time Tuesday, Gillon said the Army Corps of Engineers, which is overseeing the repairs, has set a completion date of Oct. 16 for the project. He added, however, that the work being done by Nina Construction Co. of Quincy may be completed before then.

"I looked at the site yesterday," he said. "The contractor is being very cooperative, and we're making better headway than what the Corps had projected. I'm optimistic that we will have it done before then.

"It's coming along. We should be fine as long as we don't have any setbacks, like heavy rain."

The 30-by-15-foot hole, located between the School Street overpass and Star Market, opened up Sept. 17 when a rain-swollen culvert blew out

Sun Readers Helping To Make Abigail Adams Statue A Reality

Forty Quincy Sun readers have donated a total of $785 to the fundraising campaign for a bronze statue honoring Abigail Adams.

The contributions range from $5 to $50. Most of the Sun contributors live in Quincy, but several live outside the city or out of state, including Connecticut, South Carolina, California and Hawaii.

Sun readers can contribute to the fundraising campaign by filling out a coupon which appears in this issue and mailing it to: The Quincy Partnership Abigail Adams Statue,

P.O. Box 488, Quincy, MA 02269. Coupons will also appear in subsequent issues until the $60,000 fundraising goal is reached.

Edward Keohane, president of the Quincy Partnership, said he is encouraged by the fundraising response of Sun readers. He said he will match "dollar-for-dollar" donations sent to the Partnership from Sun readers between today (Thursday) and Sunday, Oct. 15.

"I also challenge any other business to do the same during that time frame," Keohane said.

Sun readers who have contributed to the statue campaign to date are:

Public Hearing Nov. 6 On Montclair Rezoning

The proposed rezoning of land in Montclair from Business "C" to open space will be the subject of a City Council public hearing Monday, Nov. 6.

The hearing will be held at 7:25 p.m. in the Council Chambers at City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien has proposed the rezoning of the property, which is located adjacent to Sagamore Towers on West Squantum Street and the State Street South complex on the Newport Avenue extension. He said the city recently acquired the parcel, formerly owned by Mariner Communications for use by radio station WMEX, in Land Court because of tax delinquency.

"This site is an environmentally sensitive marsh," said Chretien. "Under the current Wetlands Protection Act, I doubt anything could be built there. However, there is a movement in Congress today to repeal a lot of the safeguards we now have in the Wetlands Protection Act. So it is important that we do what we can locally to protect wetlands."

"Now that this site is owned by the city, it is a simple matter for us to declare it open space and unavailable for development."

Chretien added that there are other benefits to the rezoning as well.

"Newport Avenue and West Squantum Street have certainly carried their share of the load in terms of development, jobs and tax revenue," he said. "However, in addition to the concerns we have about wetlands, there is a practical limit as to what the surrounding area can handle in terms of traffic. Residents of Montclair shouldn't have to worry about another project being developed in that area."

New Quincy 2000 Program $300,000 For Commercial Buildings Renovations In Business Districts

The Quincy 2000 Corporation announced this week a new program to assist in the renovation and revitalization of commercial properties in Quincy.

Quincy 2000 is providing approximately $300,000 in matching grants for facade improvements designed to increase business and employment opportunities by helping to create more attractive shopping and commercial areas, and by restoring uses in vacant and underutilized buildings.

The program objective is to serve as a catalyst for significant investment in the Quincy's business districts.

"Whether investments are made by property owners, tenants or developers, this type of program enhances the success and unique qualities of each district - creating a more enjoyable place to live, work, shop and invest", said Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joe Mannarino. "The Commercial Building Renovation Program is a significant tool in the overall effort of revitalizing Quincy's core business districts".

The Commercial Building Improvement Program is initially targeted for Quincy Center and Wollaston. Funding for North Quincy is to follow in the coming months. With the City Council's vote Monday night to approve the North Quincy Commercial Area Revitalization District plan, North Quincy is one step closer to taking advantage of such development incentives.

"By providing incentives for private investment, Quincy 2000 is serving as the ideal public/private partnership by getting things rolling in our business districts", said Mayor James Sheets. "I expect many landlords, tenants and developers will get on board to take advantage of this unique opportunity".

The Facade Improvement Program is designed to help commercial property owners and tenants improve the exteriors of their buildings by awarding matching grants contributing 50 percent of the renovation cost of a storefront or facade. With a $25,000 maximum grant, the Quincy 2000 Commercial Building Renovation Program will help reinforce the traditional character of Quincy's business districts while promoting both small and large scale improvements.

The program utilizes funds from the City of Quincy's Community De-RAMONA "PENNY" BREEN (right) signs up to volunteer to help her 6-year-old daughter Kelly, a first grader at the Bernazzani Elementary School, participate in the Kids Voting program. Looking on are Kelly's father Tony and brother Anthony, 3. The Kids Voting program will allow Quincy students in Grades K-12 the opportunity to vote for candidates for mayor, City Council and School Committee during the city's municipal election at which their parents will vote Nov. 7.

Credit Card With City Seal

Quincy residents may be able to obtain a credit card bearing the city seal sometime in the future.

The City Council passed a resolution toward that end Monday night.

Council President Michael Cheney, who introduced the resolution, said

Affinity credit cards have been used to raise money for organizations in the past. The City of Quincy qualifies as an organization, he added.

Cheney said if such cards are established, one to two percent of the funds generated by the use of the cards could be used to benefit the city's athletic organizations.

"This is something we should look into for the purpose of generating revenue (for city athletics)," he said.

The matter was referred to the council's Finance Committee.

Flu Clinics Start Oct. 21

The Quincy Health Department announces the schedule for flu clinics for Quincy residents over 18 years of age which will be held Oct. 21 through Nov. 30.

This year's flu shot contains the strains A/Texas, A/Johannesburg and B/Harbin to provide immunity against the types of flu which have been circulating in the past year and thought most likely to occur in the United States this winter. Because influenza vaccine contains only non-infectious viruses, it cannot cause influenza.

The annual vaccination against influenza is recommended for the following groups:

- Adults and children with long-term heart or lung problems.
- Residents of nursing homes and residents or other chronic care facilities who are over 18 years of age and have chronic medical conditions.
- Healthy people over 65 years of age.
- People of any age who during the past year have regularly seen a doctor or have been admitted to a hospital for treatment for kidney disease, cystic fibrosis, anemia (low blood) or severe asthma.
- People who have a type of cancer or immunological disorder (or use certain types of medicines) that lower the body's normal resistance to infections after checking with their physician.
- Children and teenagers (ages 6 months to 18 years) on long-term treatment with aspirin who, if they catch the flu, may be at risk of getting Reyes Syndrome.
- Health care workers or others providing care to high-risk persons.

•Anyone who wishes to reduce his/her chances of catching the flu.

Persons who would not be given the flu vaccine include:

- Those who have a serious allergy to eggs.
- Those who have had a serious allergic reaction or other problems after getting influenza vaccination.
- Those who have ever been paralyzed with Guillain-Barre's syndrome.
- Women who are pregnant or think they might be pregnant.
- Those who have a moderate or severe illness.

The vaccine will only be given to Quincy residents age 18 and older. All others are advised to check with their family physician.

Shut-ins should call the Quincy Health Department at 376-1275 to arrange for a house visit by the Public Health Nurse.

The schedule for flu clinics is as follows:

- Saturday, Oct. 21 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the JFK Health Center, 1120 Hancock St.
- Friday, Oct. 27 from 2 to 3 p.m. at the Squantum Community Center/Fire Station.
- Thursday, Nov. 9 from 10 to 11 a.m. at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, 12 Hunt St.
- Thursday, Nov. 16 from 2 to 3 p.m. at the Houghs Neck Community Center, 1193 Sea St.
- Thursday, Nov. 30 from 2 to 3 p.m. at the JFK Health Center (Make Up Clinic).
- Thursday, Nov. 30 from 5 to 7 p.m. at the JFK Health Center (Make Up Clinic).

For more information, call the Health Department at 376-1270.

A Gentleman Of The Press

Those of us who knew him were saddened by the death last week of G. Prescott Low, former publisher of The Patriot Ledger.

To me he was more than a publisher. He was a friend.

I got my start in the newspaper business at the Ledger (then The Quincy Patriot Ledger) in my senior year at Quincy High School writing school sports and serving as the high school correspondent.

That's when I first met Prescott Low whom we knew as Pres. (Pronounced Press like the printing press).

I spent 14 years there and got the chance to do just about everything as a reporter and then columnist.

And during that time, I got to know him well.

It was a great place to work. You looked forward to going there each morning. We didn't make a lot of money back then but that didn't seem to matter too much-for awhile anyway.

It was a fun place to work and for those of us who were there back then it was like family.

And Pres Low was much responsible for that comradery and family feeling.

He was good to his employees. If you got into a financial bind, he was there to help. If you needed a little loan to tide you over, he had the best interest rate in town: zero.

He was not the stereotype newspaper publisher you see in the movies or on TV. He was kind, quiet, soft spoken, low-keyed. He was a gentleman of the press and a gentle man. We called him by his first name and he knew all of us by first name.

He enjoyed mixing with his employees and kidding with them. And now and then, having a drink with the guys.

His door was never locked to his employees. He had a genuine interest in them.

I was just a kid when I met him that first time. I liked him from the start and I still liked him when I left 14 years later.

And I will never forget that last day at the Ledger. I was leaving to accept an offer from The Boston Traveler. It had been a tough decision for me to leave—one I had made with gnawing mixed emotions.

But the money was a little better at The Traveler and I now had a young family to think of. I was wrestling with 11th hour second thoughts that last day when Pres called me into his office.

After a little small talk, he said: "I'm sorry to see you leave. And I want you to know something. If you don't like it there in Boston, come on back. You'll have a job here anytime you want to come back."

All day long that last day I had felt a little sad—like I was leaving home. My eyes moistened at his kind words.

I wonder how many would get a nice send-off like that today? Not many, I'm sure. Even a "I-wish-you-luck" is hard to come by these days.

But it was just the natural thing for him to do and say. I've remembered him with fondness since my days at the Ledger. To me, he was someone a little special.

Thanks for the nice memories, Pres.

THE VOTER TURNOUT in Quincy's city final election Nov. 7 could be a little higher than usual thanks to the Quincy Kids Voting Program being held for the first time here.

The non-partisan, non-profit, grass roots education program gives young people from kindergarten age through grade 12 actual experience in the election process.

They cast their own ballots alongside their parents in a real election.

City Clerk Joseph Shea, members of the Board of Registrars and Howard Crowley, Quincy Kids Voting Program coordinator, have been attending open houses at various schools explaining the program. And, while there, registering adult voters.

The kids are really getting in the voting mood and getting their parents in it, too. Frequently heard at the open houses attended by students and their parents: "Mom, Dad, don't forget to register."

Shea reports that over 120 parents have signed up so far with top honors going to Point Webster where 40 registered.

"It's a good sign," he says.

He hopes to register 300 to 400 at the open houses before the Oct. 18 deadline.

NICE TO SEE Jeanne Reardon, clerk of the City Council Committees, back at her City Hall desk. Jeanne, who underwent gallbladder surgery Sept. 7, says she feels "just great-marvelous."

And she wants to thank all those who sent "get well" cards to her after reading of her surgery here.

"It was so nice of them. I really appreciate it."

SOMETIMES YOU FEEL that Uncle Sam is always taking. You know, the IRS, etc. But Quincy's Uncle Sam Rounseville is a giver.

He has a car he wants to give away. No catch. It's a 1985 Chevy Cavalier with standard shift and has 168,000 miles on it.

"It's in good running condition," he says.

Seems he thought the car was ready to go out to pasture so he bought another one. Then he discovered the problem with the old car was some loose wiring. And he had it repaired.

So he's offering the Cavalier free.

"But it's got to be a needy person," he says. "And a registered voter is preferred."

If you're interested give him a call at 774-1776.

And, speaking of Rounseville, he is a feature subject in the current issue of the National Enquirer and has been approached by the David Letterman show for a possible appearance.

A FUNDRAISER FOR City Councillor at-large Tim Cahill will be held Wednesday, Oct. 11, 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., at the Common Market, Willard St., West Quincy. Tickets are $25 each and are available by calling 328-6699 or may be obtained at the door.

AND A FUNDRAISER for Christine Cedrone, candidate for School Committee, will be held Friday, Oct. 13 at 7 p.m. at Pat Flanagan's, Parkingway, Quincy Center. Tickets are available at the door.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS POSTCARD DATED 1929 was published by the Greeting Card Shoppe in Wollaston. The picture is looking west on Beale Street and was taken from the roof of what is now Tony's Sub Shop. On the right is the Beale Street Pharmacy, now the site of Papa Gino's and on the left is Klein's Drug Store, now the Blackwood Pharmacy. Down the street can be seen the marquee of the new Wollaston Theater which opened in 1926. While this view doesn't seem to have changed that much, the city has recently invested millions of dollars in street and sidewalk improvements to help ensure the prosperity of Wollaston Center well into the 21st century.

Calls Senior Living Complex 'A Good Idea'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I have read about the proposed development of a senior living complex at Marina Bay, and heard that a Planned Unit Development application was recently filed with the City.

As a Marina Bay

resident, I am most anxious to hear what is being proposed. I realize that the area is very desirable, and I know that development of the site is inevitable.

With Marina Bay being such a highly visible area, great attention will be paid to any such development and changes made to its current stature by members of the community. I know and I am most interested in what will be constructed and look forward to more information on the project.

I believe that a senior living complex is a good idea, but I am reserving my final judgment until I have had a chance to hear all the facts, and I am presented with exactly what Marina Bay plans to do with the undeveloped land.

Emergency Management Agency Seeks Donations

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The City of Quincy, a coastal community like many others, is prone to hurricanes, severe Northeast coastal storms, flood. As any other community, we are also prone to power outages, serious fires, technological emergencies and disasters which can happen at any time.

During any of the situations mentioned, at one time or another, Emergency Management adult and high school volunteers were there to assist. They were also there during countless community activities such as parades, road races, summerfest, arts in the park, USS Salem celebration, Italian festival, U.S. Marshal Degan road race and countless other activities going on in the City of Quincy. Yes, the volunteers were there...at no cost to the city.

During the last several years, the City of Quincy's Emergency Management Agency has been fortunate to have the assistance of our students from Quincy High, North Quincy High and elementary schools working side by side with adult volunteers to assist the citizens of Quincy. Maybe at one time or another, you have had to go to one of our natural disaster school shelters during several coastal storm, etc...once again, our student volunteers were there for you...our volunteers ask for very little in return...our motto is "People Helping People". We are asking you to give a donation for the purpose of purchasing resources and to help pay the cost of feeding our volunteers in return for all of the time and effort they give to their community. With all the violence in the world it is refreshing to see these young adults giving their time freely to help their fellow man...it is called "Caring".

Checks can be made payable to: City of Quincy, Emergency Management Agency Volunteers Students, and mailed to 55 Sea St., Quincy, 02169. Thank you.

Praises Chretien For Recycling Efforts

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Every day there is further debate about whether or not the city should take over the recycling program.

No matter what the outcome, let's remember that if it had not been for Larry Chretien, we might still not have recycling at all! It was through his direct efforts that Quincy was one of the first communities in Massachusetts to start recycling.

OPINION

'What So Proudly We Waved'

By JOHN (JAKE) COMER
Past National Commander
The American Legion

This summer we have been reacquainted with events of 50 years ago, when World War II was finally brought to a close. In too few years, only images preserved in archives and a few monuments will allow us to recall a generation when America's soldiers and citizens fought and toiled to defeat the Axis powers. This summer, though, we are rich in stories of valor and victory.

Looking at photos in the 50th anniversary features in newspapers and magazines and watching the many television specials that recount the hard won victories in Europe and the Pacific, one can't ignore the important role of the American flag. Even before the famous Joseph Rosenthal photo of the flag raising at Iwo Jima, the stars and stripes was an important symbol. From the images of tattered flags still flying from the masts of sunken ships at Pearl Harbor to the War Department posters that urged Americans to buy bonds and plant victory gardens, the flag was an ever present and important symbol of what we stood for as a nation. For the families of more than 400,000 young men and women who lost their lives during the war, a flag folded in a tight triangle represented more than a memento.

During that war and during the victory celebrations, is there any doubt that anyone who willfully defiled or defaced the American flag would have been prosecuted to the full measure of a state's flag protection laws? Would the media and a few elected officials come to a flag burner's defense? Would anyone have considered malicious destruction of an American flag a right of free expression protected by the First Amendment?

Today, opponents of a Constitutional amendment that would allow the states and federal government to consider reinstatement of flag protection laws might say, "That was a time of war—people and feelings were different then.

Anyone who burned a flag would have been incredibly foolish. Today, people have a right to express themselves however they want—even by burning a flag."

With all of the 50th anniversary of World War II victories fresh in their memory, I hope Senators John Kerry and Ted Kennedy will recall how important a symbol the flag was to Americans just five decades ago. I think they should consider that if protection of the flag was right then, why would it be wrong now? If it is wrong now, what is there about our nation that has changed that makes protection of our nation's most revered symbol politically incorrect? Are we any less of a nation? Have we lost too much respect for our ideals and principles? Do we have to be engaged in a bloody global war to take pride in our national emblem?

Protection of the American flag was not a free speech issue 50 years ago, and in truth, it should not be today. Post-war advances in communications technologies have given us unprecedented ways of saying and printing whatever we want without having to resort to destructive physical acts. Individual states were free to write and enforce their own flag protection laws prior to two world wars and there was none of the hollow criticism that we hear today that giving the individual states flag protection authority will result in chaos. Over the last 200 years, since the First Continental Congress adopted the stars and stripes design, there has been no difficulty in defining what is and isn't an American flag. To a passing generation, protecting the flag was not a trivial issue. What's heartening is that recent national and state-by-state polls show that the majority of Americans still believe that flag laws should once again be the right of the states.

The Senate debate is not over a trivial issue, as some have claimed. The debate centers on the importance of the flag, but it is also over the right of people being able to decide constitutional issues for themselves. The anniversary of the end of World War II is a fitting time for people to give our children a flag that is important enough to be part of our Constitution.

39 Of 54 Retailers Pass Health Dept. Tobacco Test

The Quincy Health Department reports that 39 out of 54 tobacco retailers in the city have passed a test to see if they would refuse to sell cigarettes to minors.

The 15 offenders sold cigarettes to minors who were between the ages of 13 and 16 without asking for identification, according to Robert Helfrich, director of the department's Tobacco Control Program. Helfrich noted that the 72 percent compliance rate is higher than many communities. A fine of $100 was issued to three second offenders, he added.

The Tobacco Control Program recently sent 195 retailers in the city who are licensed to sell tobacco products a copy of the law along with suggestions as to how the Health Department might assist them in their efforts to curtail minors' access to tobacco products, according to Helfrich.

He added that compliance checks will continue to be made to ensure cooperation with the law.

"The health of our youth is at issue," said Helfrich.

Masonic Lodge Donates $500 To Beechwood Center

The Quincy Masonic Lodge AF & AM recently awarded $500 to Beechwood Community Life Center, reports Sharron Beals, executive director.

"The award will be used to defray costs of our services for Quincy elders," Beals explained. Beechwood is well known for our Be-Fit programs for seniors (Senior Olympics, walking groups, volleyball, etc.) And for years Beechwood has served a growing number of the city's frail and special needs elders. Revenues do not cover expanding service needs so fundraising and contributions are critically needed."

"So many individuals and families in Quincy are struggling to cope with serious problems of aging: Alzheimer's, stroke, debilitating illness and/or disabilities."

"Growing older today is a challenging chapter for many individuals and families. Beechwood programs and services are designed to assist seniors so that they may live independently in their own homes for as long as possible. We are grateful for this award from AF & AM. It has already been earmarked to expenses for elders services".

SHOULD ONE USE ICE OR HEAT ON AN INJURY?

One of the most common questions that I am asked in my practice is whether to use ice or heat in treating an injury. Traditionally patients have been advised to "use ice for the first 24-72 hours following the injury and then to use heat," but there is controversy among doctors, nurses and athletic trainers on this issue. The use of ice or cryotherapy helps by decreasing swelling, (anti-inflammatory effect); by reducing or eliminating pain (anesthetic or analgesic effect); and by decreasing blood flow to the area (vasoconstriction). On the other hand, the use of heat or thermal therapy helps ease tightened muscles (muscle relaxation effect) and increase blood flow to the area (vasodilation).

Generally speaking, if the primary goal of the treatment is the reduction of swelling or inflammation and the easing of pain, I would recommend ice therapy; but if the main problem is stiff or tight muscles, the use of heat (and more specifically moist heat) might be more appropriate. The following rules of thumb may be helpful:

1. In almost all injuries ice should be applied immediately and used exclusively for at least the first 48 hours.
2. Regardless if one uses ice or heat, it is important to apply it for only 15-20 minutes a session every one to two hours. (Patients have a tendency to abuse this rule, especially when they are using heating pads).
3. There are some situations where the use of contrast therapy or alternating hot and cold treatments proves effective (especially treating chronic back and neck problems or treating pin injuries 48 hours after the injury occurred).
4. Each case must be treated on an individual basis. That works for one person may not help another person, make adjustments in the therapy if necessary.

If you have any questions or would like to make an appointment please call Dr. Mark Jaehnig, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Road, N. Quincy, 773-4400.

'It's In The Blood'

Hairplace One: A Family-Oriented Business

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Ron Affsa enjoys what he does for a living.

Affsa, 30, a lifelong Quincy resident, runs Russell Edwards Hairplace One with his 37-year-old sister Cheryl. The salon, located at 1 Maple St. in Quincy Center, employs 15 stylists (as well as two receptionists) and offers a variety of today's latest hair care products.

Ask Affsa why he loves his work so much and he'll offer several reasons.

"I like working with people," he said in a recent interview. "A lot of the customers are like family, and so are most of the employees. I also love the business aspect of hairdressing—running the salon, going to seminars, all of it."

"And I love being the boss," he added with a laugh.

But the single greatest reason Affsa draws satisfaction from his chosen field might be something much simpler.

"I think it's in the blood," he said. "It's a family-oriented business."

Indeed it is. The establishment was founded in Boston by Affsa's father, Russell, and uncle, Edward (the reason for the "Russell Edwards" in the salon's name) 42 years ago. At one time, the brothers owned a number of salons in communities such as Boston, Randolph, and others.

Hairplace One first opened in Quincy 23 years ago on Cottage Avenue. Two years later, the Quincy salon moved to Maple Street.

Currently, Ron Affsa said, there is only one other Russell Edwards salon, located in Braintree, which is operated by Edward's son and daughter. "I have five cousins who are hairdressers," Affsa said.

Edward Affsa died this past summer. Russell retired about five years ago "but he still comes in every day to yell at us," his son joked.

Understandably, Affsa, a 1983 graduate of North Quincy High School, credits his father with teaching him most of what he knows about the business.

"I attended a local beauty academy and many, many classes, seminars and hair shows," he noted, "but most of my learning has come from my father."

The family ties go even deeper at Hairplace One: Affsa's mother Annette formerly was employed there as a receptionist, while his wife Laura currently works as a stylist along with him and his sister Cheryl.

Having such a solid family base has undoubtedly helped Hairplace One remain successful in Quincy Center, an area famous for its number of hair salons. Affsa said there are "at least 30" such establishments in the downtown business district.

Staying competitive is not as easy as it used to be, he admitted.

"In the 1980s, all we had to do was open our doors," he said. "We were one of the first full-service salons in the area, and I'd say we were the first 'unisex' salon serving both men and women. Things are different now, but we've maintained a good nucleus of regular customers and picked up a lot of new ones along the way."

Because customers have become more educated about hair care, he added, Hairplace One has gone from a salon that once sold "a couple of bottles of shampoo" to one that offers a full line of products including shampoos, conditioners, mousse, spray gloss and more.

"We have more specialized products now," said Affsa. "Everything is much more sophisticated than it was before, and any product that you need, we have. We used to get our products from one distributor, but now we have eight or nine."

"I tell my stylists, 'Educate the customers. Tell them what they should use.' And I don't care if they buy it here or not. I just want them to use the right products."

Among the brand names sold at the salon are Aveda, Goldwell, KMS, Matrix, Paul Mitchell, Nexxus, Sukesha and others. Affsa said Hairplace One has been offering Aveda skin care and makeup products—which the establishment previously did not carry—for about a month now.

"It's a part of the business I never tapped into before," he said.

Customers can also take advantage of "frequent cutter cards" and other specials offered at the salon.

Affsa credited his staff with being another big part of the Hairplace One success story.

"We have great stylists," he said. "And we're not a commissioned salon—we pay salary—which I think helps the team atmosphere here. People who work here don't mind helping someone else out."

Affsa added that the average length of employment at Hairplace One is eight to 10 years.

"I guess that says something good about me and my sister," he said with a smile.

As an example, he noted that Carla DeAngelo, the salon manager, has worked there for about seven years.

"Carla's like Radar

HAIRPLACE ONE has been open at its current location at 1 Maple St. in Quincy Center for 21 years. From left are Russell Affsa, who originally opened the business in Boston with his late brother Edward 42 years ago; and his daughter Cheryl and son Ron who now run the Quincy salon. (Quincy Sun photo/Robert Bosworth)

O'Reilly," Affsa said in reference to the character from "M*A*S*H," the long-running CBS-TV series. "She's great. She reminds me of everything I forget."

Hairplace One also offers a comfortable environment for men and women alike, with a wide selection of magazines, nine television sets, mini-banners modeled after the Boston Celtics' championship banners that hang from the ceiling and framed pictures of sports legends past and present on the walls.

Looking ahead to the future, Affsa said he would like to expand his business, but not at the expense of his current salon.

"My goal is to eventually branch out and open up some new salons," he said. "But this will always be the one I'll devote most of my time to. I've lived here all my life, and I'd never leave Quincy."

Hairplace One is open Mondays, Tuesdays and Fridays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Wednesdays and Thursdays from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. To make an appointment, call 472-1060.

Council Seeks CARD Designation For NQ

The City Council Monday night passed a resolution supporting the creation of a Commercial Area Revitalization District (CARD) in North Quincy.

The boundaries for the CARD are bounded on the northwest by Glover Avenue, on the northeast by Lunt Street, on the southeast by Buckingham Road and on the southwest by the MBTA Red Line tracks.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers said the move will make it easier for North Quincy merchants apply for federal Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funding for signage and other improvements at their businesses.

Ayers added that the CDBG monies will go hand-in-hand with other funding the area is to receive from the city. Quincy 2000 and Shaw's Supermarkets--the last being part of a mitigation package that was agreed to when the council granted Shaw's permission to build a new store on the North Quincy-Wollaston line--for sidewalk repairs, new streetlights and other improvements.

"The CARD is part of our long-range and short-range goals in North Quincy," said Ayers. "Being a small businessman myself, I know how hard the economy is today."

Planning Director Richard Meade said after the meeting the next step in the process is for the city to file an application with the state this week so that the North Quincy area can receive the official CARD designation. That could "hopefully" happen in two or three weeks, he said, although it could take longer.

Meade added that Quincy Center and Wollaston already have received the designation.

No one spoke or signed in support or opposition of the CARD at a public hearing the council held earlier in the evening.

Presidents Hill Annex

By ART FOLEY

Who has ever heard of Presidents Hill Annex - well, technically it's the area adjacent to Presidents Hill.

It is bounded by Dimmock St., Glendale Rd., and Presidents Lane. There are four properties shown on the map which are still standing today. First is the Clarence Burgin home on the corner of Presidents Lane and Fairmount Way. Second is the Angier home which was originally the Charles Francis Adams home; another house was recently built directly in front of this home.

Then at 51 Presidents Lane is the John Shaw or Pfaffman home which was at some point moved to the lot next door. This home was converted in the 1930's into an eight family and is still as stately as ever. The last home is at 43 Presidents Lane which was built in 1895 by a Boston leather merchant, A.F. Schenkelberger. He subsequently went bankrupt in 1913 and the home was purchased by the Gavin family who occupied it until the 1970's.

I recently wrote about Goffe St., now Presidents Lane and Whalley Rd., which is now Monroe Rd. A little research shows that Goffe, Whalley and Dixwell were regicide (one who kills a king) judges who condemned King Charles I in the 1907 POSTCARD showing Presidents Lane.

1600's. Apparently, city fathers decided that Presidents Lane and Monroe Rd. were more appropriate although Dixwell was never changed.

The following is an interesting quote from the "Swithin Brothers Read Estate Brochure":

"Presidents Lane, which is the route John Adams used to take morning and evening to see the sun in its rising and setting, has long been one of the prettiest of country roads; and on it were built about all the houses which enjoyed the advantages of the hill."

GIVE SKIN A FIGHTING CHANCE

As we head into the season we spend more time indoors, it is worth taking a few moments to consider one of the body's most important, largest, yet often neglected organs: the skin.

In cool weather, the skin can suffer. Indoor air is generally dry, and when skin is dry, it can become itchy, flaky and cracked - conditions that are uncomfortable at best and health hazards in some cases. To keep skin as moist as possible, remember that water and soap are drying agents.

Bathe less frequently, for short periods, using mild soap or soap substitute only in areas where skin contacts skin (armpits, toes, genital area). Apply moisturizer after bathing, while skin is still damp, to trap moisture in.

P.S. Severely cracked, itching, or flaking skin can be a sign of more serious health problems. Talk to your doctor.

Applying baby oil after a shower or bath is another way to help preserve your skin's moisture, especially as one ages. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, Lisa Antonelli and I place a strong emphasis on treating the patient, not just the disease. We are conveniently located at 700 Congress St., in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Enjoy your Columbus Day weekend!

stration has spent money in the past.

"This is an example of where I think the city should be spending the money and where it should be coming from," said Cahill, who has said previously the city could use free cash instead of bonding for certain city projects.

Sheets said he is pleased with the council's support, although he added that it was not unexpected.

"It's really something very difficult for them to vote against," he said.

Sheets said the timetable for the work depends on how quickly the DPW can send out R.F.P. (request for proposals) to which companies interested in the project will respond.

Panthers Attack Friday

Presidents Hold On As Tigers Roar Back

By KERRY BYRNE

Quincy High School football coach Peter Chella insisted that it would be only a matter of time before his young club came together.

Friday night that time arrived as the Presidents (1-2) reeled off 33 first-half points on their way to a 33-28 win over Old Colony League rival Taunton (0-3). The win was the first for the rookie head coach and for the majority of his varsity players.

Though delighted with the victory, Chella looked a bit ragged at the end of the game as the visiting Tigers, who trailed 33-6 at intermission, mounted a furious comeback with 22 points in the second half. They nearly pulled out a win, but were unable to connect on some key passes late in the fourth quarter.

"What should have been an impressive win became a precarious situation," said Chella. "That kid (Taunton quarterback Steve) Santos made things interesting. We can't afford to do that this week against Plymouth South."

The Presidents will host a Panthers (1-2) team Friday night that is led by outstanding quarterback Ryan Fryar. Fryar torched the Taunton defense two weeks ago as his team posted a 42-21 win. This past week Plymouth South lost to North Quincy, 28-7.

If Fryar is on target, and the Quincy offense moves the ball the way it did against Taunton, we could be in for a shootout.

Friday the Presidents began to move the ball on their first possession, but Tigers star Eddie Holt stripped quarterback Mark Glynn and raced 45 yards for a touchdown to put Quincy in a quick 6-0 hole. It was the only drive of the first half in which the Presidents did not score.

Quincy responded immediately with a six-play 54-yard march which ended in a 10-yard touchdown pass from Glynn to Bill Dunn.

Dunn, who appeared to intimidate a Taunton defense that wanted no part in stopping him, caught the ball in the right flat and carried a group of defenders into the end zone.

Tim Santos kicked his first of three extra points to give the Presidents a 7-6 lead.

On the next series, Kevin Connolly picked off a Steve Santos pass and returned it 50 yards for a score.

Dunn (10 carries, 93 yards) and Connolly (16 carries, 96 yards) led a tough ground game. Dunn could have padded his totals had a 52-yard touchdown romp not been called back because of a penalty. Linemen Jason Little, Pete Kolson, Dan Nichol, Greg Fernald, Jake Drohan and Don McCarthy battered the Taunton forward wall and opened a series of huge holes for Dunn and Connolly to run through.

As the score built, Nichol, a sophomore center and tackle, could be heard by people in the stands shouting encouragement to his teammates. ("He isn't shouting, he's bellowing," said one bystander.)

On Quincy's next drive, Connolly went 17 yards off left tackle for his second touchdown to give the Presidents a 19-6 lead.

Glynn closed out the half with touchdown plunges of 1 and 3 yards. His first score was set up by the Presidents' longest offensive play of the year: a 31-yard pass from Glynn to tight end Jon Ryan. The Quincy offense picked up 200 first-half yards and 325 total yards.

The Presidents' stellar defensive play of the previous week carried over into the first half as Taunton mounted just 16 yards of offense. Connolly, Mike Sheffer and Mike Russo had first-half interceptions of Santos, who was continuously harassed. On one so-called drive, Santos was sacked three straight times, twice by sophomore defensive end Steve Wiltshire, who is perhaps Quincy's surprise performer this season. Kolson also had a multiple-sack game from his defensive tackle position.

Sheffer added his second interception, and his third of the season, in the second half.

Dunn, a senior co-captain who has proved himself as the heart of the Quincy defense, played a punishing game from his linebacker position.

Things changed considerably in the second half, however, as the Presidents were unable to keep a handle on the ball. A slew of lost fumbles, coupled with Holt's 70-yard touchdown return of the half's opening kickoff, allowed the Tigers to close the margin.

Santos threw two touchdown passes to Chad Soderberg and two two-point conversions to Kevin Shumaker to bring the Tigers to within 33-28.

A fumble gave Taunton the ball at their own 27 with 1:42 to play. One wide open receiver dropped a sure reception at the Quincy 25. Two plays later Santos overthrew an open receiver at the 5, which set up a fourth and 5 play at the Quincy 46 with under a minute to go. Santos completed a pass to fullback Jared Williams, but Dunn made a big stick to stop him inches shy of the first-down marker and preserve the win.

Youth Football

Oriola, Gardner Lead Undefeated Elks

The undefeated West Quincy Elks rolled to a 22-12 win over the Quincy Point Panthers Sunday.

The Elks are 3-0.

Jason Oriola opened the game with an 85-yard kickoff return for a touchdown. Wide receiver Jason Sparrow scored a touchdown on a reverse play while quarterback Matt Gardner added a score for the Elks.

James Shea for another.

The Panthers were led by the play of James Bennett, Mark Robertson, Brendan Donahue and Larry and Keith Antonellis. Robertson, the smallest kid on the field, was outstanding defensively.

Last week the Elks topped the Manets, 34-14.

GETTING IT STRAIGHT

If an automobile pulls to either side when braking on a straight and level road, it is time to have the auto technician inspect the brakes. Stepping on the brake pedal causes the hydraulic system to apply increased pressure at all four wheels. Because the front brakes generally do most of the braking, a defect in the front brakes may be more noticeable. For a smooth, even stop to be accomplished, the disc-brake calipers must squeeze the rotors with the same amount of pressure all around. If a rusted or worn brake caliper were to drag or not squeeze properly, the result can be uneven braking friction that can produce uneven braking power. In the meantime, drivers who detect a pull to one side while braking should reduce their speed to make controlling the car easier.

Hint: If brake pull is caused by a loss of brake fluid, the brake-warning light will eventually go on.

The ASE Certified technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO will do their part in checking out every system in your car, including your brakes. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550), we look forward to meeting you and giving your car the same level of personal attention we give our own. Our All-Data CD ROM manual system keeps our staff up-to-date with the very latest service bulletins for your car or truck. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." North Quincy Wins At Plymouth South, 28-7

Another 100-yard effort by Brian (Muskie) Walsh, a couple of key turnovers and heavy pressure on opposing quarterback Ryan Fryar helped lift the North Quincy High School football team to a 28-7 win over Plymouth South.

The victory against the Old Colony League opponent was the first of the season for the Red Raiders (1-2).

"It was just an outstanding team effort," said Red Raiders coach Ken McPhee. "We needed this. It was a big win for us, especially psychologically. The kids came off the bus ready to play and they played hard."

They will have to double their efforts Friday night as they travel to Barnstable (3-0) for a stern test against the OCL power. The Red Raiders of the Cape are coming off a 14-6 win over Weymouth.

Against Plymouth South (1-2), North Quincy's Matt Kiely set up the first score of the game with an interception of strong armed quarterback Fryar. Fryar was coming off a three-touchdown performance in a 42-21 win over Taunton the week before.

Kiely, a senior, has done a superb job on both sides of the ball this season. His pick gave his team the ball on the Plymouth 42 yard line. Senior Sean Johnson closed the short drive with a 13-yard jaunt. J.R. Rendle kicked the first of four extra points.

It appeared the Raiders defense might be in for a struggle against Fryar, as he answered on the next possession with a 38-yard scoring strike to Adam Close. Fryar booted the extra point to tie the game at 7-7.

However the defense rose to the occasion the rest of the way by applying tremendous pressure on the quarterback. Junior Charlie Plaskasovitis, who has been perhaps the best North Quincy defender this season, registered three sacks. Chris Ritchie, who had a monster outing, chalked up two and a half sacks and Walsh added two. Fryar was able to complete just two more passes on the evening.

"We brought pressure from everywhere," said McPhee.

Paul Greeley, who stepped into the secondary due to injuries, helped lead a group which blanketed the Plymouth South receivers.

The second touchdown was set up by a Tom Coughlin punt which pinned the Panthers at their own 1 yard line. The Panthers were unable to move the ball and then botched the punt attempt. Senior co-captain Ritchie fell on the ball in the end zone and Rendle added the kick to give the Raiders a 14-7 advantage.

PLAYING QUARTERBACK FOR the Red Raiders this year are, from left, Tom Coughlin, J.R. Rendle, Tim Semchenko and Chris Bregoli. Rendle leads the victory club. He also filled in at kicker for Jim Finn Friday night against Plymouth South and was 4 for 4 on extra points.

Walsh closed the scoring with an 11-yard run and a 5-yard catch from Rendle in the second half. They were his second and third touchdowns of the year and capped an impressive 22 carry, 154-yard outing. Walsh has topped the century mark in all three games and has 399 yards on 66 carries for the season.

Walsh was joined in the backfield by Johnson and Tim Zaniboni, both of whom had their best days running the ball.

Rendle had his best game of the young season at quarterback as he completed 4 of 5 passes and threw for one touchdown.

Center Joe McCarthy led an offensive line which paved the way for the strong offensive effort. "Joe was banged up but he performed out of his sneakers," said McPhee.

McCarthy was joined on the line by Eric Malames, Paul Picciano, Norm Connell and Steve Stent-iford, each of whom drew praise from the coach.

"The whole offensive and defensive lines did outstanding jobs," he said.

The Silver Anniversary edition of the City of Quincy Tennis Tournament Championships is history.

The father and son duo of Dennis and Jerome Wright, newcomers to the Quincy tennis scene, entered with a bang. Jerome, a North Quincy High School student, became champion in the men's singles, capturing the "Lionel Shine Buckley Cup," defeating a tough Paul Carty 6-0, 6-0, while his dad Dennis defeated multi-champion 7-5, 6-3, in the men's singles over 35.

Quincy Tennis Club President Bob Yee came away victorious in his first try at the tournament by defeating Randy Rapalje 6-4, 6-2, in the Men's B.

Recreation Director Barry Welch praised the work of Tournament Director John Franceschini who again created a draw that treated the city to two weeks of spectacular tennis. Sports Spotlight

By KERRY BYRNE

Now that football season is in full swing it is time to discuss those uniquely American rituals known as road-tripping and tailgating.

This is particularly pertinent this week as North Quincy fans will make the first long trek of the season to Barnstable Friday night.

First of all, let's define the two key terms:

Roadtrip (v) - the act of putting as many loud, obnoxious often-times delirious people in as small a vehicle as possible then driving long, often interminable distances for the sole purpose of screaming yourself silly and getting beat up at an opposing team's stadium. Veteran roadtrippers frown upon maps, compasses, guidebooks and other such implements which would aid in finding the best possible route to your destination.

Tailgate (v) - a usually stationary act which follows the roadtrip and immediately precedes the actual football game at which you are likely to get beat up and/or chastised loudly by families with small children. A tailgate will include adult beverages, soft drinks for the kiddies, large amounts of high-fat, high-cholesterol foods such as nachos, pork (the other white meat) ribs and, for the early-morning tailgater, bacon, eggs and home fries cooked in the bacon grease. Veteran tailgaters frown upon leafy vegetable matter.

It should be added that a proper tailgate will include music, games, partial nudity and general all-around revelry which, in non-tailgating instances, would lead to incarceration and/or damnation.

Roadtripping and tailgating may sound easy, but experience has proven there are a number of things that can ruin your weekend. Here to guide you is a list of dos and don'ts. Years of research and miles of highway have gone into compiling this list. Do not question its veracity, or scorn shall be heaped upon you:

Do Not:

1. Attempt a three-point turn on a small street with a 35-foot RV. It is hard to hear the sound of a compact automobile being crushed above the din of an RV's interior.
2. Run through the cornfields of some midwestern state yelling 'Build it, he will come!' I know...this sounds cool. However, be warned of the time honored mid-American tradition of shooting the people who trample your crops.
3. Stand up on a stool in a Knoxville bar and yell, 'Hey, anyone know where I can find a redneck!'
4. After a big win, do not strip down to your boxer shorts on the dance floor of a nightclub and shout 'We're No. 1! We're No. 1!'
5. Break into the Carrier Dome at 3 in the morning and attempt to play football.
6. Sleep underneath your car, in a cardboard box or with a member of the same sex.
7. Yell 'Hey turn around!' to the driver of an oversized vehicle containing 18 people, then snap a picture with a bright flashbulb as he attempts to maintain control on a pitch-black stretch of rural highway.
8. Party with anyone who has the word 'The' as a middle name.
9. Tell a group of underage girls in a Tennessee bar that you are 'Phil Packer, a swinging kid from another high school.'

Do:

1. Bring a change of clothes (toothbrush and deodorant are optional).
 2. Make sure you are actually in the bathroom when you begin to relieve yourself.
 3. Practice this pickup line: 'Yeah, I am kind of short for a Heisman Trophy candidate.'
 4. Stop to admire the foliage.
 6. If you spend hundreds of dollars on dead animal meats (hamburger, steak, chicken), do remember to bring a grill on which to cook them.
 7. Bring random people on your roadtrip. The best roadtrips usually end with this conversation: 'Your friend Al was really cool.'
- 'Al's not my friend. I thought he was your friend.'
- 'I've never seen him before in my life.'
- 'Neither have I. Hey! Who brought that kid Al? Anyone? Anyone!'
8. Remember that the excuse 'Golly-gee officer, I didn't know Ann Arbor had an open container policy' will not go over well.
 9. Make sure you have a designated driver.

For years this problem has dogged mankind: What to do when you need a haircut during Monday Night Football?

Well, finally there's an answer. Go to Nanci's Barbershop, 21 Elm St., Braintree.

The shop, run by Nanci Ducharme, keeps its doors open to midnight on Monday and the televisions tuned to the game so that football fans in need of a haircut can get coiffed and see all the action.

Nanci, who got the idea from football fan employee Lenny Mortel, said the response so far has been "excellent." Give the shop a call at 843-0432.

Soccer

Focused Red Raiders Top Presidents

The North Quincy High School girls soccer team posted a 5-2 win over Quincy at Veterans' Memorial Stadium in the first of the two annual meetings between the crosstown rivals.

The win allowed the Red Raiders to up their surprising record to 5-4-1 and keep alive their tournament hopes. Over the past decade the North girls team has rarely been able to mount more than a couple of wins during a season.

The Presidents, who were hampered by a number of key injuries, fell to 1-7.

The difference for the Red Raiders this year is "the coach," said senior co-captain Liz Fitzpatrick in reference to first-year head man Paul Bregoli.

"We're more focused now and everyone takes it more seriously. The focus is on making the tournament. It was a big deal to beat Quincy but it's a bigger deal to make the tournament," she said.

Despite the North Quincy focus, it was Quincy which took control early as Jessica DiBona scored off an assist from Erin Flaherty minutes into the contest.

The Red Raider answered with two first-half goals to take the lead.

Freshman Betsy Stone scored at 17:20 off a pass from senior co-captain Kristen Kelley to tie the contest.

Hillary O'Donoghue put the Red Raiders ahead at the 31-minute mark. Laurie Flynn assisted.

The upstart North Quincy girls soccer team played a defining game last week as they battled to a 1-1 tie with Old Colony League power Bridgewater-Raynham.

The host Trojans entered the contest with a sparkling 6-1-1 record. Coupled with a loss to

"I thought Quincy came out and played very well, especially in the first 10 minutes," said Bregoli. "But I told the kids it's not a 10-minute game."

In the second half, Stone scored her sixth goal of year to make it 3-1. Flynn again assisted. Kelley put the Red Raiders up 4-1 with a high lofting shot that went over the reach of Quincy goalie Mary Kelly.

With 10:12 left to play, senior co-captain Liz Fitzpatrick iced the game with North Quincy's fifth goal.

Perhaps the prettiest goal of the contest was the final one as Quincy's Kim Mackey booted home a shot from in tight after a series of hard, crisp passes.

Senior co-captain Kelly Howard made a break down the right sideline and fed sophomore Kara McSweeney in the deep right corner. McSweeney turned quickly and booted a cross in front of the net that Mackey fielded cleanly and quickly put in the back of the net.

However, it was too little, too late for the Presidents.

"I think we were hurt a lot by injuries," said Quincy coach Sonya Herring. "One kid (Marissa Ross) got a concussion in our last game against Silver Lake and a couple of kids have knee problems."

"But overall, I think North Quincy played a good game," Herring's club was led on the field by the play of Janet Kane, Molly Jacobs, Howard and Flaherty.

The Presidents had a number of opportunities to score in the second half but were denied by Raiders keeper Lisa Bragg. Her best stop came 15 minutes into the second half when she made a diving save as Quincy's Jacobs and McSweeney pressed the attack in the goal area. Bragg also made a tough stop on a shot by Kerry Duffy as Andrea Gill crashed the net.

Presidents keeper Mary Kelly also came up big in the second half. Her best moment came when she stopped back-to-back bullet shots by Kristen Kelley. The attacker got the ball back a third time and shot on net, but Quincy sopho more defender Jessica DiBona made the stop and cleared the area.

"Quincy played well," said Bregoli. "Particularly Kelly Howard. She's a tough player and you have to watch her wherever she goes."

Bragg came up with two outstanding saves to preserve the tie.

Kelly Keegan, Jocelyn West, Rachael Povey, Laura Shea, Jessie Cervantes, Amanda Rork and Betsy Stone helped lead the inspired Red Raiders.

Volleyball

North Quincy Class Of The Northeast

There is no question that the North Quincy High School volleyball team is among the elite of eastern Mass.

Secure in that knowledge, coach Jim Rendle and his Red Raiders traveled to Fox Lane High School in Bedford, NY over the weekend to take on the most powerful teams from across the Northeast.

The Red Raiders (seniors Linda Jellison, Shannon McCauley, Rachael Repoff, Sara Stanton and Joanna Timbone; juniors Erica Crawford, Sarah Downing, Kerry Ginty, Kerry Jellison and Courtney Mitchell; and sophomores Megan O'Donnell and Kerry Skehan) can know lay claim to being among the best in the nation after beating the host team, 2-1, in the tournament's championship match.

In the title contest, the Red Raiders took the first game, 15-9 before falling, 15-11, to set up the decisive game. The Red Raiders trailed, 8-7, in the rubber game due to a series of what the North Quincy faithful considered hometown calls.

However, the Raiders were able to regroup and post a 15-13 win to claim the match and the tournament championship.

The champs did not take the easy road. In the quarterfinals they beat tournament favorite Horseheads High School of upstate New York, 15-6.

The Red Raiders were an unknown quantity until that victory touched off a buzz in the crowd at the one-day event.

Other high schools that participated were Paramus Catholic, North Rockland, Oceanside, Burnt Hills, Baldwin, Clarkstown North, Clark town South, Roslyn, Newburgh Free Academy, Lynbrook, Jay, Monroe-Woodbury, Miniskill Valley and Cobleskill-Richmondville.

Marcia L. Olinto, 51

Ward 1 City Council Candidate;
Longtime Account Executive

A private funeral service was held for Marcia L. Olinto, 51, of Quincy. Miss Olinto died Sept. 26 at home after a long illness.

She was a Ward 1 candidate for the City Council in 1989, losing the election to Peter Kolson who still holds that seat.

A former account executive for Boston shipping lines, she was considered an unofficial historian for the Port of Boston. She frequently received calls from people with questions about the city's shipping operations.

After graduating from Quincy High School, she went to work part-time for the Farrell Steamship Co. as a receptionist and worked her way up to account executive. Among the duties she performed was selling space on American cargo ships headed for foreign ports.

Miss Olinto established the local office for the Lykes Brothers Steamship Co. in Quincy and later moved it to Boston.

She worked for a number of shipping firms.

While seeking the Ward 1 City Council seat, she said her efforts would be to resolve issues that affect all residents of her ward. Environmental issues such as transportation of hazardous waste were among her primary concerns.

Although she lost the election, she said at the time the experience of running for office was something she wouldn't have wanted to miss. She said she particularly enjoyed campaigning door-to-door and getting reacquainted

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

The late Dale Carnegie was one of the most successful men in his field of all time. He believed in courtesy. He practiced it and this is what he said about courtesy . . . "Courtesy will do wonderful things for you . . . first, it will help you get ahead. Discourtesy is so rank and rife that the man or woman who radiates courtesy is not going to have much trouble forging ahead. He is going to have very little competition . . . second, you will have much fun being courteous. You will enjoy your work more. The courtesy you express will please your associates, and this, in turn, will kindle a warm reflected glow in your own heart . . . third, you will consciously develop better manners because you are courteous . . . finally, smile, treat everyone as you want to be treated."

The place to start practicing courtesy is in the home and school. If every member of a family, every student and teacher uses courtesy in all daily activities, it will not be hard to succeed in life because courtesy will be "built-in."

This I remember from earlier years: "Hearts like doors, open with ease with these few words: Thank you, and I love you."

All this goes right back to the Golden Rule, which in one form or another, is taught in all religions.

Operators To Answer Police Dept. Phones

operators will direct callers to the individual departments within the police department to help make the transition period easier and will continue to serve "until I decide otherwise."

The mayor said residents find the new system to be impersonal as well as confusing.

"I don't like voice mail myself," Sheets noted. "I don't like it because I'm usually in a hurry. But it's also very impersonal."

Several councillors expressed frustration over the new system Monday night. Councillor Timothy Cahill said he has already heard from a number of residents on the matter.

"I've gotten many complaints about this, and I'm not even a ward councillor," he said. "I imagine the ward councillors have maybe received even more complaints."

Councillors also said the initial decision to change the main number at the police department was a bad decision.

"It kind of discourages people from calling the police department," said Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan. "Everyone in the city knows that old (479-1212) number."

Councillors added that it would be a waste of money to have a new telephone number painted on police cruisers, since the cars recently were repainted.

Councillors agreed to have Brennan and Police Chief Francis Mullen attend the next council meeting to discuss the issue, although they said that might not be necessary if the situation is resolved before then.

Brennan said two weeks ago the city had to delay implementing the new system--which has been used by all other city departments other than Quincy Hospital since January 1992--until last summer because it had to wait for the department's contract with AT&T to expire.

Brennan said once people reach the individual department they are calling, they can be given direct lines to dial in the future to reach certain individuals, which ultimately makes the system more convenient for city residents. In addition, implementing the system at the police department will save the city about $125,000 a year, including about $100,000 for four telephone operators.

Officials have said that citywide, the system annually saves between $400,000 and $500,000.

The four operators were not fired, Brennan noted. They were moved into other part-time positions available at the police department after the new system was implemented.

Larkin's Status Uncertain

Fabrizio Receives Rennie Endorsement

Ward 4 City Councillor Thomas Fabrizio's bid for re-election got a boost this week from Gregg Rennie, one of three men who challenged him in last month's preliminary election.

Rennie, 29, financial adviser, announced Monday he is throwing his support to Fabrizio, 40, a social worker, rather than 20-year-old Michael D'Amico, a college student and part-time telemarketer.

D'Amico topped the ballot last month while Fabrizio, Rennie and Michael Larkin, 51, a juvenile caseworker placed second, third and fourth respectively. D'Amico and Fabrizio will square off in the city's final election Nov. 7.

Fabrizio said he is pleased with Rennie's endorsement and has been trying to contact Larkin to see where he stands. At press time, Larkin could not be reached for comment.

Rennie, who described the city as "not ready for a 20-year-old college student" as a city councillor, said he will not actively campaign for Fabrizio but he will ask his supporters to vote for him in November.

D'Amico said he has enough experience to be the Ward 4 councillor, something that showed when voters went to the polls last month.

Officials for the Quincy Partnership, which is spearheading the statue effort, hope the statue can be erected sometime next summer. The bronze statue will be erected on a site in Quincy Center as a lasting tribute to the only woman in history to be the wife of one U.S. president and the mother of another--and an early advocate of women's rights.

The "bigger than life" statue design depicts Abigail Adams and her young son, John Quincy. Abigail has one hand on John Quincy's shoulder and the other is holding a book.

Keohane said the statue design is appropriate for several reasons.

"This statue shows John Quincy as a youth. It exemplifies Abigail Adams as a symbol of a single parent raising young John Quincy. Being a mother was among her greatest attributes.

"We thought this design had a lot of sublimable messages with her. The hand on John Quincy's shoulder, for example, shows the power she gave to him."

Keohane noted the first statue design showed Abigail alone. "Abigail looks much warmer with John Quincy than she did when she was alone."

He also said including John Quincy puts the sixth President of the United States much more into the public eye. "We have nothing in the city for John Quincy Adams. He has no notoriety."

Considered, perhaps, the most appropriate site for the statue is on Hancock St. next to the United First Parish Church also known as the Church of Presidents.

The tombs of Abigail, her husband, second President John Adams; their son, sixth President John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa Catherine, are in the crypt of the church.

The pew in which John Quincy Adams worshipped in still there today.

The Quincy Partnership has commissioned noted sculptor Lloyd Lillie of Newton to create the statue which, it is believed, will be the first in the nation to honor a First Lady.

Earlier this year, the Partnership launched a fundraising campaign with a goal of $60,000. To date, the statue campaign has raised nearly $22,000.

Public Hearing Oct. 16 Officials Leaning Toward Mechanic St. Concourse Option

City officials are leaning toward one of two plans for the east link, or second phase, of the proposed Quincy Center Concourse.

Both Mayor James Sheets and Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton said Tuesday they are inclined to go with the Mechanic Street option, the plan that affects the least number of businesses.

The City Council will hold a public hearing on the concourse project Monday, Oct. 16 at 7 p.m. in the Council Chambers at City Hall.

Officials have said the proposed roadway is crucial to the future of Quincy Center and will revitalize the downtown business district. The first phase, or west link of the concourse would link Burgin Parkway with Hancock Street while the second phase, or east link, would run from Hancock Street down to the Hancock Lot parking area, Sheets said.

Whitman and Howard Engineers of Wellesley has designed two alternative routes for the east link. The first, known as the Mechanic Street option, would involve the widening of Mechanic Street by displacing an American Legion post, three businesses and three multi-unit dwellings.

The second plan, known as the Revere Road option, would spare the Legion hall but would displace one Mechanic Street dwelling and up to 11 businesses.

"Obviously, I am sensitive to the dislocations of the businesses and I am leaning toward the first plan," said Sheets. The mayor will make the final recommendation on the project, which is being funded by state and federal monies.

Colton agreed.

"That option is certainly the least disruptive," he said.

Colton said the city plans to work with any affected businesses to help them relocate to other Quincy Center locations.

Some members of the Quincy Center Concourse Advisory Committee (CAC) have disagreed and voiced opposition to both plans, saying both are too disruptive. The CAC was formed to come up with suggestions for the project

11% Increase Over Three Years Eight Councillors Support Proposed City Pay Raises

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Eight city councillors have voiced support of Mayor James Sheets' proposed pay raises for the city's unions.

Their support means the raises will be passed at a future meeting, since the support of only two-thirds of the nine-member council is needed to make the raises official.

The mayor's proposal, unveiled last week, would raise the salaries of city employees by 11 percent over the next three years. The raises would be the largest for the unions since the mayor first took office in 1990.

Contracts with all of the city's 21 unions expired June 30. At press time, Sheets said the unions representing the police and school departments were among those who have not yet come to an agreement with the city.

Sheets added that the city's unions have helped put Quincy in its current strong fiscal position by agreeing to switch to a single health insurance carrier in 1993 and also by accepting minimal or no raises in recent years. Therefore, the employees have earned the proposed raises, he said.

"They have made a major contribution to the present financial stability of the city," he said. "They've been a major player in bringing costs under control."

Sheets said a number of factors, including past co-operation from the unions, smart budgeting by the City Council and a strong year for city receipts, have made it possible to offer the raises this year without jeopardizing his plan to not raise property taxes for the second consecutive year.

According to City Clerk Joseph Shea, six of nine

Permanent Vision Loss Unlikely Cheney Injures Eye In Weekend Accident

City Council President Michael Cheney had a scary experience over the weekend when he suffered an injury to his right eye.

Cheney said he was helping out some campaign supporters Saturday by sawing a stake on a re-election sign when a piece of a steel braid on the saw came flying off and struck him directly in the eye.

"My eye started bleeding, and it put me in shock," he said. "It was really scary. And 24 hours later, it started hemorrhaging."

Cheney, who at press time had visited Massachusetts Eye & Ear in Boston every day since the accident, said he received some welcome news from doctors Tuesday: He likely will not suffer any permanent vision loss.

Cheney added that he is still experiencing some blurriness and double vision and said he was scheduled to find out for certain about any possible vision loss today (Thursday).

Foot Patrols Return To Brewers Corner

Police foot patrols have begun in the Brewers Corner neighborhood of South and West Quincy, announces Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio.

For decades, the Brewers Corner foot patrol was a vital part of the Quincy Police Department's presence in the area, but the widespread use of patrol cars, combined with budget cuts, resulted in the foot patrol being eliminated.

Fabrizio, chairman of the council's Finance Committee, said the city's budget surplus of over $5 million has allowed the restoration of the foot patrol, or "walking beat" to the neighborhood.

Fabrizio has been informed by Chief Francis Mullen that the new foot patrol will target burglaries, auto theft, drug activity, graffiti and other vandalism, underage drinking and rowdy behavior by youths who frequent the street corners and parks in the area.

Particular areas will receive frequent checks by the foot patrol officer. Those locations include, Shea Park and the Granite Workers Memorial, Kincaide Park, Lincoln-Hancock Elementary School and the Sterling Middle School. Fabrizio announced that some arrests have already been made in the two weeks that the patrol has been in service.

Fabrizio, who worked 15 years as a civilian employee of the police department prior to being elected, has been a longtime advocate for increased police presence in South and West Quincy. Over the past two years, the Quincy Police Department has added 32 new patrol officers to the force.

Prior to hiring the new officers, the South and West Quincy area, usually covered by three one officer patrol cars, often saw one of the three units removed from service due to manpower shortages. Fabrizio began to work closely with Chief Mullen in order to ensure that all three units were manned around the clock, seven days a week.

In addition, two of the three patrol cars covering Ward 4 were recently upgraded with 1995 models equipped with on-board computers and the Lo/Jack stolen vehicle recovered system.

"It has always been my top priority to ensure that Ward 4 has adequate police coverage and that the officers assigned here have the latest in law enforcement technology at their disposal," Fabrizio said.

Limited Parking Available

To Quincy Shopping Areas And Other Stops Senior Shuttle Service To Start By December

City Council President Michael Cheney announces that a senior citizen shuttle service to designated Quincy shopping areas and other stops is expected to begin late next month or early December.

The van service will pick up seniors three times a day and take them to designated shopping centers such as Shaw's, Roche Bros. and Wal-Mart's as well as downtown Quincy Center, Wollaston Center, Crown Colony and other designated stops including the North Quincy shopping area.

Six months later, vans will pick up seniors at community centers as well as seniors along the designated routes.

Cheney said, "We are one step closer to the establishment of a senior citizen shuttle service". According to a survey held over the summer, most seniors are willing to pay $1 for a round-trip ticket to take them shopping or to a doctor's appointment. Cheney said that will be the price that will be charged the seniors.

Many of the senior citizens who responded to the survey said they would like to have a low-step van in order to access the van easily. Cheney said all vans would be low-step and many will be chair-lift vans.

Cheney also announced that a Board of Directors has been established. They are Mayor Sheets or his representative; Joseph Mannarino, from Quincy 2000; a representative from the Council on Aging; Jake Comer from Quincy Housing Authority or his representative; Cheney or his designee. Two businessmen from Quincy will also be selected to serve on the board as well as a representative from each of the community centers and senior buildings.

License Board To Host S.E.L.L. Meeting Nov. 15

The Quincy License Board will host its first seminar called "Strategies for Enforcement and Liquor Licensing" (S.E.L.L.) Nov. 15 at 7 p.m. at Broad Meadows Junior High School.

The announcement was made by chairman Joseph Shea at Tuesday's license board meeting.

Shea said each year, the Massachusetts Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission (A.B.C.C.) conducts seminars throughout the state on various issues and strategies involved with the responsible selling and serving of alcohol.

Participants will include all licensees in the City of Quincy, the Police Department, government officials and many other interested parties. Shea said that many others could benefit by attending including board secretaries and town counsels.

Those interested in attending the seminar may contact the City Clerk's Office or Det. Sgt. Richard Laracy, liquor inspector for the Quincy Police Department.

Your Social Security

When Retirement Is Not . . .

By CAROL BOYLE

Retirement is not everyone's cup of tea. While some look forward to complete freedom from the workplace, others find that working fulfills some aspects of their lives. Some need the additional income, while others simply need to have the hours filled. In either case, you should know that you can do some work and still receive your Social Security retirement benefits.

Partial benefits may be payable when you're employed and eligible for retirement benefits (the earliest age is 62) or widow(er)s benefits (at age 60 or older). If you're under age 70, you'll be subject to an annual earnings limit. If your earnings exceed the limit, part of your benefits will be withheld. In 1995, the earnings limit is $8,160 if you're under age 65; $1 is withheld for every $2 you earn over that amount. If you're over 65 but not yet 70, $1 will be withheld for every $3 of earnings that exceed $11,280. If you're 70 or older, you can collect full benefits no matter how much you earn.

Here's an example of how this could work for you. Let's say, you are 63 and eligible to receive $800 a month in Social Security benefits—that's $9,600 a year. You have a job that pays you $20,160, which is $12,000 over the 1995 earnings limit, we would withhold $1 from your Social Security benefit for every $2 you earn over the limit. In your case, we would withhold $6,000 of your benefits. However, you would receive a $3,600 from Social Security while earning $20,160 on your job. Your total income from work and Social Security for the year would be $23,760.

Next year, if you were still working, you could be getting even more money. The annual earnings limit rises each year. Therefore, a smaller amount of your earnings would be withheld if you exceed the limit. And, because Social Security refigures benefits each year to consider additional earnings, you could get a higher benefit.

If you want to find out if you can work and collect Social Security benefits at the same time, call the toll-free number, 1-800-772-1213 (between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m.) to make an appointment to talk with a Social Security representative.

(Carol Boyle is Social Security manager in Quincy.)

O.J. And One Last Question

The O.J. Simpson murder trial wasn't held in Quincy and to the best of my knowledge he has never been here.

That eliminates any Quincy connection to this so-called trial of the century other than that Quincy residents—like people across the country—are still talking and arguing about the not guilty verdict.

Everyone everywhere seems to have an opinion so I hope you don't mind if I stray a bit this week and offer my thoughts on something that happened 3,000 miles away.

As an old police and court reporter who has covered a few murder trials in my day, I find it difficult to agree with the jury on this one.

I think sufficient evidence was there for a conviction despite that rotten apple cop, Mark Furhman.

That's my opinion which, of course, isn't going to change anything.

A jury of his peers found him not guilty and now, in the eyes of the law, he is not guilty and legally, always will be not guilty. He couldn't be tried again or sentenced even if he eventually confessed: "I did it." That would be double jeopardy.

It is the prosecution's job to convince a jury that a defendant is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

The defense succeeded in planting doubt—reasonable or not—among jurors, using racism as its pointed spade.

But what bothers me as much as the verdict if not more is what happened afterward. The celebration. The whooping it up. The champagne guzzling. It was like their team had just won the Super Bowl or the World Series. Like the Black Team had beaten the White Team. And the cheerleader was racism.

Forgotten in the jubilation was the fact that two people had been brutally murdered and left in pools of blood by a savage killer.

It wasn't a day for partying. Sure, if you were an O.J. supporter and believer, you could feel happy for him. But New Year's Eve it wasn't.

The big party at Simpson's home just didn't register well with most people. What about the two victims? Did anyone think of them as the champagne flowed?

And if I were O.J. I think I would have gone straight to my two children instead of to a big celebration bash.

Now, O.J. is taking his story to television. He was scheduled for an appearance last night (Wednesday) on "Dateline NBC." What next? A round of the talk shows?

He earlier had a chance to tell his story—in the courtroom. But he didn't.

Under the law, the fact he did not take the witness stand should not be held against him. It is his right to testify or not to testify.

SIMPSON

But a lot of people would have felt better about that verdict if he had testified—and been cross-examined. Answering questions on TV is one thing, but answering them in court—under oath—is something else.

The trial is over and the jury said he was not guilty. And, under the law, that's that.

But it will be a long time before it's over in the court of public opinion. And those scenes of partying will be remembered for a long time.

The division between blacks and whites seems much wider now.

Don't blame the racism eruption all on Furhman. Give Johnnie Cochran his share of credit.

And one haunting question remains: If O.J. didn't do it, who did?

BACK IN QUINCY: Tom Gilmartin, who served as Ward 6 councillor back in the 1940's and has been predicting election results ever since, has dragged out and dusted off his crystal ball for Nov. 7.

Here are his picks for the City Council:

Councillor at-large finish in order: Paul Harold, Tim Cahill, Mike Cheney, Larry Chretien. Ward 1: Peter Kolson. Ward 2: Dan Raymond. Ward 3: Pat McDermott. Ward 4: Michael D'Amico. Ward 5: Steve Durkin. (No contest is Ward 6 where Bruce Ayers is unopposed.)

Gilmartin says he had 12 out of 13 winners in last year's state election bringing his life-time batting average up to 96.2 percent.

(These predictions, incidentally, as the saying goes, are those of Tom Gilmartin and not necessarily those of this column.)

SCHOOL COMMITTEEMAN Sean Barry has a birthday celebration fundraiser on tap tonight (Thursday), 7 to 10 p.m. at The Fours, Cottage Ave., Quincy Center. Tickets $15 per person and $25 per couple. (It's his 31st birthday.)

PATRICK MCDERMOTT, candidate for the Ward 3 city council seat, also has a fundraiser tonight (Thursday) from 6 to 9 p.m. at Pat Flanagan's, Parkway. Donation, $10.

FORMER SENATOR Paul Harold, candidate for City Councillor at-large, has a campaign brunch set for Saturday, 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center, Quarry St. Donation $10.

AND, STEVEN REILLY, running for the Ward 5 City Council seat, has a fundraiser set for Wednesday, Oct. 18, 7 p.m. to 10 p.m., at The Fours Restaurant. Donation is $15.

'Tot Time' Program Begins Oct. 20 and their parents.

"Tot Time," for children ages 3 to 5, will feature one and a half hours of supervised play one day each week in the Ward 4 Community Center located at the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center. It is open to all Quincy residents and begins Friday, Oct. 20.

"This program is designed to provide an opportunity for increased socialization among parents and children through games and activities conducted by recreation staff," said Recreation Director Barry Welch. "Last year was the first year of this program and it was very well received, particularly during the inclement weather of the winter months."

Welch thanked the Ward 4 Civic Association for their assistance in organizing this activity.

The cost is $14 for a seven-week period. The program will be held from 10 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. or 11:45 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. Enrollment is limited and will be taken on a first-come, first-serve basis at the Recreation Department, 100 Southern Artery, beginning Thursday, Oct. 9.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1921 POSTCARD is a view of Ocean Street in Atlantic before all the house lots were developed. Some of the first houses built in this area were used as summer cottages. The then popular Atlantic Beach was just at the end of this block as was a public landing for mooring small boats. Electric street cars from the Atlantic railroad depot turned left off Billings Street onto East Squantum Street where you can see the tracks in the foreground. The electric, as they were called then, went on to the park at the end of Squantum.

Senior Housing Development Will Augment Marina Bay

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I was very pleased to find out that something was finally going to be done with portions of the land at Marina Bay. I am excited by the prospect of such a worthwhile development such as senior care and housing coming to the Marina Bay area.

A senior housing development at Marina Bay will most certainly become an asset to the community as well as the City of Quincy in general. Marina Bay and the Squantum area residents already foster a strong sense of community, and I feel that by welcoming such a development we will strengthen the area and the community at large.

I am sure that a complex of this nature will not disrupt the integrity of the area. On the contrary, I believe that senior housing will enhance its integrity, and augment Marina Bay.

Thanks Participants In Breast Cancer Walk

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On behalf of the American Cancer Society, I want to thank everyone from the South Shore who participated as a walker or a pledger for the Making Strides Against Breast Cancer walk Sept. 24 in Boston.

It was wonderful to one of the more than 15,000 people from across the state who walked at this event, bringing us within reach of our $1.5 million goal. Every dollar raised will fund American Cancer Society programs of breast cancer research, education and detection and patient services.

Our work on Making Strides is not yet finished, though. We encourage everyone who walked to collect any outstanding pledges as soon as possible, and send them to the American Cancer Society at 294 Pleasant St., Stoughton, MA 02072. Quincy's Yesterdays

Della Chiesa Puts Accent On Positive

By PAUL HAROLD

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa told 75 persons at his campaign headquarters on Hancock St. his campaign will stress the positive. He said he would emphasize his accomplishments as a city official and his plans for the future.

"The only time I intend to answer my opponent is to bring out the other side of an issue," he said.

The latest issue he and his opponent Council President James McIntyre disagreed on was the use of the former Washington School. McIntyre wanted it reopened for school office space, saving money by relocating central office staff from rented space.

FIRE AT CITY HOSPITAL

A painter's butane torch caused an estimated $3,000 damage to the facade of the administration building this week.

It was not necessary to evacuate any patients and the damage inside was limited to light smoke damage to intern's quarters on the third floor.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said the fire started at the base of the wooden columns being scraped with the heat rising to the top where dry wood inside was ignited.

COLLETTI MEMORIAL PLANNED

A memorial to Quincy architect Carroll Colletti was slated for the Coply Society Gallery on Newbury St. in Boston, showing both his architectural and artistic works. It was sponsored by the Mass. Association of Architects of which Colletti was president at the time of his death in 1957.

Colletti, who worked with his brother Paul, was most widely-known for the design of the Salisbury Beach Pavilion. His works in Quincy included the Rice Eventide Home, the addition to the Thomas Crane Library and the Beechwood Knoll School.

Cindy's Gourmet Vegetable Soup

Last week I was one of the long list of those suffering from a head cold and cough.

Our daughter-in-law Cindy brought me the most delicious vegetable soup which sure helped my cold. It also felt good not having to make it for myself!

Cindy's Gourmet Vegetable Soup

- 1 medium onion
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 large stalks celery (in small pieces)
- 2 large carrots (sliced)

- 6 ounces fresh mushrooms (cut in half)
- kernels from one ear of corn or 1 cup
- 2 cups chicken stock
- 3 fresh tomatoes (cut up)
- salt, pepper, basil, thyme and a bit of chili powder.

In the butter, saute the onions until translucent. Add all other ingredients and cook until all vegetables are tender.

If you ever catch a cold, I hope you have a daughter-in-law like Cindy.

Adams Site Lectures On Winslow Homer Nov. 1, 8

The Adams National Historic Site will host two lectures on Winslow Homer and his contemporaries Wednesday, Nov. 1 and 8 from 10 to 11:30 a.m. at the National Park Service Visitor Center, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy.

The lectures, presented by Miriam Butts, an instructor and lecturer at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, will explore the lasting appeal of the artist, Winslow Homer, and the many facets of his paintings of the sea and shore.

The Nov. lecture compares the approaches to marine painting by Robert Salmon, Fitz Hugh Lane, and William Trost Richards, whose marine paintings contrast with the more substantive work of Winslow Homer.

The Nov. lecture affixes the relevance of Homer's work, purchased at Prout's Neck, Maine, to works by Hassam, Prendergast, Sargent and Eakins all of whom were Homer's near contemporaries.

The free lectures are open to the public.

For more information, call Judith McAlister at 773-1177.

Officials Leaning Toward Mechanic St. Concourse Option to help city officials make the final decision on what is constructed.

One committee member has even suggested a third alternative, but city officials have said it would not work because it involves Cliveden Street which is too narrow to allow the plan to work.

The CAC's next meeting is Thursday, Oct. 19 at 3:15 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room of City Hall Annex.

Colton, who has met with downtown business and property owners to discuss the concourse project, stressed that nothing is etched in stone and that he still plans to meet with a number of people before a final decision is made. He said he plans to meet with Legion officials today (Thursday), representatives from Quincy 2000 and Paperama Friday, and abutters to the proposed concourse whose properties would not be affected sometime in the near future.

Sheets has said he would like to make a final decision on the entire project by Nov. 1.

Officials have said the west link of the project will cost about $5.9 million, although Sheets estimated the price for the first phase of the project at between $7 million and $8 million. The entire concourse will cost approximately $17 million, the mayor said.

Colton said the city must still file an environmental impact review with the state for the project to be built. The earliest construction on the west link will begin in mid-1997, he noted.

Colton added that construction of the west link would take about a year and that building the east link would add much time to the project as a whole.

Kolson Proposes Replacing HN Property With Park

Ward 1 City Councillor Peter Kolson has proposed that a Houghs Neck property be demolished and replaced with a park in order to relieve congestion in the neighborhood.

Kolson said at press time the property in question, a two-family home that formerly served as a store, is located at the corner of Sea Street and Manet Avenue. He added that he plans to ask the City Council at its next meeting to appropriate $60,000 from the city's free cash (cash reserve) account in order to acquire the property through a landtaking.

The money will be paid to the real estate holding company that currently owns the property, he said.

Kolson said the property would subsequently be demolished and replaced by a park, which would help beautify the area and create some open space at the site, which is near the Atherton Hough School, Most Blessed Sacrament Church and the Houghs Neck Fire Station.

"The neighborhood and myself feel that it would be better served to be used as open space and a park," he said. "It will help alleviate some of the congestion in the area."

7 Residents At Don Bosco Technology

Seven Quincy residents are currently enrolled at Don Bosco School of Technology in Boston.

They are: Paul J. Foley, Stephen D. Ford, Paul F. Ledbetter, Carlos M. Mora, Jonathan W. O'Connor, Eric R. Stoekel and Thomas T. Walsh.

Raymondi Endorsed By Fire Fighters Assn.

Daniel Raymondi, candidate for Ward 2 city councillor, has received the endorsement of the Quincy Fire Fighters Association.

Raymondi received the news in a recent letter from James McCarthy, president of the association. "With your record of support in the area of public safety, we feel your election to the Quincy City Council will benefit the lives and insure the safety of the citizens of Quincy," McCarthy wrote.

Raymondi, former Ward 2 councillor and current School Committee vice chairman, said he was thrilled with the endorsement.

"I'm pleased and honored to have the endorsement of the professional firefighters of Quincy," he said. "I have great respect for all public safety officials in the city's police and fire departments. As a city councillor, I will continue to support them to make sure they are properly manned and have the proper equipment to continue to protect the citizens of Quincy."

East Coast Petroleum Celebrates 10th Anniversary

The North Quincy East Coast Petroleum company, owned by Loretta T. DeGrazia, is celebrating its 10th anniversary and transition from Dorchester.

DeGrazia said as part of the celebration, the company is offering Quincy residents "a full service at discount prices" through an innovative co-op program.

"We really plan to turn up the H.E.A.T. in Quincy before winter arrives," she said in reference to her acronym for "Home Energy Action Team." DeGrazia said the program leans heavily on the old adage "there is strength in numbers" and works like this:

H.E.A.T. provides group purchasing power with full services. The members of any civic, social, fraternal, religious or other organized group, for instance, may qualify for a substantial three-figure savings each during a single heating season, paying a minimum increment over the wholesale price.

Members in H.E.A.T. will have available 24-hour emergency burner services by qualified technicians with service contracts.

It is for his work on their behalf that the students honor Mayor Sheets with this award.

South Shore Realtor Board Raises More Than $2,000 For Breast Cancer Research

More than 20 members of the South Shore Association of Realtors together raised more than $2,000 for breast cancer research by participating in the recent third annual Making Strides Against Breast Cancer walk in Boston.

According to Realtor Bill Geller, chairman of the association's Community Service Committee, SSAR Realtors have participated in each of the three 5.7-mile walks along the Charles River to fund breast cancer research.

"We feel that by participating in this event, we're not only helping a very worthy cause," he said, "but we're also showing that Realtors are people who care about more important things than commissions."

SSAR community service projects, Geller noted, include constructing several Habitat for Humanity homes, conducting holiday food drives and the association's annual "Adopt-A-Family" program, whereby the organization provides Christmas presents for needy families.

Based in Quincy, the South Shore Association of Realtors is a professional organization comprised of more than 750 Realtors from Boston to Cape Cod.

Dr. Susan Weld To Speak At Impact Quincy Conference

The fourth annual "It Takes A Community To Raise A Child" conference, which is designed to help parents deal with the changing forces that confront families, will be held Saturday, Oct. 21 from 8:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The conference, sponsored by the Impact Quincy Early Childhood Community Task Force, will be held at North Quincy High School.

Dr. Susan Weld, a leading proponent of child advocacy and wife of Gov. William Weld, will be the guest speaker. Dr. Weld has extensive experience in Chinese culture and is fluent in Cantonese. She has visited China many times, and has just returned from the fourth United Nations Conference on Women in Beijing, where she served as a White House delegate.

The conference is open to the public. Participants are encouraged to make a donation of $6 to cover the costs of the conference, but no one will be turned away due to inability to pay. Day care for small children will be provided.

Following Dr. Weld's address and dialogue with Quincy families, various workshops will be offered on topics of interest to parents of young children, such as the importance of play, positive and effective discipline, and stress management for parents.

Special workshops will also be offered for parents in recovery, and for fathers. Two workshops will be offered in Cantonese.

The conference ends with a luncheon and family sing-a-long featuring "Chaz & Bobby." A box lunch may be purchased at the conference or participants may bring their own lunch.

Last year's conference focused on rebuilding the city's commitment to families. This year's workshop topics have been selected based on assessments completed by last year's participants.

The IQ Early Childhood Community Task Force consists of concerned residents and business leaders and representatives from Community Care for Kids, South Shore Mental Health, Quincy College, Quincy Public Schools, Quincy Housing Authority, Quincy Family Family Advisory Council, Quincy Early Childhood Advisory Council, Mayor's Commission on the Family, Wollaston Business Association, and DOVE.

For more information or a registration form, call Impact Quincy at 472-6027.

Mayor Sheets Meets The (Beechwood) Press

Reporters from The Beechwood Flyer, a newspaper put together by children at Beechwood Community Life Center in Quincy, recently conducted an interview with Mayor James Sheets.

Following are the questions the children asked and the mayor's responses:

Q. How does it feel to be the mayor of Quincy?

A. Well, sometimes you feel overwhelmed because of all the problems and issues and sometimes you feel excited, but it is an honor to be the mayor of Quincy because it is a very beautiful city.

Q. Do you think people rely on you to do everything all at once?

A. It feels that way sometimes, especially in the government. So yes, people rely on me to do everything at once. I try to let people know that we understand their needs.

Q. What do you know about Beechwood that is interesting?

A. Everything is interesting. It is good to have a facility that has all kinds of generations.

Q. Do you like working in an office all day long?

A. No, not really. I usually like to be outside most of the time. To be in this office all day long, approximately 10 hours, it kind of gets tiring.

Q. Do you enjoy your job?

A. I like it most of the time, but sometimes I don't like it very much, just like any other job. I enjoy meeting all the citizens.

Q. Have you visited any interesting places?

A. The most interesting was Israel, because I have never been there and because of the Western Civilization. I had a chance to plant a tree in Jerusalem in the City of Quincy's name.

Q. Are you a big sports fan?

A. I am a big sports fan, but I do not have a lot of time for it now. I think athletics are important because it teaches a lot.

Q. What is your favorite team?

A. I grew up in Pennsylvania, so probably the Pittsburgh Steelers. But I also like the Boston teams: Celtics, Red Sox, etc.

Fall Car Care It's Time To Be K

Can Your Car Pass This Cold Weather Test?

A severe winter can be tough on a car. To be prepared for Mother Nature's worst, be aware of your car's needs.

In recognition of National Car Care Month (October), the Car Care Council offers a multiple choice quiz on this timely topic:

1. For maximum protection, antifreeze should be:

(a) half antifreeze, half water.

(b) pure antifreeze.

(c) 70 percent antifreeze, 30 percent water.

2. A common cause of damage to an automatic transmission:

(a) Driving too fast in second gear.

(b) Excessively harsh use when stuck on ice or snow.

(c) Too much city driving with the shift lever in "LOW."

3. A battery loses some of its power as the temperature drops. At 0 degrees Fahrenheit it produces only:

(a) 80 percent of its original power.

(b) 50 percent of its original power.

(c) 40 percent of its original power.

4. When the sun goes down, the chances of being involved in a fatal accident increase by:

(a) 100 percent.

(b) 200 percent.

(c) 400 percent.

5. The best grade of oil to use in your car is:

(a) the type recommended in the owner's manual.

(b) the highest viscosity index available.

(c) any oil carrying an API rating.

will protect to -34 degrees Fahrenheit, the 70 percent mixture will protect to -85 degrees Fahrenheit. Do not use a stronger solution than that.

2. (b) is correct. Transmission shops report an increase in burned transmission components after a snowstorm due to drivers trying to "rock" out of snow drifts by rapidly shifting from Drive to Reverse. This can cause trouble by overheating the transmission.

3. (c) is correct. Even a strong battery produces only 40 percent of its power at 0 degrees Fahrenheit, at which time the starter may need twice as much electrical power to start a cold engine.

4. (c) is correct. And the risk increases as driving conditions deteriorate. Driving after dark places extra demands on vehicles and their drivers.

5. (a) is correct. Higher viscosity oil is thicker, which makes the engine harder to turn over in cold weather.

"The Car Care Quiz Book," containing 110 multiple choice questions and answers, is available from the Car Care Council. In addition to the challenging questions, each of the 11 chapters includes automotive informative text plus an Auto Fact cartoon.

With a cover price of $7.95, the 91-page publication is offered during National Car Care Month for $5.95 including postage and handling. Send a check or money order to Car Care Council, Dept. BOOK, One Grande Lake Drive, Port Clinton, OH 43452.

'Stay Tuned' For EPA's Latest On Tail Pipe Checks

If you are among the 100-plus million vehicle owners in areas which fail to meet federal air quality standards, you may have been waiting for mandatory auto emissions inspection to become a reality.

The pressure's off in some cities—at least temporarily. U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Carol Browner has announced the agency will give non-attainment areas more time and flexibility to comply with federal clean air standards.

But while motorists in those high pollution cities will have a little breather, the air they (and their neighbors) breathe still needs to be cleaned up. For many owners whose neglected vehicles spew excessive pollutants into the air, the initiative remains theirs to get their cars in shape. Sometimes this involves nothing more than the replacement of an air filter, says the Car Care Council; sometimes it requires a diagnostic check and tune-up.

Nearly two-thirds of the total carbon monoxide, more than a quarter of the hydrocarbons and a third of the nitrogen oxides which pollute our atmosphere come from motor vehicles. These percentages decrease dramatically as the vehicle population gets younger.

As we get rid of the older cars, however, the pollution problem doesn't necessarily go away. Even a late model vehicle becomes a polluter when it's denied regular maintenance.

On newer cars, with their numerous sensors and computers which monitor and adjust the various functions, the engine will "fix" itself as it drives down the road. To some extent, it can compensate for certain discrepancies such as substandard gas or a dirty air filter. Consequently, the driver may not be aware of deteriorating performance or poor gas mileage until the condition has progressed beyond the point where these controls can make their corrections.

Not only will it run poorly (if it starts at all), it will also contaminate the air.

Preliminary statistics from vehicle check lanes during National Car Care Month last October show 28 percent of vehicles failed the exhaust emissions test.

Routine preventive maintenance, as state by the EPA, will significantly reduce emissions levels.

"One of the easiest ways (for people to improve the environment) is to maintain their cars properly so they don't contribute to the pollution problem."

If every owner did this, mandatory emissions inspection no longer would be needed.

Prevent 'Melt-Down' With Cooling System Maintenance

Your car's cooling system should have periodic attention to prevent engine "melt-down," reminds the Car Care Council.

Internal engine temperatures of up to 5,000 degrees place heavy demands on these components.

Investigate Erratic Power Steering

Does your power steering act up when you're maneuvering into a parking space? Is the steering wheel hard to turn? Is there a screeching noise from under the hood as you turn the wheel?

These are classic symptoms of a loose, glazed or worn drive belt. Or your power steering fluid may be low.

Replace a worn belt before it fails completely. If fluid is low, find out why, says the Car Care Council. Fixing a leak may involve nothing more than tightening a loose connection.

Man Killed By Car In Front Of His Home

A 75-year-old grandfather from Wollaston was struck by a car and killed while trying to cross Standish Avenue to his home.

Deeb Abouzeid was struck by the automobile Saturday at 7:20 p.m. in front of his house after returning from a visit with his daughter, who lives across the street. He died a short time later at Quincy Hospital.

It was the fourth time in 10 months an elderly person was killed trying to cross a busy Quincy street.

The driver, Roland Bickhart of Quincy, said it was very dark at the time and estimated his speed on the wet road at 30 miles per hour, the speed limit in the neighborhood. No charges have been filed against him.

Obituary On Page 28

Abouzeid was the founder of Webster's Eatery, a Middle Eastern restaurant on Scammel Street in Quincy. He had five children, 21 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

The accident scene is about 40 yards from the intersection of Standish Avenue and Hancock Street which Mayor James Sheets has said the city is already studying in light of the sale of the Presidents City Motel and neighboring properties in July.

City officials have made a number of proposals for new signals, signage and other changes since pedestrian deaths began rising in the past two years. The police department started a traffic safety program for the elderly in January and Sheets asked Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon to study accident-plagued intersections in Quincy Center in February.

Park Dept. Calls Court Renovation Project 'Success'

Quincy Park Department officials are calling the department's current court renovation project "a great success."

Thirty-one basketball courts, 21 tennis courts and seven street hockey courts are being refurbished this fall. In addition, the city's first rollerblading facility will soon be constructed at Faxon Park.

The project is being funded through a $2.8 million bond issue proposed by Mayor James Sheets and passed by the City Council last year. The money was allocated to renovate all of the city's parks and recreational facilities.

Officials said the work will be extensive and at most sites the courts will be pulverized and entirely rebuilt. All new standards and nets will be installed at most locations throughout the project, which is being done by the P.A. Landers Construction Co.

Certain playgrounds will undergo major changes. Bishop Playground in Montclair will now have street hockey, tennis, and basketball courts illuminated for nighttime enjoyment. The Fenno Street playground courts will be expanded and a new wall of Quincy granite has been constructed at the site. Russell Park, located behind the Center for Technical Education (Vo-Tech School), will now have basketball facilities to compliment the refurbished tennis courts there.

Earlier this year, the city completed its first-ever turf renovation project. Each of the city's 25 softball/Little League fields and seven regulation baseball fields had their infields resodded and their outfields slice-seeded and fertilized. In addition, Varsity Soccer Field and Veterans Memorial Stadium received complete turf renovations and a new soccer facility was constructed at Teel Field in North Quincy.

The city's children's playgrounds, or "tot lots," are also in the process of being replaced. Officials said new, safer equipment will soon replace antiquated equipment at 31 locations throughout the city.

"This is by far the most significant improvement project that the city has ever undertaken with its parks and playgrounds," said Park Department Executive Director Thomas Koch. "Mayor Sheets and the City Council should be commended for establishing Quincy as a municipal leader in providing recreational facilities for its residents."

A PAINFUL TRUTH ABOUT ALCOHOL

It is a ritual for some drinkers: Have a few shots of alcohol and chase them with a couple of painkillers. What about warnings, though, that combining alcohol and painkillers can be dangerous? In fact, heavy drinking combined with the painkillers aspirin, ibuprofen, and naproxen can cause gastric bleeding and aggravate ulcers. In addition, heavy drinking can cause the liver to break acetaminophen down into high concentrations of toxic by-products that, in rare cases, can lead to liver failure and coma. Experts disagree on what amount of alcohol and painkillers is unhealthy. In general, anyone who regularly consumes three or more alcoholic drinks per day should talk to a doctor

P.S. Regularly having three or more alcoholic drinks a day can cause all kinds of medical problems - with or without painkillers.

Consult your doctor before combining over-the-counter or prescription medications and alcohol. Quincy Looks To Batter Rams Saturday

Presidents Win Second Straight, 21-14

By KERRY BYRNE

What a difference a couple of weeks can make.

Two weeks ago, the Quincy High School football team was looking at two straight losses and the chance of a very long season.

Two weeks, two wins later, the feeling is a bit different in the Presidents camp.

"Oh yeah, things feel different," said Quincy High (2-2) coach Peter Chella, following the most recent victory, a 21-14 heartstopper over Old Colony League foe Plymouth South (1-3). "The kids are starting to feel better about themselves and it's beginning to show on the field."

Hopefully that attitude will carry over Saturday when the Presidents host Marshfield (2-2) in a rare afternoon tilt at Veterans' Memorial Stadium at 2 o'clock. Last year the Rams lost to Quincy, 13-0, in the season opener, but they field a much stronger squad this time around. The Rams are fresh off an impressive 34-8 win over Dennis-Yarmouth and two weeks ago pulled off one of the great shockers of the high school football season when they beat defending Div. 3 Super Bowl champion Whitman-Hanson, 18-12.

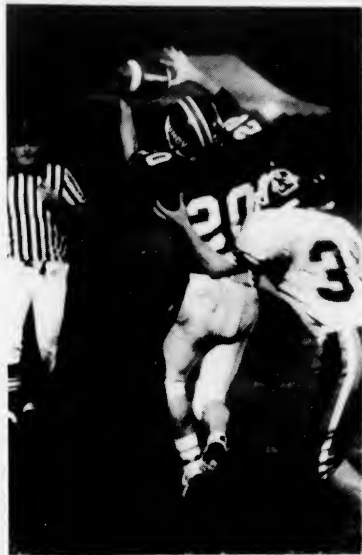

The Presidents win over Plymouth South was a dandy. A kickoff return of nearly 90 yards for a touchdown by senior Mike Sheffer with 2:53 remaining in the final quarter provided the winning margin. He added the final two points as he was on the receiving end of a pass from quarterback Mark Glynn.

The score erased a 14-13 deficit created when Panthers quarterback Ryan Fryar threw a 10-yard strike to Adam Close. The TD pass was Fryar's second of the game and ninth of the season. Sheffer, who was covering Close on the play, responded with his sprint down the left sideline.

The Panthers got the ball back at the Quincy 47, but an interception by junior Kevin Connolly stifled any chance they had of scoring again.

"I'm not going to make it through the end of the year," said somewhat shell shocked coach Chella after his team held on by the skin of its teeth for the second week in a row.

Connolly put the Presidents on the board in the first quarter with a 2-yard plunge off right tackle. Tim Santos added the extra point. The score was set up by Sheffer's interception and 58-yard return to the Plymouth South 12.

KEVIN CONNOLLY REACHES for the ball as Plymouth South defensive back Dave Disanto moves in to make a hit.

It was his fourth pick in the last three games.

An interception by Quincy senior middle line-backer Bill Dunn set up a third-quarter touchdown. Dunn returned the ball 18 yards to the Panthers 25 and on the next play Connolly raced around right end to put the Presidents up, 13-8.

Plymouth South had taken an 8-7 lead when Fryar connected with Andrew Morgan for a 55-yard touchdown then threw to Tom Alonardo for the two-point conversion.

The defense again played a superb game, this time against one of the finest passers in the region. Fryar was picked off three times and his receivers were blanketed by defensive backs Connolly, Sheffer and sophomore Shaun Faherty.

Quincy's most awesome defensive stand came in the third quarter as they tried to hold a 13-8 lead. Fryar had connected on a 28-yard pass to Close to put the ball at the Presidents 33. On the next play, Dunn stuffed fullback Marvin Rowell for a 3-yard loss. The Panthers lost 7 on the following play when linebacker Jon Ryan rocked Justin Close in the backfield with what may have been the hardest hit of the season by a Quincy player. Not to be shown up, Dunn again unloaded on Rowell in the backfield for a 7 yard loss, forcing the Panthers to punt on fourth and 27.

Plymouth South was stopped for losses on eight other occasions, including four sacks of Fryar. Sophomore defensive end Steve Wiltshire, who looks like a choir boy but plays like a rabid animal, set the tone with a sack on the first play of the game. Don McCarthy, Scott MacPherson, Peter Kolson, Dan Nichol, Mike Russo, Dunn and Ryan were each in on a number of big stops.

The Presidents would not have needed Sheffer's heroics if it were not for a slew of penalties. Thirteen infractions whistled against the offense wiped out 139 yards worth of gains and took 10 points off the board.

For the second week in a row, Dunn had a 52-yard touchdown romp down the left sideline called back (both looked like the same exact play). He also had a run for two points negated after Sheffer's touchdown, though the Presidents managed to put the ball in a second time.

"The penalties really hurt," said Chella. "You take the penalties away, and we played pretty well. If we can get them out of our system we'll be a good team."

Girls' Soccer

NQ Continues Quest For Tourney Appearance

The North Quincy High School girls soccer team continued in its quest to reach the post-season tournament for the first time in school history with a 2-1 come-from-behind win at Plymouth South last Wednesday.

It was the second time this year that the Red Raiders (6-5-1) edged the Old Colony League rival Panthers by one goal. They opened the season with a 1-0 battle in Quincy.

North was able to overcome a flat first half to post the victory. The same problem would plague them in Friday's 4-0 loss to OCL power Falmouth. The Clippers (9-2-1) netted all four goals in the opening frame.

The Red Raiders are in the midst of a big week. They were scheduled to play at Barnstable Tuesday and they host Stoughton today (Thursday) in a non-league match at 3:30. Tomorrow NQ will play at Silver Lake.

In last week's action, Plymouth South scored with 12 minutes to go in the first half to take a 1-0 lead.

North Quincy senior co-captain Annie Bergen answered the call in the second with the equalizer. Kristen Kelley took a corner kick which found the foot of Laurie Flynn. Flynn passed to Bergen who headed the ball into the net.

With five minutes to play, junior Hillary O'Donoghue stole a clearing pass and took a shot from 18 yards out. The Panthers goalie got a piece of the ball, but was unable to keep the game-winner from dribbling over the goal line.

"In the second half we've just been a different team in both games," said Red Raiders coach Paul Bregoli.

The coach commended senior co-captain Liz Fitzpatrick for her fine play in the victory.

Falmouth proved too strong for the North Quincy girls to overcome a lackluster half of play. Two minutes into the contest, Faith Rannie scored from 40 yards away for what proved to be the decisive goal.

Five minutes later, Kipp Horace netted a goal. It became 3-0 just 10 minutes into the game when senior captain Jen Joseph scored. She would net the final goal later in the half.

"They were beating us to every single ball and controlling play in the first half," said Bregoli.

A different Red Raiders team stepped on the field after intermission. They played a 0-0 half against the league power and controlled the flow of the game. Two missed scoring opportunities by Flynn ended any hopes of a comeback however.

"Laurie Flynn played the game of her life," said Bregoli.

The coach was encouraged by the effort, though disappointed that his club was unable to do it on both sides of the break.

"I told the girls they're a good team, they just have to put it together for an entire game," he said.

Bregoli singled out the play of senior co-captains Fitzpatrick, Kelly Keegan and Kristen Kelley, and freshman Betsy Stone.

Sweeney found her with a pass.

Freshman keeper Krystal Kazolias was in net in place of regular starter Mary Kelly and evened her career record at 1-1. "Krystal played really well," said Herring.

The coach singled out the superb play of Janet Kane, Erin Flaherty and Martin on defense.

"It was a good defensive effort by everyone," said Herring. "The defense was able to quickly punch the ball out of the zone time after time. Overall, we played a well-rounded game."

Howard Leads Quincy

The Quincy High School girls soccer team captured its second victory of the season with a 3-2 non-league win at Stoughton Saturday morning.

Senior Presidents (2-7) captain Kelly Howard proved the difference in the contest with two goals as her team doubled their number of wins over last year.

Quincy has road games at Holbrook today (Thursday) and at Plymouth South Monday. They host Old Colony League powerhouse Falmouth Wednesday (Oct. 18) at 4 p.m.

The Presidents never trailed in the win over the Black Knights. With the score knotted at 2-2 with five minutes to play, Howard netted the game winner courtesy of a pass from sophomore Kerry Duffy.

Duffy also scored a goal at 15:05 of the opening frame. She was set up by promising freshman Leanne Martin, who received high praise from coach Sonya Herring.

Howard's first tally, at 20:08 of the first half, broke a 1-1 stalemate. The captain had just come in off the bench after getting spelled for a stretched and was able to score when sophomore Kara Mc-

Red Raiders Split Two OCL Meets

North Quincy High School's cross country teams split two Old Colony League meets last week, winning both ends of a dual meet with Taunton and taking a double loss to Falmouth.

The boys (1-2) took six of the top seven spots to beat Taunton, 18-41, for their first win of the year. The girls (2-1) followed suit with a 20-41 decision.

Jimmy Wan won the boys event at the 3.1 mile Tigers course. Bryan Linskey placed second. They were followed by other scorers Kevin McCue (fourth), Mike Devin (fifth), Brian O'Donnell (sixth) and Joe Linskey (seventh).

The Red Raiders girls took eight of the top 10 positions in their victory. Kelly Duggan was again their top finisher, winning the event.

Lauren Molloy (third), Colleen Cotter (fourth), Diane McGunigle (fifth), Diane Jordan (seventh), Carrie Jarvie (eighth), Vivian Chan (ninth) and Nancy Gardner (10th) rounded out the leaders of the fleet-footed North Quincy contingent.

"I would like to commend our many freshmen who ran an entire varsity 3 mile race for the first time," said North Quincy coach Geoff Hennessy, as he cited frosh girls Jennifer Campbell, Michelle Kentzell, Shirley Wu, Kelly Lockhead, Wendy Knowles, Marianne Weiler and Nicole Weiler, and boys Brian Radell, Chris Barra and Chi Chung.

The Falmouth boys proved to be too strong up front as they took the top three spots to clinch a 17-40 victory.

Brian and Joe Linskey were the top finishers for the Red Raiders at fourth and seventh, respectively. Other NQ scorers were McCue (eighth), Wan (ninth) and Devin (12th).

"Our boys continue to improve and the team's depth looks promising," said Hennessy.

The girls found out why the host Clippers are favored to win the Old Colony League, as they lost, 19-39.

Duggan hooked up in a battle with Falmouth freshman sensation Emily Burns. The two ran stride-for-stride over the 3.1-mile course as parents, fans and members of the other Falmouth sports teams who were practicing around campus gathered to watch.

Burns made a move with a half mile to go and Duggan couldn't react in time as Burns won by a four-second margin.

Also scoring for the Red Raiders were Molloy (seventh), Cotter (eighth), Ashley Crawford (10th), and Jarvie (13th).

"We ran timidly as a team and Falmouth ran with confidence on the home course," said Hennessy. "We'll get another crack at them in the league meet (Oct. 30)."

North Quincy takes on Silver Lake Friday at Pageant Field.

Quincy Girls Leading Area Soccer Teams

A wealth of girls soccer players who came up through the Quincy Youth Soccer League system are making major contributions to teams at Fontbonne Academy, Notre Dame Academy, Thayer Academy and Archbishop Williams.

Fontbonne's varsity team is being led by sophomore wings Sarah Satkevich and Barbara Ryan. Satkevich is the school's leading scorer with 10 goals and four assists. Ryan has added five goals and four assists.

Siobhan O'Connor, an outstanding midfielder, has contributed with three goals. Other players from Quincy are stopper Leela Shankar and outside midfielder Kelly Shaw.

At Notre Dame Academy, sophomores Jen Starsiak and Kathleen Burke are among the varsity team leaders. Both have put up big numbers: midfielder Starsiak has 12 goals and eight assists while left wing Burke has netted six goals and aided on three.

Both schools boast a number of Quincy girls on their JV and freshman teams. Fontbonne has freshman Teresa Ryan, Kerry Higgins, Eileen Mawn and Suzanne Milburn and sophomore Laura Donadio playing on the JV squad.

Notre Dame's Kate Gaughan is a JV defenseman while Katie Kelly, Meghan Spillane, Katie Miller, Courtney Paquette and Sarah Towne are on the frosh team.

Quincy native Pam Farrell is a second-year varsity player at Archbishop Williams. The junior plays left wing. At Thayer Academy, Dominique Good anchors the midfield in her second year of varsity play.

Weymouth In Town Friday

Undefeated Barnstable Stops North Quincy

The young North Quincy High School football team was fresh off its first win of the season. But any chance of building momentum stalled when they made the long trip down Route 3 to face undefeated Old Colony League leader Barnstable Friday night.

The Red Raiders of the Cape (4-0) handed North Quincy (1-3) a 27-0 defeat.

The loss came in the middle of the toughest stretch of what is a relatively generous schedule for the North Quincy Red Raiders this season. Last week they traveled to Plymouth South (emerging victorious, 28-7) and this week made the longest drive of the year to Barnstable. With six games left on the docket, only one will be played away from the friendly confines of Veterans' Memorial Stadium, and that lone road game is at traditional OCL doormat Silver Lake. North Quincy is the away team during the Thanksgiving Day game against Quincy at the Stadium.

Friday night the Red Raiders host the ornery Weymouth Wildcats at 7 p.m. Weymouth (2-2) is coming off a 21-0 win over Taunton.

"This (Weymouth) team is always tough. We'll have our hands full," said North Quincy coach Ken McPhee.

The Wildcats will bring their tenacious style of the defense into the game in an effort to stop NQ's Brian (Muskie) Walsh.

Walsh had his fourth consecutive 100-yard outing in as many opportunities in the loss to Barn-stable. His 107 yards on 22 carries gave him 506 yards on 88 attempts (5.75 yards per carry) in this, his junior year.

Walsh's road to the century mark was again paved by the outstanding play of the undersized offensive line of Norm Connell, Steve Stentiford, Joe McCarthy, Paul Picciano, Eric Malames and tight end Charlie Plaskasovitis. The mini-Hogs, each of whom are first-year starters, have been one of the surprise stories for the Red Raiders. Few knew if they would be able to provide the room Walsh needed to display his talents. But they certainly have proved themselves so far.

"Our offensive line, from Plaskasovitis right down the line, did a fantastic job," said McPhee. "I'll tell you who did an incredible job was Joe McCarthy. Here's a 158-pound center going against a 280-pound kid and he did great."

"Eric Malames was immense on defense, too."

The Red Raiders suffered from a case of fumble-itis which proved tough to overcome against a team like Barnstable. The Red Raiders of the Cape got on the board first following a botched punt attempt which gave them the ball 1 yard away from the end zone.

A long touchdown pass with eight seconds to play in the first half put North Quincy in a 14-0 hole at intermission.

A second half fumble helped hand Barnstable its third touchdown. They closed the scoring when they broke a 70-yard run for a score.

"They did not beat us up," said McPhee. "We lost, but we didn't get beat. There's a big difference."

"We were moving the ball, but again, we just couldn't put it in the end zone. I think we outgained them in the first half. I haven't seen the stats yet, but would guess we had the advantage."

Quarterback J.R. Rendle had one of his finest games of the year at the field general spot.

McPhee singled out the defensive play of senior co-captains and linebackers Tim Zaniboni and Chris Ritchie and sophomore defensive back Steve Rose, who transferred this year from Barnstable. "Rose came up with some big, big plays for us," said the coach.

"I was happy with our entire team's effort," said McPhee.

Youth Football

Gardner Leads Elks, Late TD Lifts Panthers

The West Quincy Elks topped the North Quincy Apaches for the second time this season with a 16-0 win Sunday.

The Elks (4-0) look like the team to beat as the second half of the season begins.

Elks quarterback/defensive back Matt Gardner scored both touchdowns. The first came on a long run and the second was courtesy of a 35-yard interception return for a score. James Shea, who played well defensively, ran in a two-point conversion following the first touchdown.

Mike Turner harried the Apaches QB and was in on several sacks, including one for a safety.

Offensively, Ryan Murray, Matt Reggiani, Steve King, Matt Holt and Russell and Robert Mullen carried the ball well.

Chris Lumaghini and John Cooper led the defense.

In the day's other contest, the Quincy Point Panthers (2-2) edged the Houghs Neck Manets, 14-8, in a come-from-behind effort.

The win avenged the Panthers opening day 6-2 loss to the Manets.

Point's James Bennett

scored late in the first quarter to give his club a 6-0 lead. A run for the conversion was stuffed.

The Manets (2-2) responded on the next possession as quarterback Jason Curran raced 60 yards for a score. Curran made a spectacular play on the two-point effort. He rolled to his right looking for a receiver, but, finding none open, reversed field and raced around left end to give the Manets an 8-6 lead. QB Dan Kelly played a stellar game for the Manets.

Houghs Neck held the lead until late in the fourth quarter when Brendan Donahue caught a 69-yard scoring pass from Didier Alther. Alther threw to Keith Antonellis for two points to cap the scoring.

The final conversion may prove vital late in the season. The two teams are tied for second place and total points in their two meetings will serve as a tie-breaker. The conversion gave the Panthers a 16-14 combined advantage.

The winning defense was led by Mark Robertson, Mike McClellan, Sean Wilkosky and Larry Antonellis. Bennett was a two-way standout.

THE WINNER in the men's division of the Fowler House 5 Mile Road Race was Mark Whelen, who finished in 26:03. Fowler House owner Bill Rizzotti and his family organized the charitable event.

Sponsoring the race were Reggie's Oil, South Shore Children's Fund, Roxie's Market, Baskin-Robbins, Stephen Abramowitz DDS, Granite Group Realtors, Robert Tierney Plumbing & Heating and Rep. Mike Bellotti.

TRACY CORRIGAN won the women's division of the Fowler House 5 Mile Road Race with a course record time of 30:26. She bested Karen Djerf's 1993 time of 30:42. Corrigan also won the Degan Road Race in September.

SCOTT DEWARE*A Thought For The Week

You probably have noticed some people at times have peculiar ideas about clergymen. No minister, priest or rabbi is supernatural. They are human beings. The inner voice which beckoned them to their calling usually provides them with patience, tolerance and benevolence. But they are still human and have the same traits of curiosity and anxiety as other people.

We imagine most men of the cloth wonder at times about their adequacy - or inadequacies. Hours of preparation and prayer precede a worship service. Even so, no clergyman can strike a responsive chord to or for every one in every occasion. This is just as impossible as it is for a ball player to hit a home run every time at bat.

But, when a responsive chord is struck, wouldn't it be a good idea - at least once in a while - to write a note and say so? Remember - they're human too...

Hibernia Savings Announces Quarterly Dividend

The Hibernia Savings Bank has declared a regular quarterly dividend on the bank's outstanding common stock of $0.06 per share.

At the Sept. 20 meeting, the Board of Directors voted the dividend payable Nov. 1 to shareholders of record on Oct. 24.

In July, the bank announced the opening of its newest location in Hingham at 274 Main St. and at Sept. 20, deposited totaled $4,050,000.

Richard S. Straczynski, president and chief operating officer, said, "We are very pleased with the initial results of our newest office. Deposit growth for the first two months we have been open is far in excess of our projections."

The Hibernia Savings Bank, founded in 1912, is a full-service, state-chartered, stock savings bank. The main office of the bank is located at 731 Hancock St., Quincy. Administrative offices are at 730 Hancock St. Retail branch banking facilities are located in Boston, Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth and Hingham and loan centers are located in Quincy and Braintree.

All deposits are insured in full by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC)/Deposit Insurance Fund (DIF).

Airman Rachel Boland
On Overseas Deployment

Navy Airman Rachel J. Boland, daughter of Edwin and Joan Boland of 30 Reardon St., Quincy is halfway through a six-month overseas deployment while serving with Helicopter Anti-Submarine Squadron Six. The squadron is embarked aboard the aircraft carrier USS Abraham Lincoln, which has included duty near Iraq in the Persian Gulf.

Boland is one of 5,000 Sailors and Marines who departed Navy Air Station Alameda, Calif., in early April for the voyage to the Western Pacific and Indian oceans and Persian Gulf.

Boland's squadron is embarked on the lead ship of a seven-ship battle group which includes more than 80 tactical aircraft, and ships and submarines armed with Tomahawk cruise missiles. The battle group has the flexibility to deploy to separate geographic regions and can travel nearly 700 miles a day.

Boland is authorized to wear the Southwest Asia Service Medal for serving in the Persian Gulf area. Boland's involvement in the deployment is an example of how Sailors and Marines are serving aboard aircraft carriers, ships, submarines, squadrons and shore stations around the world in support of U.S. interest.

A 1988 Quincy High School graduate, Boland joined the Navy in 1994.

Eight Councillors Support Proposed City Pay Raises

city councillors must vote for the pay raises in order for them to be approved. Most of the councillors surveyed by The Quincy Sun were enthusiastic in their support for the raises. "There's no question they're deserving of pay raises," said Council President Michael Cheney. "The employees have been there for the city and foregone pay raises in the bad times, and these are the good times. So I will support them."

"I think they're certainly deserved," said Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan. "The unions have always looked out for what the best interests of the city are, and we're obviously not going to be raising people's taxes. I will vote for it."

"As long as he (Sheets) can find the money, I think it's fine," said Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro. "The mayor knows what he's doing, and I support him. The employees deserve the raises."

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson agreed.

"If we can afford it, that's fine," he said. "The mayor has indicated the money's in the budget, and the unions have been cooperative in the past."

"I concur with my colleagues," said Councillor Charles McIntyre. "The employees have saved us a fortune, and they haven't had a real 'cost-of-living' raise in a long time."

Councillor Timothy Cahill, considered by many to be the council's fiscal conservative, said he will support the raises because they will not affect property taxes.

"I probably wouldn't support them if it meant raising taxes," said Cahill. "But it's hard to deny that we have the money this year. We're not in tough financial straits."

"Based upon what I've heard, I'll support them too," said Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien.

"I will support them unless there's something in the proposal that I'm not aware of."

"You can put me in the 'yes' column, too," said Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers. "Without being redundant, I pretty much agree with what all the other councillors said."

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio, chairman of the council's Finance Committee, said he needs more time to look at the mayor's proposal but he does not envision finding a reason to vote against the raises.

Kolson, chairman of the council's Ordinance Committee, said he will schedule a meeting for the council to discuss and vote on the matter as soon as possible.

Shea said the council does not have to hold a public hearing in order to pass the raises, although one could be held if councillors so choose.

Ayers To Meet With Squantum School Students

Ward 6 City Councillor

Bruce Ayers will speak at the Squantum Elementary School Friday Oct. 20 at 9:30 a.m. regarding "Kids Vote".

In preparation for the Nov. 7 municipal election, the Squantum Elementary School students invited Ayers to discuss the power of voting and the issues of the day.

Ayers said he has been working closely with Don Houghton, principal of the Squantum School in the importance of educating kids to vote.

After his address, Ayers will hear questions from the students and listen to what the students would like their elected officials to work on within the City of Quincy.

A MATTER OF TIMING

A timing belt should be replaced on a periodic basis; putting the job off risks considerable damage to some engines. Why?

The timing belt runs from the crankshaft to the camshaft(s), which open and close the valves. On some engines, more durable timing chains are used. Others make use of rubber timing belts which, although less durable, offer the advantages of being less expensive, lighter, quieter, and never need lubrication. If the belt were to break, the camshaft would stop turning, but inertia would keep the flywheel, crankshaft, connecting rods, and pistons moving. On a free-wheeling engine, this poses no problem because there is enough clearance to keep the pistons from hitting open valves. On an interference engine, however, bent valves and broken pistons may result.

HINT: To avoid expensive repairs on an interference engine, inspect and replace the timing belt at the intervals recommended by the car manufacturer. LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO should be your full service auto care center for most every system in your car. When you simply want us to align your vehicle or to change your timing belt, our professional ASE Certified technicians have the ability and necessary skills to handle it. CHECK FOR $500,000 was sent to the city this week by Norfolk-Bristol ASA-Ambulance Systems of America which has admitted to improper billing procedures. Council Reaction Mixed Division On Concourse At Public Hearing

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The proposed $5.9 million Quincy Center Concourse met mostly opposition at a City Council public hearing Monday night.

Thirteen people spoke against the project at the hearing and an additional four signed in opposition. Three people spoke in favor of the concourse and no one was recorded in support.

City officials, including Mayor James Sheets, have said construction of the proposed roadway is essential to preventing traffic gridlock, improving access to Quincy Center and revitalizing the downtown business district. The west link or first phase of the project would link Burgin Parkway with Hancock Street while the east link or second phase would extend the road further by using either a Revere Road or Mechanic Street option.

The Mechanic Street option would involve the widening of Mechanic Street by displacing an American Legion post,

Residents To Be Reimbursed Ambulance Co. Pays City $500,000 For Overbilling

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The city has received a check for $500,000 from an ambulance company which provides service through Quincy Hospital that will be used to reimburse residents who were wrongly overbilled by the firm.

Mayor James Sheets said at press time the money will be deposited immediately into a city-controlled special escrow account and that a process for reimbursement will be devised as soon as possible.

Norfolk-Bristol ASA-Ambulance Systems of America, which has admitted to accidentally overbilling Quincy residents for its services, sent the check to the city this week. The firm agreed to the $500,000 settlement last month.

Atty. Daniel Raymondi of Quincy, who first prompted the probe of the company in May after discovering two of his clients had been overbilled, said he is happy the city finally has the money in its possession.

"Now that the money is in the city's hands, it guarantees that those who were overbilled will be reimbursed," said Raymondi. One of the numerous Quincy residents who was overbilled, Mary White of 1000 Southern Artery, said she also is pleased that the city has received the $500,000 check.

"I think it's great," she said. "I'll be glad to get my money back."

"Without people like Mary, who questioned the bills she received, the credibility of my call for an audit of the company wouldn't have been there," added Raymondi. "It shows what people can do to affect some positive change."

Raymondi noted that not only will those who have been overbilled be reimbursed, but that the ambulance firm has taken steps to make sure the problem will not arise again in the future.

"The information that I have received indicates that they (Norfolk-Bristol) have completely reformed and revised their billing practices," he said.

Raymondi said the city must now work quickly to develop a process through which overbilled residents will be reimbursed within a reasonable amount of time.

Sheets said he hopes the reimbursement formula can be devised within a week. He added that he is unsure whether it will be done solely by City Solicitor Stephen McGrath or if a special consultant will be hired on a temporary basis to help with the matter.

Officials have said the special escrow account will also be used to fund a public awareness program

Squantum Elementary School Principal Makes It Possible Sisters Reunited With Brother After 60 Years

A very special reunion recently took place, thanks to some help from the Squantum Elementary School.

Two former students at the school who had not seen their brother in more than 60 years finally were able to locate him after Squantum Elementary Principal Donald Houghton located the permanent record card of the man—who had also attended school there—in his own office.

The result was one of the happiest occasions the three siblings—Frank Brennan, 71, of Reading; Evelyn Ivins, 68, of Sun City, Calif.; and Jeanne Soyland, 66, of Diamondhead, Miss.—had ever experienced.

In a recent interview with The Quincy Sun,

Soyland described what it was like to see her brother for more than six decades.

"It's amazing," said Soyland, retired secretary to the assistant superintendent of schools in the Lake Tahoe Unified School District in South Lake Tahoe, Calif. "I could see the resemblance. I remembered him as a young boy, and I could still see the resemblance."

Although the three had all been born at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Brighton, Brennan was separated from his family when the two girls moved to California with their parents. Soyland said she did not want to disclose the details of how that happened.

Attempts over the years by the two women to locate their brother—and vice versa—came up empty. Without Brennan's date of birth, the sisters had no real way of finding him through any kind of database, while Brennan was unable to find Soyland and Ivins as their last names changed after they both married.

Finally, the sisters remembered that all three had been students at the Squantum School. Although they feared there was little hope of tracing their brother through the school, Ivins wrote to Houghton to explain the situation.

The sisters were overjoyed when Houghton quickly responded, saying he had found the permanent record cards of all three students in a file at his office. The cards

Volunteers Still Needed To Help Get Out 'Kids Vote' Election Day

Volunteers are still needed to help get out the "Kids Vote" in the Quincy city election Tuesday, Nov. 7.

On Election Day, Quincy students in Grades K-12 will cast their ballots in the innovative Kids Voting Program being piloted in Quincy as a model for the Kids Voting Massachusetts Program.

Quincy Kids Voting Project Coordinator Harold Crowley reports that the program has generated a great deal of excitement among students, parents, and the community. He expects that as many as 10,000 students, along with their parents, will show up at the polls.

Election will be announced along with the adult results.

Volunteers will be scheduled on two to three hour shifts (primarily in the afternoon and evening) while the polling places are open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Those who volunteer as precinct captains will spend all or part of the day at the precincts.

"The response to our earlier appeal for volunteers has been terrific," said Crowley. "Any and all who volunteered will be called during the next week or so by precinct captains to arrange a convenient time to help out. We will need all the volunteers that we can get."

The 30 voting precincts will be staffed by volunteers who will assist the kids in voting, following the same procedures as adult voters. Their ballots will differ only slightly from the adult ballots in that they will have photos of the candidates on them. The ballots will be tallied separately and the results of the Kids Voting

New Committee Will Consider Future Use Of Naval Housing

State Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Michael Bellotti announced Tuesday the formation of the Squantum Gardens/Naval Terrace Housing Committee.

The two men said the recent closing of the South Weymouth Naval Air Station has created the need to plan and consider the re-use of the Navy housing in Quincy.

"Most people don't realize Squantum Gardens/Naval Terrace is part of the South Weymouth Naval Air Station," said Morrissey.

Morrissey, who represents Abington and Rockland in addition to Quincy, is an appointed member of the 35-member Naval Air Station Base Re-Use Committee. During a Sept. 19 meeting, the committee appointed Morrissey chairman and liaison for the Squantum Housing Units. Morrissey said Squantum Gardens has 58 units and Naval Terrace 48 units. Currently, they are at about 50 percent capacity—a number that is dwindling at the Naval personnel are reassigned—and that the property should be completely vacated by August or September of next year, he noted.

Morrissey and Bellotti said it is important that an alternate use be found for the property as soon as possible. Among the possible uses for the site would be senior housing or home ownership, they said.

"We want to continue to attract people who make a contribution and commitment to the community," said Bellotti.

Morrissey and Bellotti have been joined in their efforts to form a local sub-committee by Congressman Gerry Studds, Mayor James Sheets and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers.

"The mayor was excited about the potential re-use opportunities and committed his assistance and city support or resources for the committee," said Morrissey.

"The committee will allow us to receive local input on the re-use of the housing units," said Ayers.

Bellotti added, "The sub-committee will allow us to pool a wide variety of community individuals with specialized resources or concerns to help make recommendations and study re-use ideas for the housing units."

The state Land Bank and federal officials have recommended a committee be formed to review proposals and present an acceptable re-use plan before the Navy releases the property.

"Congressman Studds has expressed his support at the prospect of this community involvement

Burgin Parkway Traffic Back To Normal

Things have finally returned to normal on Burgin Parkway.

A giant sinkhole on the roadway that diverted traffic for nearly a month has been repaired, according to Quincy Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon.

Gillon said traffic on Burgin Parkway was back to normal Friday at 7:15 a.m., three days ahead of schedule. He praised the firm that did the work, Nina Construction Co. of Quincy, as well as the Army Corps of Engineers which oversaw the repairs.

The 30-by-15-foot hole, which was located between the School Street overpass and Star Market, opened up Sept. 17 when a rain-swollen culvert blew out beneath the road. It was near where the Army Corps of Engineers has been digging a 25-foot-deep retention basin and a 180-foot-deep shaft as part of its Town Brook control project.

City officials have said the costs of the repairs is not Quincy's responsibility, since the $18 million flood control project is jointly funded by the federal government and the Metropolitan District Commission.

SAFE OUT-PATIENT SURGERY

One of the great changes in medical care in recent years has been the trend toward more out-patient surgery. This has turned out often to be good for patients in terms of quicker, more comfortable recoveries and reduced medical costs.

However, being on your own after surgery rather than under the watchful eyes of medical professionals calls for a few common-sense tips. Get the phone numbers of the surgeon, anesthesiologist, and facility where the surgery is performed. Make sure you understand post-operative instructions on what to eat, drink, and do to care for yourself. Have someone else do the driving for the first 24 hours or so following surgery. Finally, don't stay alone your first night home. P.S. More than 60 percent of operations today are done on an out-patient basis.

Out-patient surgery can save your time and money, but be sure to have a friend or spouse come to take you home. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, located at 700 Congress St., in Quincy, we take the time we need to get the information necessary to make the proper diagnosis. We specialize in treating heart problems, hypertension and cholesterol. Call 472-2550, office hours by appointment. Presented as a public service for the benefit of all by the offices of COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE.

The Crazy Crosswalk

The craziest crosswalk in Quincy has got to be the one in Quincy Sq. just a few yards north of Granite St.

It's the one in front of The Sun office on one side of the street and Photo Quick-J.B. Optical-Phase II on the other.

It's a wonder someone hasn't been killed or flattened by a car trying to get from one side to the other.

I don't mean jaywalking. I mean while crossing in the crosswalk.

Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon, in response to complaints, first erected two prominent yellow signs each with the figure of a pedestrian and the word YIELD below it.

One sign facing traffic going north and one for traffic going south.

Well, that didn't do much to stop cars or slow them down.

So, Gillon tried again. This time he came up with two yellow, red and white signs and combined them with the first two.

Now they boldly proclaim, from top to bottom: YIELD State Law STOP For Pedestrians in Crosswalk.

Few motorists pay any attention to them, either. Traffic often zooms along Hancock St. in this area as though it was the Indianapolis Raceway.

Some of it seems to be trying to make up for having to stop at lights nearby. Cars stopped at the light just south of City Hall seem to speed toward Granite St. trying to beat the light there. Cars heading north after stopping at the light at Granite St. roar toward Temple St. to beat the light there.

The only sure time traffic slows down is when a pretty girl starts to cross the street. All right, Miss, go right ahead.

So, Jack, how about one more try to solve this?

How about hiring a beautiful girl and have her periodically cross from one side to the other?

She will do more to stop traffic than all the signs in town.

I'll probably hear from feminists on this proposed solution. I admit it sounds a little ridiculous.

GILLON

But then, this is a crazy crosswalk. And it really might need a crazy solution.

CONGRESSMAN Gerry Studds will be the keynote speaker at the Quincy Democratic City Committee Brunch Sunday, Oct. 29 at 10 a.m. at the Bryan VFW Post, Broad St. Tickets are $15.

STUDDS

TERRANOVA

A good turnout is expected. And among those planning to be there is Frank Terranova, former Superintendent of Maintenance for the Quincy Housing Authority. Frank, at age 88 (a young 88), is the Dean of the Democratic City Committee.

A HARROWING EXPERIENCE has kept Michael Jovanovic, candidate for the School Committee, away from the campaign trail.

JOVANOVIC

Jovanovic reports he was driving along Rte. 36 near Rte. 27 in Pembroke Sept. 16 when his car was hit on the left side by a truck. He was wearing a seat belt and, ironically, the belt buckle dug into his right side and shattered his right kidney. "I thought I had been shot," he says.

He was taken to South Shore Hospital and from there flown by helicopter to Mass. General Hospital where the kidney had to be removed.

Jovanovic is recuperating at home and says he hopes to get out and do some campaigning.

A FUNDRAISER-RALLY for Larry Chretien, who is giving up his Ward 3 City Council seat for run for council-at-large, will be held Tuesday, Oct. 24, 7 to 10 p.m. at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center, Quarry St.

And, with a homey touch. There will be homemade Italian food served buffet style with his mother, Lillian (Stasio) Chretien supervising the cooking. Donation is $15.

ANOTHER FUNDRAISER for Ron McCarthy, candidate for School Committee, has a fund-raiser on tap at Callahan's Tap, 296 Copeland St. Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m.

AND, School Committeewoman Linda Stice, who is seeking re-election, has a fundraiser coming up Wednesday, Oct. 25, 7 to 9 p.m. at The Fours, Cottage Ave., Quincy Center. Any donation. For more info call 773-1552.

Bellotti Offering College Handbook

State Rep. Michael Bellotti announces that the 1995-96 edition of the "Handbook on Admissions and Financial Aid at Independent Colleges in Massachusetts" is now available through his office.

The handbook tells students and their parents how and when to apply for college financial aid. It also describes state, federal and college-supported financial aid programs and contains college admissions information and application deadlines.

He added that he hopes the information will encourage the financially needy Massachusetts students to consider college, particularly those who would not attend otherwise.

Those who would like copies of the "Handbook" should call Bellotti at 722-2210.

Scenes From Yesterday

Bird's Eye View. The Town and North Harbor Looking South from Great Hill, Houghs Neck, Mass.

THIS IS A 1911 POSTCARD view from Great Hill at the end of Houghs Neck showing the town and what was known then as the North Harbor on the right. At that time, in the Bayview Ave. area, there were a number of piers stretching over the mud flats to the "harbor's" deeper water. In the distant right center you can see the steeple of the long gone

Suggests Quarry St. Site For Abigail Adams Park

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Now that the Morrisette Post has decided not to locate their new clubhouse atop Quarry St., and the City Council is considering rezoning this city-owned land back to "Open Space," our associations suggest that this would be an ideal location for the new Abigail Adams Park, to give tourists on our Historic Trail bus an unmatched view of Boston Harbor as a finale to their visits to the Adams home- steads and burial place.

To make the Abigail Adams Park complete, of course, we feel the new Abigail Adams (with son John Quincy Adams) statue should be located at the apex of Quarry St. in recognition of Mrs. Adams' wisdom and sage advice to her husband and son that made the presidencies of John Adams and John Quincy Adams so great. This tribute to Abigail Adams, the woman, would be admirable and very appropriate.

Undoubtedly, government (i.e. Park Service) grant funds would be available to clear the site of overgrowth and do the necessary filling to create a mini-park (with bus turnaround) that would give visitors an unforgettable view of historic Boston Harbor from Quincy's summit.

We trust that the Quincy 2000 Partnership will seriously consider our Abigail Adams Park suggestion to increase tourist interest in Quincy. The statue deserves a place of special prominence for its best recognition and appreciation. Such recognition would be lost in placing the statue at the high-traffic hurly-burly side of the First Parish Church.

CP Of South Shore Seeking Volunteers

Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore (CPSS) in Quincy is seeking volunteers.

CPSS, an independent, non-affiliated agency, runs a number of programs throughout Eastern Massachusetts including The Children's Developmental Disabilities Center and The Options Personal Care Attendant Program.

"Our programs serve children and adults with a wide range of disabilities from Cerebral Palsy to Muscular Dystrophy, and from Alzheimer's Disease to AIDS," said CPSS Director of Development Matt LaBarre. "In fact, we are in the process of changing our name because it no longer describes who we work for or where."

The agency is initiating a series of programs in Quincy and is looking for volunteers to assist in their development. New programs include several public education initiatives: a Holistic-Wellness Program in association with several other health agencies, a Pre-Natal Health Program, a Domestic Abuse/Disabled Population-focused Program, and a Disability Barriers Awareness Project.

LaBarre said the organization is also anxious to begin a Community Needs Assessment and Strategic Planning Process in Quincy and needs volunteers to work on that project.

In addition, CPSS is seeking volunteers who would like to help hand out information at local health fairs and seminars, help organize special events and fund-raisers, and help in mail/fund-raising.

Quincy residents interested in volunteering should call LaBarre at 479-7443 or 1-800-924-7570.

City Council Delays Funds For Ice Rink

By PAUL HAROLD

The proposed $1.5 million combined hockey rink and school administrative offices project for Faxon Field was put on hold until after the elections by vote of the City Council.

Voting 5-3 for the postponement, the council said the seemingly non-controversial issue had become a "political football." At issue was the School Committee's control of the facility. Before the planning funds for the project were approved by the council, a number of councillors wanted the land transferred from the school department to the city.

QUINN MAIN SPEAKER AT BURNS STATUE CEREMONIES

City Councillor John Quinn, standing in for an ailing Mayor James McIntyre, presided over ceremonies re-dedicating the Robert Burns statue at its new location at Presidents Lane and Upland Rd. The statue had to be moved from its original School St. site because of the construction of the new School St. bridge.

More than 300 persons attended the ceremonies, complete with bagpipe music and a parade of colorful tartan kilts. Dr. Donald MacLeod and George Stephens were co-chairmen of the event. Committee members included Alexander Smith and Earle MacLeod.

BIG WORKLOAD PREDICTED FOR SHIPYARD

Federal Maritime chief Andrew Gibson predicted that General Dynamics would have "one of the best order books in the country" by the end of next year. He said the Quincy yard would figure prominently in Nixon's new maritime shipping program that would revitalize the nation's merchant marine fleet.

He also predicted that the Quincy Yard would build LNG tankers for which there was a growing demand.

Hilliard Paige, the president of General Dynamics assured Sens. Kennedy and Brooke of his company's strong commitment to stay in Quincy.

MOLLIE HIRSHBERG LEARNING CENTER at 6 Fort St. was dedicated by South Shore Mental Health (SSMH) recently. The center was named in memory of Mollie Hirshberg, a founding member of the SSMH Board of Directors who was active in the agency's Step One Early Intervention program. Among those in attendance were, from left, SSMH President/CEO Harry Shulman, Hirshberg's husband, Dr. Sumner Hirshberg and sister, Lois Hirshberg; and state Sen. Michael Morrissey.

Dedication Held For Mollie Hirshberg Learning Center

South Shore Mental Health (SSMH) held a dedication ceremony recently for the Mollie Hirshberg Learning Center, a new facility for children with developmental needs.

The new facility, located at the SSMH site at 6 Fort St., will accommodate the agency's growing Step One Early Intervention program which helps parents recognize and understand their child's developmental needs. The SSMH Early Intervention staff works with children from infancy to age 3 who have physical disabilities, health conditions, on other situations that affect their development.

Mollie Hirshberg was a founding member of the South Shore Mental Health Board of Directors and served on the board until her death in 1991. The new center named in her memory will allow SSMH to expand its Early Intervention program and work with more children from South Shore communities.

Hirshberg's friends and family formed the Mollie Hirshberg Foundation, Inc. to raise money in her memory. The learning center was funded, in part, by the foundation's efforts.

SARAH LEWIS places a doll in a crib during an open house following the dedication ceremony at the new Mollie Hirshberg Learning Center. The center, part of South Shore Mental Health's Step One Early Intervention program, provides specialists, social workers, physical and speech therapists and psychologists for children's developmental needs.

Among those in attendance at the dedication ceremony were SSMH President/CEO Harry Shulman, Mayor James Sheets, state Sen. Michael Morrissey, Reps. Michael Bellotti and Stephen Tobin and a number of Hirshberg's friends and family members. An open house followed the ceremony.

City To Receive $30,000 In Public Safety Funding

Quincy's State House delegation announces that the city will receive $30,000 in grant money from the Commonwealth's Executive Office of Public Safety.

The grants are a result of a $12 million Community Policing Program the delegation successfully supported during budget deliberations for the state's Fiscal Year 1996 budget.

"As we continue our efforts to assist law enforcement officials in making Quincy's streets a safe haven for everyone but criminals, these monies will serve to enhance the vigorous efforts of the Quincy Police Department," said Rep. Ronald Mariano.

This year's appropriation brings the total to more than $28 million that the delegation and their colleagues have garnered for the Commonwealth's municipal police departments. The monies are utilized by cities and towns to fund neighborhood watch programs, beat officers, and other initiatives which cultivate a long-term working relationship between the residents of a community and the local police department.

Rep. Stephen Tobin said crime statistics from the most recent reporting period show that the Legislature's support of local law enforcement efforts is making a positive difference in the success of law enforcement activities. He added that the statistics reveal that since the onset of the legislative initiative, overall crime is down by 4.7 percent, violent crime has decreased by 3.3 percent and burglary fell 10.7 percent.

"The statistics speak for themselves," said Tobin. "Our efforts are providing a safer Quincy."

Rep. Michael Bellotti agreed.

"Having secured a record amount of local aid for Quincy's school, police and fire departments, we will continue to seek avenues which will put more police on the street and place appropriate resources in the hands of our law enforcement officials," said Bellotti.

City, United Way Construct Squaw Rock Walking Trail

The City of Quincy and the United Way teamed up recently to construct a walking trail at Squaw Rock Park in Squantum.

As part of the United Way's statewide Community Care Day, about 100 volunteers from State Street Bank, Arbella Insurance Company, Boston Financial Data Services and United Parcel Services helped build the one-mile trail behind the Nickerson Post at the end of Dorchester Street in Squantum.

The stonedust trail winds through the park and offers a complete view of Boston Harbor and its islands. Officials said very few people previously knew of the site because of the lack of access, but the work done by the United Way and the city will now open up the property to be appreciated.

"The effort put forth by the volunteers was quite impressive," said Park Department Executive Director Thomas Koch. "They easily exceeded our expectations for this project and as a result the City of Quincy is benefitted by a beautiful, passive recreation location.

"We hope that this is the first of many major steps toward turning Squaw Rock Park into an area that can be enjoyed by Quincy residents of all ages for many years to come."

Project volunteers spent the day clearing and removing underbrush and laying and raking stonedust for the four-foot-wide path. The volunteers cleared at least two feet of natural growth on either side of the path to increase safety at the site.

"It is encouraging to have businesses like State Street, Arbella, BFDS and UPS take such an active role in their surrounding community," said Koch. "Quincy has definitely been the beneficiary of the hard work of their employee volunteers. The United Way is also to be applauded for their continuing service to the city and its citizens."

Joseph Lind Named AP Scholar By College Board

Joseph Lind of Quincy High School has been named an AP Scholar by the College Board in recognition of his exceptional achievement on the college-level Advanced Placement Examinations. Approximately 11 percent of the nation's graduating seniors have taken one or more AP Examinations. Only about 12 percent of the more than 504,000 students who took AP Examinations in May performed at a sufficiently high level to merit such recognition.

Lind was the only Quincy High student to qualify for the AP Scholar with Honor Award by earning grades of 3 or above on four or more AP Examinations, with an average grade of at least 3.25.

Health Dept. Food Service Training Workshop Oct. 24

The Quincy Health Department will sponsor a Food Service Training Workshop for all food handlers in the city Tuesday, Oct. 24 from 8:30 to 11 a.m. and 1:30 to 4 p.m. at the J.F.K. Health Center, 1120 Hancock St.

Because of the ever-present danger of food poisoning and its impact on individuals and on food service establishments along with the additional responsibility faced by those who serve food to the public, the health department recommends that at least one person from each shift within a food service establishment attend the workshop.

To assist with scheduling coverage, employees may attend either the morning or afternoon session.

Ron Herzberg, R.S. of Food and Environmental Safety of America (FESA), will present the workshop which is based upon ServSafe's nationally recognized guide, "Serving Safe Food." Each participant will receive a copy of the booklet, an N.S.F.-approved 0-200 degrees Fahrenheit thermometer, various handouts and a certificate of attendance.

Cost is $36. Checks should be made out to F.E.S.A., 50 Hunt St., Suite 315, Watertown, MA 02172. Registration forms must be completed and received at that address by Friday.

Quincy Delegation Lauds Passage Of Fair Credit Reporting Act

The members of Quincy's Legislative delegation have lauded the Massachusetts House of Representatives' recent approval of the so-called Fair Credit Reporting Act.

Delegation members said the bill, which is designed to correct the deficiencies within the credit bureau industry, will protect privacy, reduce errors and establish a system to correct mistakes in a timely manner.

"Clearly a significant victory for Massachusetts residents, this measure is an important advance in the area of consumer protection," said Rep. Ronald Mariano. "Not only will this serve to improve an individual's access to their credit records, but it will also remove the all-too-common nightmare of correcting faulty and damaging reports."

Rep. Michael Bellotti said that given the significance of a person's credit report on their ability to access money, housing, insurance and jobs, ensuring the dissemination of accurate information is "now more critical than ever."

Rep. Stephen Tobin agreed, noting that there are studies which indicate that as many as one of every three consumer credit reports contains errors.

Hoping to reduce that statistic, the House moved to require credit reporting agencies to provide a free copy of consumers' reports on an annual basis. Furthermore, agencies would be required to investigate disputed information within a 30-day period. If the date is found to be inaccurate, the agency must remove the error from the record in three days.

Another provision of the initiative allows consumers to remove their names from lists that are sold to marketing and pre-screening companies, thus ensuring a greater degree of privacy than is currently available. The reporting agency must also provide an explanation of individual consumer rights.

Mariano said the Senate also has approved the measure and that the legislation is now on the governor's desk awaiting his signature.

THE O'NEIL HOUSE, a new home for homeless women in Quincy operated by the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition (QISC), recently received a donation of 100 gallons of heating oil from East Coast Petroleum and Quincy Oil Cooperative of North Quincy. Impact Quincy Part Of 'Great American Speakout' Impact Quincy is joining other organizations in the Great American Speakout, President Clinton's initiative to limit youth access to tobacco.

Among the other groups participating in the effort are the U.S. Department of Health and Human Service, the Food and Drug Administration, American Cancer Society, and Massachusetts Boards of Health and Prevention Centers.

The Clinton administration's proposal to reduce smoking by children and adolescents by 50 percent reads as follows:

REDUCING EASY ACCESS BY CHILDREN

•Require age verification and face-to-face sale and eliminate mail order sales, vending machines, free samples, self-service displays, and sale of single cigarettes ("loosies") and packages with fewer than 20 cigarettes ("kiddie packs").

REDUCING APPEAL TO CHILDREN

•Ban outdoor advertising within 1,000 feet of schools and playgrounds.

•Permit black-and-white advertising in publications with significant youth readership (under 18). ("Significant readership" means more than 15 percent or more than 2 million. No restrictions on print advertising below these levels).

•Prohibit sale or giveaway of products like caps or gym bags that carry cigarette or smokeless tobacco product brand names or logos. Prohibit exchange of non-tobacco products for proof of purchase of tobacco products.

•Prohibit brand name sponsorship of sporting or entertainment levels, but permit it in the corporate name.

•Require industry to fund ($150 million annually) a public education campaign to prevent kids from smoking.

Those interested in supporting the proposal can fill out the box on this page and mail it to the following address before Nov. 9: Dockets Management Branch (HFA-305), Food and Drug Administration, Rm. 1-23, 12420 Parklawn Drive, Rockville, MD 20857.

Additional comments and letters may also be sent to the FDA before Nov. 9. For more information, call MaryLou Gifford at Impact Quincy, 472 6027.

Docket Number: 95N-0253

Dear Commissioner Kessler

I write to express my strong support for the FDA's efforts to control the sale, distribution and marketing of tobacco products in this country, particularly as those efforts relate to preventing the next generation of children from becoming addicted to tobacco.

There can be no question that federal leadership and a comprehensive program are needed if we are going to see a downward turn in the number of deaths caused by the use of tobacco products.

Ambulance Co. Pays City $500,000 For Overbilling

that will educate residents who may have been unaware of the overbilling problem.

Raymond said this week anything that is left over in the account following the reimbursement of residents will be used for senior programs because elderly residents have been the component of the population most inconvenienced by the overbilling problem.

Since the problem was discovered, Norfolk-Bristol ASA-Ambulance Systems of America has admitted to mistakenly billing more than 120 residents for its services. The Quincy Sun was the first media organization to report about the overbilling.

According to its contract with the city, the ambulance company cannot charge indigent or uninsured residents for its services. If a patient has insurance, it must charge no more than the allowable rate and must bill the insurance company directly. Norfolk-Bristol cannot bill the patient for the balance if the insurance company declines to pay the full amount.

Auditors from Feeley and Driscoll of Boston who examined the company's billing procedures said they found a pattern of billing in violation of the company's contract.

However, because auditors examined only a small number of bills, they could not arrive at an amount that had been overpaid. They instead presented a range of figures for overpayments in fiscal years 1991-92 through 1994-95.

The eventual $500,000 was negotiated between the city and Norfolk-Bristol, despite the company's initial opinion that a figure of $200,000 would be fairer.

"We took a very tough position," Sheets said this week. "We said from the outset we wanted $500,000, because we determined based on everything we learned that was the figure which was the most fair. We made it very clear we would not accept $200,000."

Halloween Party For Adults At Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library will put a twist on Halloween by holding a party for adults in its Richardson Building Sunday, Oct. 29 at 7 p.m.

The party is the first in a series of fundraising events to benefit a restoration program at the library. Tickets are on sale at the main library and all branch libraries for $12 each.

Two major figures in the library's early history will make their ghostly appearance to welcome party-goers and to introduce the evening's program of dramatized readings from classic and contemporary horror literature. Director Ann Carol is staging the program among the Richardson Building's shadowy alcoves and balconies.

Light refreshments will be served during the evening. The library's fundraising campaign will allow significant restoration and preservation work in the historic building.

Brian Kelly Departs On Overseas Deployment

Navy Petty Officer 1st Class Brian Kelly, a 1980 graduate of Quincy High School, has departed for a six-month overseas deployment while serving aboard the amphibious assault ship USS Wasp as the lead ship of the USS Wasp Amphibious Ready Group (ARG).

Kelly is one of more than 2,000 sailors and marines aboard the ship, which departed Norfolk, Va. along with the amphibious transport ship USS Shreveport, the dock landing ship USS Whidbey Island and the 26th Marine Expeditionary Unit.

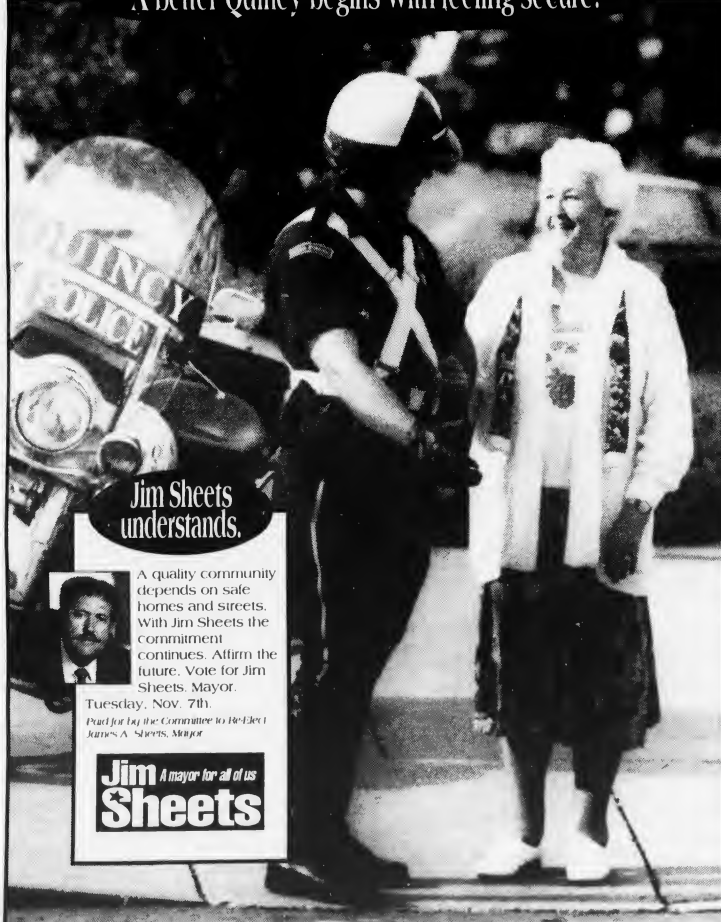

Kelly and his fellow sailors and marines spent the last year training for what they might encounter during the deployment.

They replaced the USS Kearsarge ARG, which had been operating in the Mediterranean and Adriatic Seas near Bosnia-Herzegovina. USS Kearsarge helped rescue U.S. Air Force Capt. Scott O'Grady after he was shot down over Bosnia.

Kelly will travel approximately 25,000 miles during the six-month voyage and will spend a majority of time at sea. While deployed, he also will work with various foreign military units as they train in combined exercises conducting amphibious landings.

He joined the Navy in July 1981.

A better Quincy begins with feeling secure.

Sisters Reunited With Brother After 60 Years

contain the date of birth of each student.

With their brother's birthdate now in hand, the sisters were able to obtain his Reading address through the Massachusetts Department of Motor Vehicles. They contacted him soon thereafter after they dialed information to get his telephone number.

Soyland was quickly reunited with her brother at his Reading home, a moment that neither will soon forget.

"He just came up to me and gave me a big hug and said, 'I remember you!'" she said with a smile.

And the joy just kept growing when Ivins, a retired employee of the General Tire Co. City of Industry in southern California, soon flew in from the West Coast and joined the others during a full family reunion at Logan Airport.

There was a lot of catching up to do. The sisters discovered that their brother is a retired boilmaker and Air Force veteran of World War II with a wife named Mildred, three sons and eight grandchildren. Brennan learned that Soyland and her husband Trygve have five children and 13 grandchildren while Ivins, whose husband August has passed away, has four children and seven grandchildren.

Since then, the siblings have held a big celebration in Reading for Brennan's recent 71st birthday as well as visited Squantum Elementary to tour the school and to thank Houghton.

Soyland said the entire experience is something none of the three will ever be able to forget.

"My sister was thrilled when we found Frank," she said. "Frank said it was the best birthday he could ever think of."

"And words can't express how I felt. It was one of the happiest moments of my life."

Aaron Skomial On Overseas Deployment

Navy Petty Officer 3rd Class Aaron M. Skomial, a 1990 graduate of Quincy High School, is halfway through a six-month overseas deployment to the Persian Gulf aboard the guided missile cruiser USS Vella Gulf.

Skomial is one of 415 sailors aboard the ship which departed Norfolk, Va. in June for the trip to the Middle East. He has traveled approximately 15,000 miles and has been helping enforce the no-fly zone over Southern Iraq. His ship has controlled fighter jets from the aircraft carrier USS Lincoln and has tracked other aircraft operating over the southern part of Iraq.

Skomial and fellow shipmates also have been working in support of the ongoing maritime interception operations designed to prevent ships from smuggling prohibited materials to and from Iraq. His ship has stopped and searched several vessels suspected of transporting contraband.

Skomial joined the Navy in August 1992.

Division On Concourse At Public Hearing

three businesses and three multi-unit dwellings. The Revere Road option would spare the Legion hall but would displace one Mechanic Street dwelling and up to 11 businesses.

All of the support for the concourse Monday night came from representatives of the business community, including Tony Agnitti who owns properties that would be razed as a result of the construction of the east link or second phase of the project.

"I'm strongly in favor," said Agnitti, who would lose properties as a result of either east link option. "The access in that point of the city is difficult and will only get worse. I wholeheartedly support this."

But opponents, who outnumbered the three supporters by more than five to one, said they are either unsatisfied with the current concourse proposal or feel that the roadway is completely unnecessary. Mayoral candidate Roger Lyons said the proposed plan is not feasible.

"You already have the so-called 'gridlock,'" said Lyons. "Start from scratch with new ideas. This plan isn't going to work."

John Howard of 28 Ridgeway St., noting that he is a retired architect, said he has never experienced a serious traffic problem in Quincy in 25 years and called the concourse proposal "a farce."

"Talk about knocking in a tack with a sledgehammer," said Howard. "This is an attempt to sell the Brooklyn Bridge to the people of Quincy."

Dr. Carl Goodman, a member of the Quincy Center Concourse Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) who has proposed a third plan for building the east link of the concourse, said he wants his proposal reviewed by an independent firm that has no affiliation with the project. Officials from Whitman and Howard Engineers of Wellesley, who devised the current concourse proposal, have said Goodman's plan is not feasible because it involves Cliveden Street which they say is too narrow to allow the plan to work.

"I hope that the City Council will feel there's some reason to have another idea," said Goodman.

Goodman's wife Arlene, another CAC member, noted that some city officials have called the Mechanic Street plan the "least disruptive" option for the east link because it will affect the lesser number of businesses. Despite that fact, she said, a comparable number of properties will be affected, even if they are not all stores.

"To me, both these routes as just as disruptive," she said.

The council itself also was divided on the issue, with some councillors voicing opposition and others speaking in favor of the project. Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien voiced strong support of the concourse project.

"The downtown would be much better off today if this was done 20 years ago," said Chretien. "Stores like Colman's Sporting Goods (which has been replaced by a Blockbuster Video store) would have benefitted greatly from the concourse."

Chretien added that he is open-minded about any changes to the concourse plan that would make things easier for downtown merchants and property owners.

Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan said he supports the concourse concept, but would like to see some modifications. By moving the concourse further in the city-owned Hancock Parking Lot, he reasoned, the impact on properties will not be as great.

"I just think it makes more sense to take our own land," said Phelan.

Others voiced opposition of the project. Councillor Timothy Cahill, a longtime opponent of the proposal, was the most vocal.

"I've had problems with this project from the beginning," said Cahill. "For two years, we've been told this is crucial for the development of the Hancock Lot, but this has nothing to do with the Hancock Lot. It's mind-boggling. I don't think this project is the way to go."

"I also think it's a disservice to the veterans of this city to even be discussing (razing) this Legion post."

Cahill added that it is the economy, not traffic access, that has caused downtown businesses to struggle and dreams that the concourse will bring back the "Shoppertown" Quincy Center of the past are unrealistic.

"It isn't going to happen," he said.

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson said he is unsatisfied with the current plan.

"I have serious, serious reservations," he said. "As the plan generally stands right now...I would not vote for it."

Council President Michael Cheney said the issue is a long way off from being resolved and that at least two more public hearings will be held before a final decision is made. He added that he also would like the council to take a look at Dr. Goodman's plan for the east link.

"I read the Goodman plan, and I think it was too easily dismissed," he said.

The $5.9 million concourse project would be funded by state and federal monies. The cost of landtaking, which is not yet known, also would be picked up by the state and federal government, according to Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton.

Colton added that the city will pay for design and engineering costs, estimated at about $700,000.

On Monday night, a request for a $400,000 appropriation was sent to the council's Finance Committee. Colton said the amount is needed to complete a state-required environmental impact report and preliminary design work.

New Committee Will Consider Future Use Of Naval Housing

and re-use potential of the Naval housing in Quincy," said Morrissey. "The congressman has also promised to provide access to federal resources and economic development support to the project for re-use of the old housing."

He has made available a staff person to sit on the committee and assist with planning and help coordinate the disposal and surplus of the housing units."

That staff person, Studds spokesman P.J. O'Sullivan, said the federal government has a 30-day period which began Sept. 26 to express any interest in that community. If it does so, it then has an additional 60 days to come up with a plan justifying its interest, he added.

If there is no federal interest, the property will likely be turned over to the state, county or local government.

Morrissey said the new Quincy committee will hold its first meeting Thursday, Nov. 9 at 7 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center, after the federal government's 30-day review period has passed. The public is invited.

Bellotti said members of the public are also welcome to bring ideas for the use of the property to any committee member.

"It's a rare opportunity for the community to have proactive input," he said. "Anyone can come and speak at these meetings."

Morrissey said the selected members of the Quantum Gardens/Naval Terrace Housing Committee all bring special expertise and backgrounds that will help in determining the property's future.

Committee members include: Morrissey, Bellotti, Sheets, Ayers, O'Sullivan, former Quincy Savings Bank President Charles Simpson Jr., Squantum Community Association President Francis Buckley, Marina Bay developer George O'Malley, Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition Executive Director Joseph Finn, Marina Bay Towers President Joseph Tangusso, Mark Bikash, trustee of the Harborside Townhouse Development at Marina Bay; Atlantic Neighborhood Association representative Maryann Mahony, who was manager of the former Best Buy store near the property; Quincy Conservation Commission member and local contractor Paul Kennedy, Quincy Planning Director Richard Meade, Quincy Community Action Programs Executive Director Rosemary Wahlberg, Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to Sheets and Thomas Chirillo of the South Shore Building Trades Council.

Council Appropriates $200,000 For Rec. Program

The City Council Monday night appropriated $200,000 to the Quincy Recreation Department.

Recreation Director Barry Welch said the money, which was taken from Quincy's free cash (cash reserve) account, will be used to continue and expand the department's After School Recreation Program which began last year.

Welch said the program, which was designed to provide children with constructive after-school activities, has thus far been very successful.

Several councillors, including Council President Michael Cheney, praised Welch and said they look forward to seeing the program expand.

"I think we can build on this," said Cheney.

State Legislature Approves Elderly Housing Measure

State Reps. Ronald Mariano, Stephen Tobin and Michael Bellotti, along with their colleagues in the legislature, have approved a comprehensive measure that addresses the issue of mixed populations in state-funded elderly housing developments.

"I am pleased to support this legislation as it will improve housing options for our state's seniors while protecting the rights of handicapped individuals," said Mariano. "Fortunately, we were able to incorporate several safety precautions into this legislation."

Earlier this year, Mariano filed legislation to provide a secure living environment for residents of Quincy's elderly public housing complexes. Many of the components of Mariano's legislation to reform elderly housing have been incorporated into the legislation that was approved by both the House and the Senate late last week.

According to Tobin, once implemented, the plan grants seniors a preference in 86.5 percent of all available state public housing units for elderly residents.

Prior to the delegation's action, seniors did not receive preferential treatment when decisions were being made.

Said Bellotti: "Well aware of the growing safety concerns expressed by our state's seniors who reside in these developments, the delegation was determined to see the new law include provisions which will provide appropriate protections."

Included in the legislation are safeguards to establish strict standards for admission as well as a streamlined eviction process to address tenants who pose a danger to the safety and well-being of other residents.

Also in the initiative are a $4 million transitional rental assistance program for qualified handicapped persons, a service coordinator's program to help elderly and disabled tenants find and access appropriate housing, funds for a Massachusetts Housing Registry to list available units containing accessible features, and an appropriation to the criminal History Systems Board to facilitate the screening process when qualifying applicants.

"Through the comprehensiveness of this legislation we have assured that no one will fall through the cracks," said Mariano.

No Action Taken On Proposed City Raises

No action was taken by the City Council Monday night on Mayor James Sheets' proposed city pay raises.

The mayor has proposed salary increases of 11 percent over the next three years for Quincy employees. The raises would be the largest for the city's unions since Sheets first took office in 1990.

Eight of nine councillors voiced support of the proposed increases last week in a survey taken by The Quincy Sun. Ward 4

Councillor Thomas Fabrizio, chairman of the council's Finance Committee, said he needed more time to review the proposal.

Chella: 'We Have To Increase Intensity'

Marshfield Rams Run Past Presidents, 35-13

The Quincy High School football team was bruised and battered in a 35-13 loss to the Marshfield Rams Saturday and now must attempt to get back on track against a Weymouth squad that hasn't allowed a point in 10 straight quarters.

"We have to put it together against a very tough Weymouth club," said Presidents coach Peter Chella. "After watching this game I'm sure the Weymouth coach (Ross Tortora) is just licking his chops."

Quincy (2-3) plays at Weymouth (3-2) Friday at 7 p.m. in an Old Colony League battle. The Wildcats have posted consecutive shutouts over Taunton (21-0) and North Quincy (28-0).

Marshfield was able to keep the Presidents off balance with a crisply executed double-wing offense that featured three different backs: Dan Gemme, Matt Generous and Matt Kalapinski. The three had the way paved by a beefy offensive line and combined for 298 rushing yards and five touchdowns on 38 attempts. Gemme did the bulk of the damage with three scores, including a 70-yard romp on his last carry to put the game away.

The loss ended the Presidents two-game win streak. "I thought we were out of this Jekyll and Hyde stuff," said Chella.

"Among the things you look for as a coach is a little intensity, but we came out flat. I'm very upset at how tentatively we played. We have to find a way to increase our intensity."

Most encouraging for Quincy was the emergence of junior quarterback Mark Glynn, who had the finest day of his two-year reign at the head position. He connected on 13 of 24 pass attempts and ran for both Presidents touchdowns.

"We haven't had to throw the ball much the last couple of weeks but (Glynn) threw well (Saturday). We seem to be getting our offensive game together," said Chella.

"Now we just have to get everything to work on all cylinders."

Glynn spread the ball around well with seven players catching passes. Wide receiver Mike Sheffer (three catches, 47 yards) and tight end Jon Ryan (three catches, 44 yards) were his top targets. Eric Nunez caught three balls for 22 yards and Bobby Walsh had two big catches over the middle for 45 yards. Bill Dunn and Tim Santos each had one reception out of the backfield.

The Presidents stepped it up after the break with 154 second-half yards.

Quincy's first score was set up late in the first half when Walsh intercepted a Mike Marino pass and returned it 40 yards to the 1. Glynn plunged in on the next play and Santos kicked the extra point to bring the Presidents to within 21-7.

He scored again in the fourth quarter with a dive from 2 yards. The 42-yard scoring drive was highlighted by a 23-yard catch by Sheffer.

The Presidents were hampered by a slew of injuries. By the fourth quarter, Dunn, Kevin Connolly and Ryan, the heart of the Quincy offense and defense, were nursing injuries or sickness on the bench. Dunn was sidelined by an illness he had been fighting all week.

Connolly had a leg infection during the week and became dehydrated during the game. Ryan suffered a severe ankle injury. All three should be available against Weymouth.

Defensively, Quincy got big plays from Walsh, Sheffer, Mike Russo, Dan Nichol, Scott MacPherson and sophomore Steve Maze, who filled in for Dunn at middle linebacker.

Russo recovered a fumble early in second quarter to stifle a Marshfield scoring opportunity, but the offense was unable to capitalize on the turnover. Sheffer batted away a potential TD pass late in the first half to keep the Presidents within striking distance going into the break.

Twelve To Be Inducted Into Football Hall Of Fame

The Quincy-North Quincy High Football Hall of Fame recently elected six former players from each school to be inducted at the Hall's Seniors Dinner.

The event, to be held Nov. 21 at the Bryan Post, honors the seniors from the two football programs as well as past greats and celebrates the tradition of the Quincy-North Quincy Thanksgiving Day rivalry.

"The Hall of Fame is really for the kids," said outgoing Hall president John Pettinelli. "We old-timers simply want the young men who wear the uniforms of Quincy High School and North Quincy High School to know they will carry the memories of their senior game with them forever. By celebrating the past, we hope to ensure a bright future for the program."

Tickets will be available through any of the club's officers, Pettinelli, Tom Kiley or Fred Cobban, Jr., or the head coaches of the two teams, Peter Chella and Ken McPhee. Both coaches are in the Hall of Fame for their performances as players for the squads they now coach.

This year's inductees, chosen to represent 10-year periods from the rivalry, are David Austin, Rick Men-chi, Ron Ivil, Charlie Furtado and Rolly DiBona from Quincy High and Dean Zola, Dennis Kelley, Ralph Frazier, Bob Doherty and John Mulligan from North Quincy.

Vinny Salvucci from Quincy and Ed Swirbalus from North Quincy will be honored posthumously. Also to be recognized at the event are Matt Ivil, Sr., who was the core of the Quincy Father's Club for many years, Charlie (The Barber) Rizzo, who symbolized North Quincy spirit for decades, and Bob Derbes, a Quincy High standout whose involvement with the high schools was the key to putting lights in the stadium.

The inductees, or persons knowing how to reach them, should contact a Hall officer as soon as possible.

For more information, call John Pettinelli at (617) 447-1467.

Squirt A's Tie Needham In Opener

The Quincy Youth Hockey Squirt A team, sponsored by South Boston Savings Bank, opened the 1995-96 campaign with a 5-5 tie against Needham.

Though not quite as bad as the Bruins debacle against Dallas Saturday night, Quincy gave up a goal with four minutes to play and another with 42 seconds left which forced the tie. Quincy fought back from an early 2-0 deficit as speedster Matt Germain scored off a Stephen Kelley feed. Needham scored again, but Billy McKeon lit the lamp to make the score 3-2 after one period. McKeon was assisted by Jamie Chiochio and Timmy Duggan.

Quincy dominated the second period as Ryan Donahue, McKeon and Mike McGonagle scored to give them a 5-3 lead going into the second intermission. McKeon, Donahue and Brian O'Hanley made assists.

Goalie Bruce Maggio turned away several good scoring bids.

Mite A's Open Against South Boston

The Quincy Youth Hockey Mite A's, sponsored by Northland Seafoods, floundered about in their opening game against South Boston.

fense were Myles (Barra-cuda) Clancy and Matt (Flash) Haskins, as they broke up play after play. Billy Jones and Andy Patten worked hard along the boards. Blue liners Brianna Nolan and Paul McClean flexed their muscles as they made some heavy hits.

Raiders Host Don Bosco Friday

Weymouth Blanks North Quincy, 28-0

By KERRY BYRNE

The North Quincy High School football team showed intensity, emotion and stretches of hard-nosed defense Friday.

However, they were unable to overcome Weymouth's swarming defensive style and the big-play ability of running back Jim Gagnon, as the Wildcats (3-2) topped the Red Raiders, 28-0.

Gagnon single-handedly took over what was a tight game in the second quarter with two touchdown runs and a long punt return for another score to give his team a 21-0 lead at the half. In the fourth quarter he returned a punt to the North Quincy (1-4) 6 yard line to set up the final score, a run by Brian Eacobacci.

The Red Raiders get a crack at win No. 2 Friday at 7 p.m. when they host Don Bosco. The Bears (1-3) are coming off a bye week. They fell to Bishop Fenwick in their most recent game and their win came on opening week against Medway.

North head coach Ken McPhee feels the iron of the schedule (Barnstable, Falmouth, Weymouth) is behind his club. "People think I'm crazy for being optimistic, but we have five games left that we can win," he said.

If they come out against Bosco they way they came out against Weymouth, the Red Raiders will be in good shape. For all Gagnon's scoring, he was unable to muster a sustained threat as the Raiders held him to 33 yards rushing on seven carries. His backfield mate, junior Jeff Zella, who ran for over 200 yards in Weymouth's 21-0 win over Taunton last week, picked up just 61 yards against North Quincy.

Co-captain Paul Picciano set the defensive tone as he walloped Zella on the game's first play from scrimmage. He was helped by the big hits of Norm Connell, Chris Ritchie, Tim Zaniboni and Mike Ferguson as the Wildcats picked up 9 yards on their first two drives and a total of 39 in the opening quarter. Weymouth would be stifled throughout the second half as well, picking up just 62 yards. However, it was the period in between that hurt North Quincy.

Gagnon entered the game on the first play of the second quarter. On his second carry he raced 17 yards for his first TD. It capped the Wildcats only lengthy drive of the game: a five-play, 73-yard march which accounted for over one-third of their 184 total yards. Minutes later Gagnon galloped 63 yards on a punt return for a score that silenced the North Quincy bench.

His final score was a 6-yard run which capped a 52-yard march.

Ferguson broke his leg making one of his many tackles. He will miss several weeks but may be able to return in time to battle Quincy on Thanksgiving Day.

Sophomore defensive backs Pat Egan and Steve Rose also came up big with a number of stops of Gagnon and Zella. Rose did it with one arm heavily bandaged from wrist to elbow. "Steve with one arm is as good a player as there is," said McPhee. "He comes to play every day. He's a lunch-bucket type of player."

Joe McCarthy made one of North Quincy's biggest defensive plays when he buried Weymouth quarterback Ryan Quill for a 12-yard loss.

Sophomore tailback Jay Turner played most of the second half and did a superb job with 49 yards on just six carries to lead the North Quincy offense.

Red Raiders quarterback J.R. Rendle had a solid evening, completing 6 of 10 passes, including three to tight end Charlie Plaskasovitis who made the tough catches in the heart of the Weymouth defense. Fullback Zaniboni was on the receiving end of two fine pass plays. He picked up 8 yards on his first reception while being hammered by Chris McDonald.

His second reception was a catch in the flat which he turned into a 22-yard gain thanks to a springing block by Plaskasovitis. Zaniboni rumbled to the Wildcats 5, but an interception in the end zone by Gagnon on the next play ended the best Red Raiders scoring opportunity.

"J.R. ran the team very well," said McPhee. "In fact, extremely well. We had a tough break down near the end zone, but that happens. He's getting better every week."

Rendle was fronted well by the play of linemen Connell, McCarthy, Picciano, Steve Stentiford and Eric Malames. McCarthy in particular drew praise from the coach. "Joe was absolutely incredible. He's outweighed in every single game but he just plays his heart out," said McPhee.

North Quincy running back Brian Walsh, who had carried most the offensive load this year with four 100-yard games, left the game in the second quarter and did not return. He is not expected to come back this year.

Girls' Soccer

NQ Girls In Battle To Reach Post-Season

The North Quincy High School girls soccer team's journey to the tourney hit a few bumps in the road in the forms of Barnstable and Silver Lake.

Both Old Colony League opponents downed the Red Raiders (7-7-1) as they went 1-2 last week.

North must now win one game and tie another with three games left if they are to make the tournament for the first time in the program's history.

The chore is not an easy one. Left on the docket is a home game against Weymouth (6-3-2 in OCL) tomorrow (Friday) at 4 p.m., a trip to league-leading Bridgewater-Raynham (6-1-3) Tuesday, Oct. 24 for a 4 o'clock contest, and the season finale at Veterans' Memorial Stadium against Quincy at 5 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 28.

The Red Raiders played one of their best games when they battled to a 1-1 tie with B-R earlier in the season. They handled Quincy, 5-1, in the first meeting between the intra-city rivals.

North Quincy's win last week was a 7-0 demolition of non-league rival Stoughton.

Kristen Kelley put the Raiders on the board at the 14-minute mark with her eighth goal of the season. She scored after taking a long feed from Liz Fitzpatrick.

Freshman Betsy Stone notched her seventh goal after getting a great pass from junior Kelly Wigmore. Sophomore Laurie Flynn was set up by Kelley one minute later to make it a 3-0 game at the half.

North continued the onslaught in the second half as freshman Dorothy Cronin headed in a corner kick off the foot of Kelley.

Senior Annie Bergen rifled in a bullet from just inside the 18-yard line for her third goal of the campaign, making it 5-0.

Fitzpatrick also collected her third tally of the year with three minutes left to play. Flynn closed the scoring with her second of the game and fourth of the year as Kelley assisted.

Strong efforts were turned in by senior Ann Parisi, who brought the crowd to its feet with a brilliant scoring bid in the second half, and Jocelyn West. Lisa Bragg posted her second shutout of the year.

Against Barnstable, North Quincy lost, 5-1.

The Red Raiders trailed, 3-0, at the break, despite outplaying Barnstable for most of the half. Tremendous scoring bids by Flynn, Cronin, Bergen and Kristen Keohane (shot hit crossbar) came up empty.

NQ's defense allowed only four first-half shots.

They scored their only goal with 12 minutes to play when Stone's cross went to Kelley who stood alone in front of the net.

The Red Raiders were blanked by Silver Lake, 5-0. The Lakers qualified for post-season play with the victory.

North Quincy's Jessie Ceurvels played her best game of the year. Freshmen Cronin and Rachael Powers played well, as did junior Hillary O'Donoghue.

Youth Football

Bennett, Panthers Roar Past Apaches

The Quincy Point Panthers roared past the North Quincy Apaches, 32-8, thanks to the three-touchdown effort by James Bennett.

Bennett scored on first-half runs of 24 and 15 yards as the Panthers took a 12-0 lead into the break. His second TD was set up when Larry Antonellis recovered an Apaches fumble on a kickoff 35 yards from the end zone.

Didier Altier threw a 29-yard touchdown pass to Mark Robertson and Bennett rushed for the two-point conversion as Quincy Point built a 20-0 lead in the third quarter.

Tough ground work by Brendan Donahue set up Bennett's third TD, a 10-yard run. Altier closed out the Panthers barrage with a 40-yard scoring run.

The Apaches scored in dramatic fashion when Matt McCann hit Mike Reidy for a touchdown on fourth-and-goal as time expired. The two combined again on a successful conversion pass.

The winning club was led by the superb two-way play of Robertson, Keith Antonellis and Mike McClellan. Sean Wilkosky, Mike Kelley, Mike Feiner, Jarrod DeCelle, Brian

Smith and Mike Dunlea came up big for the Panthers defense.

Peter Read, Joe Thorley and Seamus Hannon also played well for Quincy Point.

The Apaches were sparked by the fine play of Steven Minukas, Vincent Traietti and Reid Donovan.

Sports Spotlight

By KERRY BYRNE

The Bucknell University women's volleyball team has undergone a dramatic change recently.

Just a few years ago the Division I program was weak to say the least. The Bison endured eight straight losing seasons from 1985 to 1992, including a 4-24 campaign in that final year.

Today they stand atop the Patriot League with a 4-0 mark (14-4 overall) and are poised to break the school record of 22 wins in the season. The turnaround is one of the great stories on the national volleyball scene.

Why do we care? Well, it happens that the elevation coincided with the appearance of two North Quincy High School stars at the Lewisburg, Penn. school.

In 1992, Brenda Hayduk joined the Bucknell team. The following year Heather Rendle joined the club. Both had won state championships as the Red Raiders were, and have been, the dominant team in Massachusetts. Perhaps that winning attitude rubbed off.

In 1993, Rendle's freshman year and Hayduk's sophomore year, both saw significant time on the court as the Bison posted a 17-15 record. Because of that mark, Volleyball Monthly recognized Bucknell as the most improved team in the nation.

Last year they went 20-13 for the program's first 20-win season in 11 years.

In their most recent flurry of success, Rendle has played a particularly pivotal role.

On Oct. 3 the Bison beat league rival Lehigh for the first time in four years. Four days later they knocked off Army for the first time ever.

Rendle sparked the wins as she hit .371 with 27 kills. She had 19 kills alone in the win over the Cadets. The numbers she put up were enough to earn her Patriot League Player of Week honors.

Hayduk, a co-captain, had been the team's top setter for the past two years. This year she has become a back-row defensive specialist and has recorded 10 aces and 95 digs in 60 games.

Are the former Red Raiders doing it alone? Of course not. But there's no question that their success on one level has allowed them to become part of success on the next level.

Amy Tretheway (Thayer Academy) is running cross country at Dickinson College in Pennsylvania.

The freshman harrier placed first among all runners from her school as they placed fifth in the 21-team Dickinson Open. Tretheway had a time of 19:30 in the 5,000 meter run.

She has been the leading runner for Dickinson throughout the year.

The Mass. Maritime Academy football team remained undefeated (5-0) following a 50-7 win over Fitchburg State College Saturday.

The Bucs success has been due in no small part to co-captains Jon Columbus (B.C. High) and Chris McCallum (NQHS).

Columbus, a nose tackle, had four tackles in one half of play against Fitchburg. McCallum, a linebacker, also played just one half. He recovered a fumble, was in on a sack and made several tackles. For the season, he has made 33 tackles, recovered two fumbles and intercepted one pass.

Columbus' season totals include 27 tackles (three for losses), one sack and one fumble recovery.

Shawn Nee (NQHS) is second on the depth chart at tailback as a freshman at Bates College in Maine.

"(Shawn) seems ready to contribute this season," said Bobcats coach Rick Parley.

Brian Fitzgerald (NQHS), a junior sweeper and co-captain for the Nichols College soccer team, is among the team leaders in scoring after 15 games.

Chris Klier (Archbishop Williams) is a freshman running back on the Assumption College football team and has seen playing time with the 3-2 varsity squad on special teams. The sociology major is one of 32 freshman on the 80-man Assumption roster. Expect good things in the future.

Former Quincy High School football standouts Kevin Carey and Paul Colleary are sophomores on the Fitchburg State Falcons.

Carey, a two-year starter at defensive back, has 32 tackles and leads the New England Football Conference with five interceptions. At one point he was third in the nation in INTs.

Colleary is coming off a freshman year in which he was named to the NEFC's All-Academic team. The linebacker had 30 tackles after five games, including three for losses and one sack.

RHONDA PROVOST

Provost First Woman To Complete Badwater Run

Rhonda Provost, formerly of Houghs Neck, set out in August to become the first female to complete the Badwater Run in the Death Valley (California) 300.

At 282 feet below sea level, Death Valley is the lowest point in the Western Hemisphere and is among the hottest and driest spots on earth.

Provost ran from Death Valley to the top of Mt. Whitney, which, at 14,494 feet is the highest point in the contiguous 48 states. She then turned around and made the trip back to the starting point.

The round-trip course is approximately 300 miles of the "meanest roads and trails in the world."

Overnight temperatures atop Mt. Whitney in summer (when she made her run) regularly drop below freezing and are often accompanied by hailstorms and sometimes snow. Road surface temperatures in Death Valley regularly rise to over 200 degrees.

"I made it!!!" Rhonda wrote her parents.

By rule, contestants cannot run all night, and can't start the route before 7 a.m. It took Rhonda 5 days, 23 hours and 45 minutes to complete her run.

Now an anesthesiologist in Forestville, CA, Rhonda 46 years, is the second of the seven children of Stan and Edie Provost 52 Crosby St., Houghs Neck.

They have just returned from a visit with her in California.

Fall Car Care

It's Time To Be

What's In A Tune-Up? More Than You'd Think

New car commercials feature 100,000 mile intervals between recommended tune-ups. Most cars would be in pretty bad shape if their owners waited that long.

When the owner of a typical car goes into the shop for a "complete tune-up," a service generally required every 30,000 miles or every two or three years, what services should be included? Electric ignition, computerized engine controls and electronic fuel injection have eliminated any of the adjustments that once were part of a traditional tune-up.

One of the main reasons people take their vehicles into their technician for a tune-up is because they are experiencing a "driveability" problem: starting, stalling, hesitation on acceleration, poor gas mileage or lack of power. These symptoms in today's complex engines require a comprehensive diagnostic check, including an exhaust emissions check (now mandatory in many areas).

Following are 17 items usually included in a complete tune-up. The list may vary according to vehicle and/or the shop providing the service, but it's a handy reference for owners seeking quality service.

1. Replace spark plugs.
2. Check the distributor cap and replace it if necessary.
3. Check ignition timing and adjust if necessary.
4. Check ignition wires and replace if necessary.
5. Check ignition performance (firing voltage/ignition patterns).
6. Check engine idle speed and adjust if necessary.
7. Check the choke mechanism (on engines with carburetors).

8. Clean fuel injectors (some shops charge extra for this service).

9. Check compression and/or power balance (to identify bad injectors as well as compression problems).

10. Check manifold intake vacuum to reveal exhaust restrictions.

11. Check battery and charging voltage.

12. Check exhaust emissions, to verify fuel mixture, ignition performance and emission controls performance.

13. Check the vehicle computer for presence of any trouble codes.

14. Install a new air filter.

15. Replace the fuel filter(s).

16. Replace the PCV (positive crankcase ventilation) valve.

17. Check all emissions control components.

Car Care Event Offers Opportunity For Students

A student-run car care event that includes vehicle check lanes, informative exhibits and other activities has enjoyed a successful premier, according to the Car Care Council.

Armed with a step-by-step teacher's guide and other materials from the Council, high school educators and students from various classes pool their resources to carry out the program.

The result is a collaborative teaching project that educates teenagers in life skills while motivating motorists of all ages to take care of their cars.

In the pilot program, journalism students worked on editorial and advertising while others in distributive education solicited support from local businesses. Many of these students created and manned the consumer education booths on Car Care Day.

Meanwhile, the auto mechanics department assembled the work teams to operate check lanes. Finally, the English department's applied communications class compiled the data and wrote articles comparing their country to other car care events nationwide.

Applied communications instructor Barbara Garnett was impressed by the effectiveness of on-the-job training. She said her students "...learned so much about their computers while preparing for the event. It's almost impossible to teach that fast and that thoroughly with traditional teaching methods."

For information on how your school can participate, write "Teacher's Guide," c/o Car Care Council, One Grande Lake Drive, Port Clinton, OH 43452.

Fall Car Care

It Pay$ To Know The Answers To These Car Care Questions

Neglected car maintenance can be costly, not only in terms of lives but also day-to-day operating expense. Here are a few questions from the Car Care Council to underscore that point:

1. Three factors affecting fuel economy are misaligned wheels, underinflated tires and neglected tune-up. Combined, they can cost _____ percent in gas mileage.

- (a) 12 percent
- (b) 18 percent
- (c) 23 percent

2. Auto appraisers pay premium prices for well-kept cars. On typical 4 to 7-year-old models an extra clean car could be worth _____ an identical vehicle in "average" condition.

- (a) a third more than
- (b) half again as much as (c) twice as much as 3. The most common reason for have to replace disc brake rotors is:

- (a) waiting too long to have brake service done.
- (b) excessive rust or corrosion on the rotor surface.
- (c) driving too long at high speeds.

ANSWERS

1. (b) is the closest estimate. Figures will vary, depending upon the degree of mechanical discrepancy. Misaligned wheels and underinflated tires increase rolling resistance. (Remember how your bike rolls easier with fully inflated tires?)

2. (b) is correct. Appraisers pay premium prices for well-kept cars, with emphasis on interior condition. An extra clean vehicle may be worth half again as much as an identical model in "average" condition.

3. (a) is correct. Procrastinating on brake service can cause damage to drums and rotors that can be corrected by machining the surface. But when wear progresses too far, the only safe choice is to replace one or more drums or rotors, more than doubling the cost of a braking system overhaul.

Our Aging Cars Deserve Attention

The "graying of America" is a phenomenon that applies to our nation's aging cars as well as their owners.

The latest industry reports show our car population now, nearly 9 years old, is the oldest it's been since 1950.

Eighty percent of these vehicles are 3 years old or older, and more than 30 percent are 10 years old or older.

A car is not necessarily a clunker because it is old, emphasizes the Car Care Council, but it is more likely to be a candidate for repairs and it certainly deserves more frequent under-the-hood checks.

Survey results from National Car Care Month vehicle checks indicate a continuing condition of maintenance neglect on vehicles of all ages. This is due, in part, to the fact that 80 percent of all gas is pumped at the self service pumps, where people neglect under-hood checks.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

At one time or another we have heard someone say, "Oh, if I only had... a million dollars, a new home, a better job, etc., everything would be all right with me."

But we know better don't we? ...

It reminds us of the story about the man who slipped on the ice on a bridge and fell into the cold water. All he wanted as he struggled to the surface was a breath of air. When he got that, all he wanted was to get to shore. When he got there, all he wanted was to get near a stove. When he was standing near the stove and began sweating in his damp clothes, all he wanted was a new suit and some clean underwear. And when he got that, all he wanted was to see somebody because the bridge was icy!

There is an old proverb which says: "He who is not contented with what he has, would not be contented with what he would like to have."

So let us never take it for truth when we hear someone say, "Oh, if I only had that, everything would be all right with me."

REAL ESTATE MARKET

Quincy A Haven For Senior Living Housing

By DANIEL J. FLYNN III

The senior living industry is one of the largest growth areas in real estate today.

It's no secret that more people are living longer and requiring more care. Developers and operators of nursing facilities and senior living communities realize the need for senior housing and Quincy is a desirable location due to its vast population of senior citizens and geographic proximity to surrounding towns.

Within a five-mile radius of Quincy Center, there are more than 60,000 individuals 55 and older and approximately 38,000 are 65 and older. Such demographics, along with an improving economy, have rekindled interest in developers in a wide-range of housing for the elderly.

A recent proposal for the Senior Living Campus at Marina Bay, planned for construction in the spring of 1996, will be one of the most comprehensive senior living developments in Massachusetts. Continuum Care of Massachusetts, Inc. plans to develop portions of Lots 23 and 24 at Marina Bay. The development includes 120 independent living units, 80 assisted living units, a 132-bed nursing home and a 40,000-square-foot medical office building.

The demand for quality senior housing continues to grow," said Andrew Gosman, Executive Vice President of Continuum Care Corporation.

"Specifically, developments that incorporate a range of housing and health care options which allow seniors to 'age-in-place.' This proposed Marina Bay project will let Quincy residents remain in their community, close to family and friends."

River Bay Club, located on Southern Artery, has set the standard for retirement living in the City of Quincy. With 253 independent living apartments and 34 offering assisted living, River Bay Club is in the process of starting a waiting list for new residents, proving there is high demand for senior housing in Quincy.

"One of the reasons the River Bay Club is successful is that we are able to offer retirement community living to seniors of modest means because we tailor a package of services to our residents' needs rather than offering only a full-service program," said Deb D'Alessandro, Executive Director of River Bay Club.

"As their health declines, they become more frail. At River Bay Club residents can receive the support services they need in order to help them to continue to live in their apartments. We market to independent seniors, but we offer them the continuum of care up to the point that they need a nursing home - and we can keep seniors from going to a nursing home prematurely by providing those support services."

Another senior housing and nursing developer, the Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group, has begun construction off of School St. The facility will feature 142 beds for nursing and rehabilitation and 40 apartments for assisted living. In addition, the facility will include an adult day health center.

"The Welch Group has been serving individuals in the Quincy and Braintree area for 45 years from the John Scott House nursing and rehabilitation center in Braintree," said Paul Casale, Vice President of Welch. "We very much look forward to our expansion in the City of Quincy so those people from Quincy will have state-of-the-art health care facilities, programs and senior housing."

The appeal of continuing care developments to potential residents is evident. Aging individuals can enter an independent living facility and continue with their normal active lifestyle. As their physical state may require, that same individual can move on to an assisted living facility and receive attention to their daily needs.

Assisted living is considered an alternative to nursing homes for people 70 and over who are not seriously ill, but do require a certain amount of personal attention. Residents receive meals, transportation, housekeeping, and personal and medical care.

Another reason for senior living community demand is the increased desire of the elderly to stay close to their families rather than relocate to what are considered traditional retirement areas such as the South or Southwest.

The proposed four-structure senior living development at Marina Bay is expected to cost Continuum Care of Mass., Inc. approximately $25 million and if all approvals are met, the entire campus should be completed in the fall of 1997.

"The proposed Senior Living Campus at Marina Bay will certainly be an asset to the City of Quincy, in my opinion," said Casale.

With senior living housing being the fastest growing segment of the real estate market, Quincy should be proud of the fact that increased senior housing is being proposed and developed in the city. The benefits to the community at large will be greatly enhanced, and will allow loved ones to reside close to one another, thus maintaining important connections.

Giarratani Backs Traffic Safety Efforts

Sal J. Giarratani, candidate for Quincy School Committee recently commended school officials for stepping up efforts to ensure traffic safety around North Quincy High School. This comes after a 15-year-old student was struck by a car recently while crossing Hancock St. near McDonald's restaurant across from the high school.

"I agree with Superintendent Eugene Creedon that someone has to get it across to people that this is a school zone," said Giarratani.

Since last year, school officials have been working with the traffic engineer to eliminate danger spots around school buildings. Giarratani said Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon has promised to install a set of blinking, 20-mile-per-hour school zone lights by the high school.

"As a resident of the Atlantic neighborhood since 1987," said Giarratani, "I have watched a tragedy waiting to happen. Cars speed up and down Hancock St. going to and from the Neponset Bridge. Many motorists going northbound, apparently, feel that once they hit the traffic lights by Foley's it's Indy 500 time.

"Like-wise, students seemingly feeling immune from danger dart out into the road on the way to their next burger and Coke. It's a bad combination. Drivers think it's a speedway and the high school kids think they'll never get hit."

"I was opposed to a McDonald's at that Hancock St. site," added Giarratani. "The food chain made many promises to the city about safety issues. Didn't they promised not to service students during school hours? Now, City Hall has okayed another fast food chain (D'Angelo's/Pizza Hut) at the old Colette gas station site next to the high school. Hasn't City Hall learned anything over recent years?"

"If a new set of traffic lights is needed on Hancock St, I believe that the McDonald's and D'Angelo's/Pizza Hut chains should share the financial costs of this new traffic safety measure rather than the taxpayers of Quincy," said Giarratani. "Commercial neighbors are still a part of the existing neighborhood and should be working with residents and school officials in keeping their youthful customers alive and well, shouldn't they?"

New Full-Color Brochure Created For USS Salem

A new full-color brochure has been created for the USS Salem, a retired heavy cruiser and centerpiece of the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum in Quincy.

Developed by Graham Communications, a communications/marketing firm also based in Quincy, the piece includes archival and recent photography, details about the USS Salem and its programs, along with a brief overview of other area tourist attractions.

"We are extremely pleased with this brochure," said Graham Communications President John Graham. "It's not only unique, incorporating some beautiful historic and recent photography, it's extremely informative. The piece provides insight into the past of the USS Salem, complete visitor information, function and overnight data, along with a look at other area tourist offerings."

The USS Salem, a 717-foot, 21,000-ton heavy cruiser, was the flagship of the Navy's Sixth Fleet and cruised the Mediterranean during the 1950's. Built at the Quincy Fore River shipyard, it is open for tours while restoration is performed by a crew which includes some involved in its construction, as well as retired military personnel that served on the ship or similar vessels.

The ship, located at the shipyard on Wharf St., is open Sunday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., closing is at 7 p.m. Admission is $6 for adults, $4 for senior citizens, and $4 for children. Children ages three and under are free.

Maxsym Chubeck On Overseas Deployment

Navy Fireman Maxsym Chubeck, son of Kathleen McIntosh of 17 James St., Quincy, recently departed for a six-month overseas deployment with Assault Craft Unit Five, embarked aboard the dock landing ships USS Comstock and USS Mount Vernon.

Chubeck is one of 60 sailors in the unit who operate and maintain the high-speed assault hovercraft used by the four-ship USS New Orleans Amphibious Ready Group (ARG), which also includes the amphibious assault ship USS New Orleans and the amphibious transport dock USS Jenuan.

Chubeck departed Camp Pendleton, Calif., in late June. Equipped with a Marine landing force, helicopters, Harrier attack aircraft, high-speed assault hovercraft, armored vehicles and landing craft, the USS New Orleans ARG provides area commanders with a wide range of capabilities. Chubeck and fellow sailors spent the past year operating with the assault craft and training g for a variety of situations they might encounter during the deployment.

Chubeck and fellow sailors operate the 88-foot-long hovercraft, which skim above the water on a four-foot cushion of air. Chubeck's unit can deliver equipment, tanks, vehicles, supplies and Marines to rugged beaches that are otherwise inaccessible. The hovercraft can begin its high-speed assault from as far as 50 miles off shore with a 50-ton payload. Since it doesn't actually touch the ground, Chubeck and fellow crewmembers aboard the hovercraft can go from water to land and back again without any hesitation.

A 1990 graduate of Quincy Vocational Technical High School, Chubeck joined the Navy in May, 1994.

Shea Re-Elected City Clerk

Joseph Shea has been re-elected to another three-year term as Quincy's city clerk.

The City Council nominated and elected Shea to the position Monday night.

Shea served as assistant city clerk from March 1991 until November 1992

JOSEPH SHEA

when he succeeded longtime City Clerk John Gillis upon the latter's retirement.

Councillors praised Shea's performance as clerk Monday night.

"Joe Shea does an excellent job," said Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan, who nominated Shea to the position.

Council President Michael Cheney agreed.

"He is the epitome of efficiency," said Cheney. "He's truly an ambassador for the city."

Shea was unable to attend the meeting because of a family commitment.

$1M Stabilization Fund Approved To Offset MWRA Rates

The City Council has approved a $1 million stabilization fund that will be used to offset skyrocketing Massachusetts Water Resources Authority water and sewer rates.

The council appropriated the money for the fund, which was proposed by Mayor James Sheets, from the city's free cash (cash reserve) account Monday night.

The mayor came up with the idea of the fund after he learned the city had a cash surplus of $5.7 million at the end of Fiscal Year 1995 which concluded June 30.

Sheets said Tuesday the fund will be used to soften the impact in any rate increases proposed by the MWRA. While he noted that he is unsure how long the city will be able to utilize the money--since future MWRA rates cannot be predicted--Sheets said forming such a fund is the right thing to do given the city's current strong fiscal status.

"I felt it was necessary to give something back to the people," said Sheets.

Council President Michael Cheney said Monday night formation of a stabilization fund is a significant event in the city's history.

"This is a rather historical day," said Cheney. "To the best of my knowledge, this is the first time the city has ever established a stabilization fund."

Cheney also noted that he recently received some good news about a $1 billion lawsuit filed on his behalf against the federal government early last summer. The government has asked for an extension of time for its response to the suit, which was filed against the government in an attempt to get it to pay its share of the Boston Harbor Cleanup.

Cheney said the government has a 90-day period to respond to such legal matters and generally does so immediately. The fact that it needs an extension to respond is likely a response that it is researching the NAGE lawsuit and taking it seriously, he added.

"It's a very, very positive sign," said Cheney.

City Considering New Voting System 736 New Adult Voters Register For Election

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

With 12 days to go before the inaugural Kids' Vote, one result is already known: the pilot program designed to educate children on the voting process has had a positive influence on adult voter registration in Quincy.

According to City Clerk Joseph Shea, 736 adults have registered to vote since Aug. 30. The bulk of newly registered enrolled at special voter registration sessions set up at the city's 15 schools which was part of the Kids' Vote program.

"There's no question about it," Shea said. "The increase in registration is an off-shoot of Kids' Vote. The kids who registered for Kids' Vote got their parents to register. We picked up about 90 percent of that (adult) registration from the Kids' Vote registration sessions."

Students wishing to register to vote for Kids' Vote on Election Day Nov. 7 had to register at their individual schools. When they showed up with their parents, many adults realized they were not registered and decided to follow their child's sense of civic duty.

"It was discussed at every school and came up everywhere. When we explained the concept of the Kids' Vote to parents, many of them registered," Shea said.

The clerk said the 736 newly registered voters is unusually high for an off-Presidential Election year.

"The last two municipal elections, we gained only a couple of hundred new voters," Shea said.

City Officials Surprised Plans Withdrawn For Marina Bay Senior Complex

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Continuum Care Corp. has withdrawn its proposal to build a large housing and health care complex for the elderly at Marina Bay.

The company had planned to construct a four-building complex on 17 acres of Squantum waterfront. The proposal included 120 units of housing for the elderly, an 80-unit residence for elders needing assistance, a 132-bed nursing home and a 40,000-square-foot medical office building.

City officials said they are unaware what caused the company's change of heart. Company officials could not be reached for comment at press time.

Planning Director Richard Meade said he has no idea why the Needham-based company withdrew its application for a PUD (Planning Unit Development) permit to build at the site.

"They've reserved the right to refile at a future date, but they've offered no explanation," said Meade.

Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers said the same.

"I was surprised," he said.

Both Ayers and Mayor James Sheets said they supported the concept of a senior complex at the site but were a long way from making a final decision on whether to support the project. Sheets said he would be supportive of any position the ward councillor took on the issue.

"It's my hope that they will reapply," added the mayor. "It's the type of project I think the people in Squantum may want to look at because it's a low density project."

Ayers, who held a neighborhood meeting on the issue last week, voiced similar sentiments.

"I liked the idea of the use (of the site), to help the seniors," he said. "I think it's important we do something to benefit our senior citizens."

The project needed Planning Board and City

Center Stores Open To 8 P.M. Thursdays

A majority of Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA) members have agreed to keep their stores open until 8 p.m. on Thursdays in an effort to boost sales and make shopping more convenient for area residents.

Stephen Leigh of Stephen Leigh Jewelers, chairman of the QCBPA Adjunct Committee, said this week 66 percent of downtown merchants contacted have agreed to the plan, which is effective immediately.

"We're positive it's going to work," said Leigh, who added, "I like to be an optimist."

Leigh added that since most Quincy Center businesses will now be open later on Thursdays, it is the hope of his committee that City Hall will be able to do the same so that residents may take care of their shopping and City Hall business at the same time.

QCBPA Executive Maralin Manning said now is the perfect time for businesses to begin opening later, since the holiday season is right around the corner.

"The good test is the Christmas season," she said. "We'll see what happens after that."

Manning noted that most downtown businesses generally close at 5 or 6 p.m., which is not always convenient for those employed full-time.

"People traditionally shop after work," she said.

Leigh agreed that the holiday season will be a good time for businesses to stay open late, but added that he thinks the true test of staying open late won't come until after the New Year.

Lady Bird Johnson Makes Return Visit To Adams Mansion

By MARIANNE PEAK

Two First Ladies visited National Parks Columbus Day week.

First Lady Hillary Clinton made an official visit to the Eleanor Roosevelt Home in Hyde Park, N.Y. and former First Lady Bird Johnson visited the Adams National Historic Site in Quincy with her granddaughter, Claudia Nugent.

When Lady Bird Johnson introduced her granddaughter (Lucy's and first husband Patrick Nugent's daughter), she was delighted to mention that she was her "namesake." Mrs. Johnson has been called Lady Bird since she was two years of age.

Majoring in communications, Claudia was introduced to the Adams family home, generously donated by family descendants to the National Park Service, just as the LBJ Home has been designated a National Historical Park. Lady Bird toured the "Old House."

Throughout her tour, Lady Bird pointed out the importance of retaining a family legacy for the people of the United States—just as the Adamses did—to preserve and protect that time in history for future generations. She described her home as having some very ordinary things, furniture that was very much a part of their life in Texas, and "some good. Not as elaborate as Adams furnishings, but good."

Lady Bird was excited to hear that we had some 50,000 visitors between April and November. We later learned that some 180,000 visit the LBJ Home in Texas annually. Her walk in the Adams garden was joined by visitors (the site had 471 that day). She graciously greeted people from California who had been to the LBJ NHP and a small group from England.

In the kitchen of the "Old House," Lady Bird exclaimed to her granddaughter that when she grew up there was no electricity and no running water in her family home. They would have to walk a distance to obtain water. It is sometimes difficult for us to relate in our lifetime that a modern-day First Lady grew up with no electricity or running water, later to live in the White House with all the amenities.

A very charming First Lady, Lady Bird was animated, smiled continuously and showed great exuberance. She was vivacious and laughed easily and was extremely responsive to the Adams story and anecdotes of history. Her knowledge of American history and the Adams family was never-ending. She would recognize rooms and exclaim vignettes when she was the guest of Charles Francis Adams, sixth generation descended from President John Adams. She recalled Wilhelmina S. Harris, former superintendent, and remembered Mrs. Harris' knowledge of the Adams family as being exceptional having worked for Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Adams from 1920 to 1927.

She also reflected on Nash Castro who worked for her at the White House. She was expecting to see him or her on her foliage tour of Vermont and was interested to hear that Nash Castro had worked with the Adams NHS staff and superintendent while planning and consulting for the White House Bicentennial conference as manager of Bear Mountain Park in New York. She also mentioned her White House curator who accepted a gift from an Adams family member of an elaborate silver urn for the White House, warranting an Adams family reception at the White House where descendants were gathered for the event.

We spoke of the importance of recording oral history for future generations and how she had done so to insure her personal reflections of her life and days in the White House were accurately represented and recorded. And, she was especially interested in the Adams wedding veil and the fact that members of the family are entitled to wear it on their wedding day and that family members retain the right to hold meetings and functions at the Old House as a part of the Deed of Gift.

Following her first visit to the Old House in 1967, Lady Bird wrote an account of her visit which she later published in the "White House Diary." It includes a magnificent account of her official tour of Quincy as First Lady. What truly excited her was the historic landscape: She wanted to see once again the Abigail Adams York Rose, planted in 1788 and still flourishing, as well as Abigail's lilac at the front entrance.

At the front interior 1800 entrance, Lady Bird viewed the Adams' walking sticks and took a special interest in the one made from a branch of a pear tree John Quincy Adams planted on the White House grounds during his presidency. Her personal walking stick was clear resembling glass, and was both servicable and feminine.

As I took Lady Bird's photograph next to the Abigail Adams portrait I asked if she was pleased with her portrait at the

Cheney Receives $60,000 For Senior Shuttle Service

City Council President Michael Cheney has been presented a check from Atlantic Development for $60,000 which will be deposited in the newly-created Quincy Senior Citizens Shopping Shuttle Account.

Cheney said the money from the Hingham-based company, which was required in a permit Atlantic Development was granted to build Wal-Mart and Roche Bros. Supermarket stores at the planned Granite Crossing shopping center in Quincy Point will be used to fund the start-up of the program.

He added that Wal-Mart and Roche Bros. will in the future donate $5,000 apiece to the shuttle account as a separate provision of the permit. Shaw's Supermarkets, as a result of the requirements of a separate permit, will do the same, Cheney said.

Other revenue for the shuttle service will come from user fees and, hopefully, corporate sponsorships, he added.

Cheney said the shuttle will play an important role in the future independence of the city's seniors.

"Eighty percent of our senior citizens do not have automobiles," Cheney said during a check presentation ceremony Monday in front of City Hall. "This shuttle service will allow many seniors who feel captive in their homes to have accessibility to Quincy merchants."

Cheney said he conceived the senior citizen van service after learning that many seniors had difficulty getting to doctors' appointments and securing transportation for shopping and other reasons.

"This will allow seniors to get out of their homes on a daily basis," he said.

The van service will operate five days a week and pick senior citizens up at the buildings and neighborhood community centers throughout the city and bring them to designated shopping areas such as Shaw's, Roche Bros. and Wal-Mart (when they open) and the Quincy Center, Wollaston and North Quincy business districts as well as to the Crown Colony Office Park in West Quincy for medical appointments.

Hours of operation are expected to be Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and riders will be picked up and dropped off on a regular route. The cost of the van service will be $1 per day for a round-trip ticket which will allow all senior citizens to ride all day, getting on and off the van as many times as they wish.

Cheney also noted that the van service will be provided for seniors in private housing.

"While it is very important to service the elderly in senior housing complexes, we must not forget that many of our seniors live in private homes and are also in need of transportation for shopping and medical appointments," he said.

The senior citizen van service is expected to be in operation by the end of November or early December. Cheney said he will schedule a meeting of the recently-formed Board of Directors affiliated with the service for the week of Nov. 13, adding that the City Council will ultimately approve the contractor who will provide the shuttle.

FIVE MAJOR MEDICATION MISTAKES

All the high-quality medical care in the world will do little good if you fall into any of the common pitfalls of taking prescribed medicines. Perhaps the most frequent problem is deciding not to take the medication, either due to worry about side effects, cost, or the belief that the medical condition isn't serious enough to warrant medication. Beyond that, other medication mistakes include stopping the drug too soon (and hanging onto outdated medications), taking the wrong dose, taking the drug at the wrong time, or forgetting to take doses. One of the best practices you can follow to ensure a medication will do its job is to ask questions and voice any concerns you may have with your physician and pharmacist. P.S. As many as one out of three people don't take their prescribed medicine properly. Clean out that medicine cabinet! Outdated medicines actually may not function as they are supposed to when you need them. For more information, visit COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, at 700 Congress St., in Quincy or call me or Dr. Lisa Antonelli at 472-2550. Office hours by appointment. Lady Bird's First Visit Lady Bird Johnson's surprise stop-off at the Adams Mansion on her recent Columbus Day trip to New England brought back a humorous footnote of her first visit here 28 years ago when she was First Lady.

The 1967 visit wasn't a surprise. And James McIntyre, who was mayor at the time, was grateful for that.

Lady Bird was in the midst of her campaign to "Keep America Beautiful" when she visited the Adams Mansion with Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall in June of that year.

They flew up from Washington and landed at the South Weymouth Naval Air Station and came to Quincy in a motorcade.

McIntyre had been briefed on her itinerary and was there, quite relaxed, when Lady Bird's plane touched down at the naval air station. With him were his wife, Sheila, and their five-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, who presented the First Lady with a bouquet of roses. Also greeting her was Mrs. John Volpe, wife of the governor.

There was no hint of the hectic hour McIntyre had spent before the plane arrived.

He had asked Jack Schmuck, who was Civil Defense Director and later head of the Quincy Fire Department Signal Division to help him check out Lady Bird's route in Quincy.

"I want to be sure everything looks nice for her," he told Schmuck.

The motorcade, coming from Weymouth on the Southeast Expressway, would turn onto Furnace Brook Parkway in Quincy and proceed to Adams St. and the Adams Mansion.

McIntyre and Schmuck found residents standing along Furnace Brook Parkway waiting to see Lady Bird.

And, to McIntyre's horror, lining the sidewalks in front of the homes were trash bags and barrels. It was pick-up day in that area, a small matter that had been overlooked in the planning for Lady Bird's arrival.

McIntyre gasped at the thought of the First Lady—promoting to keep America beautiful—looking out from the motorcade at piled up trash as she rode by.

His Honor sprang into action. He radioed an SOS to Public Works Commr. Jack Browne. The latter quickly pulled rubbish trucks away from other routes and had them move in to pick up the Furnace Brook Parkway area trash.

A short while later, McIntyre and Schmuck, joined by Executive Secretary James (Pete) Ricciuti, decided to make a second inspection of the route. Just to be sure everything was all set.

The trash was gone. But, egad! The empty trash barrels were scattered in front of the homes.

And, then, a sight to behold: the mayor of Quincy on one side of the street and his executive secretary on the other as Schmuck recalls: "Hiding rubbish barrels behind homes, shrubs and automobiles and any hiding spot they could find."

Some of the residents realized what was going on and got their own rubbish containers out of sight.

Lady Bird was due shortly at South Weymouth and McIntyre knew he had to hurry to get there to greet her. But he took time to stop and thank the residents for their help. And managed to make it to the naval air station in time with a scant few seconds to spare.

Lady Bird loved the roses presented to her by little Elizabeth. And she loved the beautiful flowers she found in bloom at the Adams Mansion.

A perfect setting for a steps over a hedge in the garden at the First Lady Adams Mansion during their 1967 visit.

The word trash was never mentioned. (For story, photos of Lady Bird's second visit, see page 2).

FORMER CITY CLERK John Gillis is coming out of retirement for the city election Nov. 7.

Gillis has volunteered to serve as a precinct captain for the Kids Vote program in Ward 2, Precincts 4 and 5 (St. John's School).

But Kids Program Coordinator Harold Crowley told him it didn't matter. He still has to go to the training program for precinct captains and other volunteers tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chamber. (Crowley was smiling when he told him that.)

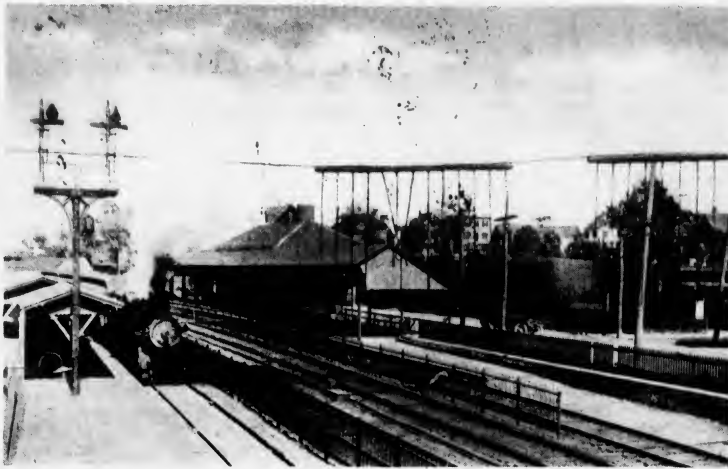

Gillis, incidentally, is looking for a few volunteers to help him guide the kids in the voting procedure at St. John's School election night.

ON THE CAMPAIGN trail: "Kids Voting For Harold" will hold a rally in front of City Hall, Saturday, at 2 p.m. Remarks by school coordinators and Harold are on the agenda.

Ron McCarthy, candidate for School Committee, will hold his final fundraiser with an artistic touch tonight (Thursday) from 7 to 9 p.m. at his home, 72 Norton Rd. Featured will be an exhibit of work by two Quincy artists, Julianna Collaruso and Gayle Kiley-Olsen. For more info call 471-7243.

$6.3 Million Senior Project Planned

By PAUL HAROLD

Rev. Bedros Baharian, pastor of the Quincy Point Congregational Church, announced plans for a $6.3 million elderly project to be located on an eight and a half acre site adjacent to 1000 Southern Artery.

It would include a $3.3 million extended care facility for the elderly and a new $3 million senior housing project. According to architect George Ross, the 200-bed care facility was in its final planning stage.

Rev. Baharian said that the only delay would be the FHA approval of the mortgage insurance. "The Feds have given us oral approval to the plans and the budget looks acceptable," he said.

KOEGLER CALLS FOR TRAILER PARK STUDY

Ward 3 Councillor John Koegler asked the Industrial Commission to consider developing a day-camper, small trailer park for tourists visiting Quincy. He made the suggestion over the weekend to the commission's executive director, John Cheney, Jr.

Koegler noted that the nearest facility is at the Myles Standish Reservation in Plympton.

Sites suggested for the park were in the Blue Hills.

SOUTH-WEST CANDIDATES' NIGHT

Fourteen candidates spoke at the South-West Community Council's candidates' night at Trinity Lutheran Church, including mayoral candidates, incumbent James McIntyre and challenger Harold Nannis.

McIntyre said he anticipated no problem in building a swimming pool in the new school planned to replace the Lincoln and Hancock schools. Nannis said that interests outside Quincy now ruled the city (but would wait till the next candidates' night to present proof).

Other candidates included School Committee candidates Mary Pratt and Ruth Scanlan and Daniel Joyce for Ward 4 councillor and Pasquale DiStefano for Ward 3 councillor.

Suggests World War II GI Statue At Adams Academy

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Let me see now. It has been 50 years since the end of World War II and not one mayor of Quincy has had the foresight to think it was appropriate to allot some funds for a statue of the GI to be placed in front of the Adams Academy in close proximity to the statue of the Doughboy of World War I.

Since the mayor must submit a request to the City Council and the funds approved, I believe that with a surplus in the city coffers, that enough funds could be found for the statue.

Approximately three weeks ago I spoke with City Council President Michael Cheney and he was wholly in favor of it, so he dictated a letter to Joyce Baker, director of the Adams Academy to bring this subject up at their next meeting and let him know of their decision.

Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, himself a World War II veteran and I, as a past commander of Chapter 93 of the Disabled American Veterans, signed the letter. Copies were sent to the mayor, Rep. Ron Mariano and others who should be interested in this matter.

City Councillor Tom Fabrizio, whom I first approached with this idea, was quite impressed with the idea because WWII veterans are dying off rapidly and there must be something left behind to remind the people of Quincy what the GI went through.

What greater place than the Adams Academy for this statue? Let me hear from the WWII veterans out there. Do you want a statue or don't you?

Pumpkin Pie Cake

Over the weekend, I wanted to make a cake to bring to our daughter Rita's house.

A family favorite is the fat free eggless, milkless raisin cake (my mother's recipe), but this time, I decided to add something of my own to the recipe. I added a can of pumpkin I happen to have in the house. With the abundance of pumpkin this time of year, fresh pumpkin can certainly be used. It came out so moist that I have named it a pumpkin pie cake. It got raves at Rita's.

Fat Free Pumpkin Pie Cake

1 16-ounce can of pumpkin (or 2 cups of fresh mashed pumpkin)
1 cup raisins
2 cups water

1 stick margarine
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 3/4 cups flour
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1/4 teaspoon cloves (optional)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Bring two cups of water and the raisins to a boil and boil for ten minutes.

Add the margarine, cool just a bit and then add all the other ingredients. Mix until blended.

Bake in a greased and floured baking pan for about 45 minutes depending on the depth of the pan. I usually check it by putting a toothpick in the center.

'Freedom Day' In Houghs Neck Saturday

The Houghs Neck community will stage a "freedom day" Saturday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The event is a community project for the USA Today sponsored "Make a Difference Day." Various Houghs Neck businesses and organizations are donating time and services.

Children are encouraged to come in costume and have their picture taken with the "Pumpkin Lady" for a small donation.

The Quincy Yacht Club will host the "Mother of all Bake Sales" in their parking lot down the street from Louis Cafe.

To thank veterans for their fight for freedom, another recipient will be the Houghs Neck Legion Post to help subsidized their many programs.

If Houghs Neck efforts are selected as one of the 60 top efforts in the country, another $2,000,000 will be donated along with 500 cans of food to the nearest shelter. Paul Newman, Whoopie Goldberg and Kathi Lee Gifford are the judges.

Historic Lecture, Display Series Aboard USS Salem

The MA Military Research Center of the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum (USNSM) will kick off its Historic Lecture and Display Series aboard the USS Salem at the Fore River shipyard Saturday and Sunday.

The subject of the event will be the U-853, a German U-Boat sunk by U.S. ships off the Rhode Island coast in 1945. Speakers will include the remaining survivor of the U-444, a U.S. submarine veteran/writer, along with divers who have documented the wreckage of the U-853.

A collection of artifacts also will be displayed through Nov. 5.

Since it was sunk in 1945, the U-Boat has become a favorite of professional and sport divers, resulting in much of the photography and artifacts to be featured at the event. In particular, the efforts of William Palmer and William Keats--both scheduled to speak Saturday and Sunday--have helped to document the wreckage of the U-853.

The duo is expected to show an underwater video of the U-Boat which they produced. The piece, which takes viewers on a detailed underwater tour, has been praised through the marine historical and diving communities.

Walter Wengefeld, a machinist mate in the German Kriegsmarine, is scheduled to speak on both days as well. Wengefeld is the only living crew member of four who survived the sinking of the U-444, which he served on during World War II.

Also addressing the public will be Bill Seach. He was chief torpedo mate aboard the USS Tautog, a ship known for sinking a number of Japanese subs, including the one which downed John F. Kennedy's vessel, the PT 109. Seach also served in the Asiatic Fleet, which was stationed in Pearl Harbor during the attack by Japanese forces, and has since received acclaim as a writer/researcher on related matters.

Lectures will take place at 1:30 p.m. and 4 p.m. both Saturday and Sunday. Speakers will also be on site from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. both days to talk with the public in a casual forum. A display featuring artifacts from the U-853--as well as period pieces detailing nautical military life--will continue through Nov. 5.

Admission to the series includes a free tour of the Salem. Cost is $6 for adults, $4 for children ages 4-12 and senior citizens. Children age 3 and under will be admitted free.

For more information, call 479-7900.

Cheney Receives WORK Inc. Award

City Council President Michael Cheney was scheduled to receive the 1995 Probus Award last night (Wednesday) at 7:45 p.m. from WORK Inc. during the organization's annual Awards Ceremony at the JFK Library and Museum in Dorchester.

Cheney received the award for leading the effort to create a fully accessible First Night Quincy celebration for people with disabilities and his commitment to the betterment of their lives.

Quincy-based WORK Inc. is the state's leading non-profit provider of vocational rehabilitation services, housing, transportation and employment opportunities for people with disabilities.

WORK Inc. President Henry Cheney (no relation) said, "Councillor Cheney has worked tirelessly to insure that people with disabilities are included in all aspects of Quincy life. Recognition is long overdue for his steadfast commitment to this extraordinary segment of the population."

Cheney has served 11 years on the City Council including the last two as president. As founder and chairman of First Night Quincy, he has developed activities which are accessible to all, including the establishment of the first-ever Accessibility Committee for special events.

Among Cheney's accomplishments are the improvement of the First Night Quincy sound system for the hearing impaired and the creation of the "Arts in the Parks" program which encourages performances by entertainers and artists with disabilities and features exhibitions of their artwork.

Cheney has also, in the past, provided a holiday transportation service, driving people with disabilities to their families so they could celebrate holidays together.

Bellotti To Speak At Montclair School Today

State Rep. Michael Bellotti will speak to fifth grade students at the Montclair Elementary School today (Thursday) at 1 p.m. regarding "Kids Vote."

Introduced to the school system this year by local businesses, city and school officials, "Kids Vote" is a new program designed to educate students about the electoral process.

Bellotti was invited to Montclair School by fifth grade students preparing to participate in the city-wide Nov. 7 election as part of the "Kids Vote" program.

Bellotti said he plans to discuss the importance of voter registration and participation. Following his address, he will take questions from students and hear their views on the election process. He will also speak to the students about how they can prepare for voter eligibility by increasing their awareness of current issues and voicing their opinions to their local and state elected officials.

"It is important that children learn from an early age how to communicate with their elected officials and express their opinions about current issues. Decisions that are made today will undoubtedly affect them in the years to come," said Bellotti.

Mariano: Judge's Decision 'Victory' For MWRA Ratepayers

State Rep. Ronald Mariano, vice chairman of the MWRA Legislative Caucus, announces that Federal Judge A. David Mazzone has agreed to grant a motion of the MWRA to remove Battery D from the proposed secondary treatment facility at Deer Island.

Mariano said Mazzone's decision is "clearly a victory" for rate payers of the MWRA district. Without sacrificing environmental quality, action will save $165 million in capital construction costs, he said.

Mariano and fellow members of the MWRA Legislative Caucus traveled to Washington, C.C. this past spring to meet with the Massachusetts congressional delegation to discuss the possible elimination of Battery D. "This action shows that our arguments to the EPA and the Clinton Administration for fiscal sanity and rate relief were heard loud and clear," he said.

Traveling to Washington in May of this year, the caucus met with Vice President Al Gore, senior administration officials and congressional leaders on ways to address the adverse financial impacts of the Boston Harbor Clean-Up project.

The Caucus urged the EPA to support the MWRA's request to eliminate construction of the Battery D. treatment phase. A study, at the urging of the MWRA-Caucus, reassessed the scale of the Deer Island treatment plant based on new information, regulatory requirements and innovative treatment technologies. Mariano said the scale back is possible because the projected level of wastewater flows to the new treatment plant is less than estimated by the MWRA during its facilities planning process in 1988.

"Our studies indicate that Battery C provides more than enough capacity to treat our wastewater, and that Battery D, at a cost of almost $170 million, adds nothing to cleanliness levels," he said.

Giarratani Receives Union Endorsement

Sal Giarratani, candidate for the Quincy School Committee, recently received the endorsement of the Boston Carmen's Union Local 589.

Giarratani said he was pleased to receive the endorsement.

"I have always had a high regard for the Carmen's Union," he said. "My uncle, the late Neal Harrington of Charlestown who lived for many years in Dorchester's Upham Corner, was a member when he operated a streetcar for the old Boston Elevated Railway Co. on the North Station-Chelsea route."

Cynthia J. Paini of Quincy Point recently graduated from New Hampshire College in Manchester, N.H.

Lady Bird Johnson Makes Return Visit

LADY BIRD JOHNSON chats with tourists during her recent visit to the Adams Mansion.

White House and she confided to me that she was. We agreed that the exhibit of portraits of former presidents and First Ladies were an integral part of the White House experience. The Long Room exhibition of family portraits of four generations was equally as critical in telling the Adams story. Interestingly, Lady Bird stated that she felt artists were usually best at painting women or men but not both. She felt the portrait of her husband was very serious, reflecting perhaps his presidency, but did not capture his great personality.

As we passed the busts of the Adams men lining the hall, Lady Bird was reminded of the bust that was done of her and is on exhibit at the LBJ Library. She described it as being a "rough texture" bronze rather than smooth bronze. Abigail Adams will be the first First Lady to have a life-size bronze statue dedicated in her honor, as Lady Bird is the only First Lady to have a bronze bust dedicated in her honor.

Mrs. Johnson's 1967 visit to Quincy was a day to remember. She is the first and only First Lady to visit the home of two presidents on official business. On the day of her visit, Adams Street was lined with people wanting to catch a glimpse of her. She was accompanied by Stuart Udall, Secretary of the Interior and George Hartzog, director of the National Park Service. On that day she was wearing a classic brown two-piece dress with brown and white tie. She was radiant then as she is today. I was so impressed with her 1967 visit to the Old House that I remembered every detail of her outfit. She could not recall although I'm sure she would have, had she seen her photograph. She mentioned that she rarely fussed over clothing.

Lady Bird fondly recalled the story of the gold Belange Chairs Jackie Kennedy requested on permanent loan to complete the White House restoration and the problems incurred due to the restrictions of the Deed of Gift stating that no items could be separated from the collection. This ruling necessitated that they be reproduced.

She also remembered Abigail Adams Homans, niece of Brooks Adams, dropping a wine glass at the reception in the Long Room and exclaiming, "Hell and damnation Willie, I hope it wasn't historic"--at which time everyone seemed to relax the tension in an atmosphere of wanting to say and do the right thing.

It was reported to me during the 1967 visit the conversation at the table included Lady Bird's concern for her daughter's education since they both were attending college. Some 28 years later on Columbus Day, she was celebrating her granddaughter's college experience.

While looking through several of the books in the 1870 Stone Library and speaking of the role of presidents in the White House, in politics and their responsibility for sound decision making she exclaimed, "Lyndon always said to me, 'It is easy to make the right decision, difficult to know what is right.'"

Although one cannot always get what they wish for, if I could have one wish it is my hope that Lady Bird will return to the Old House. And the next time on an official visit, providing us the opportunity to insure that the Adams family, mayor, Quincy and the press can welcome her as she and they so richly deserve. In fact, we would also invite Sandy Walters, deputy field director of the National Park Service in Boston who was first superintendent of the LBJ Home and worked closely with Lady Bird.

The National Park Service is a public service agency and representing the home of two presidents and First Ladies at the Adams National Historic Site. In welcoming thousands of visitors, we are never sure who and when one might arrive at the front door. We provided guided tours to some 50,000 visitors annually and occasionally we are privileged to have distinguished and noted guests.

This personal visit of Mrs. Lyndon Baines Johnson came as a complete surprise to the staff. It was Columbus Day--a holiday for most. I drove my daughter Alexandra to a college in New Hampshire at 5 a.m. that morning for an 8 a.m. class and on my way back home decided that I would stop at the site to take advantage of a quiet day at the office....and there, I welcome and was greeted by Lady Bird and Claudia. I was ever so grateful to have my camera for photographs for this story to share with the media!

It was clear that Lady Bird Johnson's visit to the Old House was twofold: one, to introduce her granddaughter, Claudia, to the presidential history of the Adams family and two, to educate her of the importance of presidential families to history and the unique contributions they make to society.

In the short time we shared, we communicated the history of the Adams story and home but we also confided to her that the Quincy Partnership commissioned a statue in honor of Abigail Adams and we expect it to be dedicated next year in the downtown of Quincy where Abigail and young John Quincy Adams will welcome visitors to Quincy to experience its many fine resources including the Church of the Presidents, Hancock Cemetery, City Hall, NPS Visitor Center, Thomas Crane Public Library and Adams National Historic Site.

As residents and visitors experience Quincy, Mrs. Johnson's legacy, "Keep America Beautiful," will live on. Mayor James Sheets' campaign for a "Cleaner Greener" Quincy embraces this vision and enhances the city.

Yes, we will extend an invitation Lady Bird Johnson to return to Quincy on an "official" tour. Stay tuned. I may get my wish.

(Marianne Potts Peak is superintendent of the Adams National Historic Site in Quincy.)

Sheets Receives QUILL Program Humanitarian Award

Mayor James Sheets recently was honored by the Quincy Independent Living and Learning (QUILL) Program at Quincy College when he was presented with its Humanitarian Award during its recent awards ceremony.

Sheets was honored for his involvement in the program, which offers living skills for adults who are learning to care for themselves and live independently. The ceremony was held at the National Fire Protection Association in Quincy.

QUILL officials said Sheets has been very supportive of the program since its inception and has served as guest speaker at a QUILL class and hosted students in his City Hall office.

Officials said Sheets also has made major achievements in the areas of education and family services during his administration, another reason he was honored.

Sheets said he was pleased to receive the award.

"QUILL is a great program that I have been with since the beginning and will continue to support," he said. "I am particularly honored to receive this year's Humanitarian Award because I have seen first-hand the positive impact the program has had on its students and their family."

Officially said due to the increased demand for the program, Quincy College will expand QUILL this year.

Bank of Braintree President Donald Olson and David Bradbury, president of The Co-operative Bank were also recognized for the banks' academic sponsorship of the 1995-96 school year.

State Rep. Michael Bellotti, a QUILL board member, served as chairman and program director for the awards ceremony.

AMONG THOSE ATTENDING the recent awards ceremony for the QUILL Program at Quincy College were, from left, Mayor James Sheets, who received the program's Humanitarian Award; George Sheehan, treasurer of The Co-operative Bank and Bank of Braintree President Don Olson whose banks each contributed $2,500 to the program and State Rep. Michael Bellotti, a QUILL board member who served as chairman and program director of the ceremony.

Kent Hill Re-elected ENC President

The Board of Trustees of Eastern Nazarene College recently re-elected Kent R. Hill as president for four years.

Hill has served the college as president since the fall of 1992.

During Hill's time in office there have been improvements in campus beautification, as well as the completion of significant campus renovations to the Gardner Hall administration building and several residence halls. Traditional undergraduate enrollment has increased by 85 students, and in recent months ENC has purchased a three-acre site near the campus and received an $800,000 donation for endowed scholarships from an anonymous alumna of the college.

Dr. Dallas Mucci, chairman of the board, said "The Board of Trustees expressed their great confidence in the leadership and vision of President Kent Hill with an unprecedented unanimous vote for re-election by acclaim."

Hill said, "I am grateful for the Board's strong reaffirmation of their faith in me as president. My family and I feel very much at home in Quincy and at ENC, and are delighted to accept the call to continue to work with the faculty and staff in helping ENC achieve its goal of providing a quality education for students of all ages in a distinctly Christian environment."

The trustees also approved increases in tuition to $10,110, room and board to $3,750, and fees to $705 for academic year 1996-1997. The overall cost of attending ENC will rise from $13,760 to $14,565, a 5.8 percent increase which is one of the lowest increases in the last 15 years.

In his State of the College address on Oct. 16, Hill said increases in tuition for the next several years would likely continue to be lower than they were in the 1980s.

Legislative Delegation Supports Minimum Wage Increase

Members of Quincy's legislative delegation have voiced approval of a proposed increase in the state's minimum wage.

The proposal increases the Massachusetts minimum wage by $1 in two intervals over the next 15 months. If enacted, the minimum wage would increase Jan. 1, 1996 from $4.25 to $5.25.

Rep. Michael Bellotti said, "The value of the minimum wage is close to its lowest level since the 1950s and its purchasing power has dropped 24 percent since 1974. Currently, a full-time minimum wage worker earns $8,500 a year which is $151 a week after taxes. To me, asking an individual to get up every day and go to work to support a family, pay rent, buy food and clothes, pay fuel costs and save for the future on such a meager income is unconscionable."

In response to those who question the increase's effect on jobs and the number of adults who the minimum wage, Rep. Stephen Tobin pointed to several key factors which shaped the delegations' decision to support the action. Specifically, Tobin cited the endorsement of a similar measure on the federal level by three recipients of the Nobel Prize in Economics.

Furthermore, recent studies conducted in New Jersey and California, following increases in the minimum wage in those states, have demonstrated that the action will not contribute to a reduction in jobs, he said.

Bellotti said there are some other poignant statistics relative to the approximately 300,000 residents of the Commonwealth who earn the minimum wage: 75 percent of all minimum wage workers are over the ages of 20 and more than half are over 30. 63 percent of all minimum wage earners are women and a family of three who is supported by a minimum wage earners are women, and a family of three who is supported by a minimum wage falls 25 percent below the federal poverty level.

"The only proven method of improving the living standards of those at the lowest points on the spectrum is to provide them with increased earnings. Taken in conjunction with our efforts to provide low income tax credits, access to affordable health care and improved public education, this will enhance the quality of life for thousands of working families in the Commonwealth," said Rep. Ronald Mariano.

Go For Win No. 3 Against Silver Lake

Red Raiders Feast On Don Bosco Bears

By KERRY BYRNE

It's been a feast or famine season for the North Quincy High School football team. In three of their four losses, the Red Raiders have been handled rather easily. But in their two wins, they have left no doubt as to which was the better team.

Three weeks ago they easily cruised past Plymouth South, 28-7. Friday night they posted their second win with a resounding 33-13 triumph over Don Bosco of the Catholic Conference.

The Red Raiders (2-4) held a 33-0 lead in the fourth quarter before the Bears (1-4) managed two late scores against the second team defense.

North Quincy has a good shot at chalking up win No. 3 Friday night when they head down Route 3 for a game at Silver Lake. The Lakers (1-5) are in the midst of a five-game losing streak, the most recent a 28-25 defeat at the hands of Taunton in an Old Colony League basement battle.

Strong offensive efforts by Tim Zaniboni, Sean Johnson and Tom Coughlin and sturdy leadership by quarterback J.R. Rendle lifted the Red Raiders to the win over Don Bosco. It was easily their best offensive showing of the season.

"We're doing OK," said NQ coach Ken McPhee. "We really needed this one. It was important for the kids to get it. I'm glad we got one against a team we felt we should beat. But I think we still haven't played our best game. We're still going to get better."

Zaniboni rushed for 84 yards and a touchdown on 14 carries. Johnson added 83 yards just six carries. The bulk came on a 49-yard sprint through the heart of the Bears defense which moved the ball from the North 36 to the Don Bosco 15.

Johnson scored soon after when he was on the end of a hook & lateral play in which Rendle threw to Coughlin in the left flat who then flipped the ball to Johnson. The senior raced 10 yards up the sideline for a score. Coupled with Zaniboni's 7-yard TD run and a Jim Finn extra point kick, it made the score 13-0 in the second quarter.

Later in the quarter, Rendle fired the ball to Coughlin who made a juggling catch in the end zone for a 3-yard touchdown reception. A try for two failed and North took a 19-0 lead into the break.

"They were set up in a defense we felt we could run against and we were able to execute pretty well," said McPhee.

The coach praised the performance of Rendle, who threw his second and third TD passes of the season: "J.R. ran the team extremely well. He gets better each game," said McPhee.

The defense got in on the scoring action in the third quarter when sophomore safety Steve Rose, the one-armed bandit, stole a Joe O'Malley pass and returned it 20 yards for a score. Rose has been a splendid addition to the North Quincy club. He transferred from Barnstable over the summer and is leading the Red Raiders secondary in tackles.

In the fourth quarter,

Coughlin took over the offense and rumbled over a series of defenders on a QB keeper for a 14-yard score. Kicks by Finn after both second half TDs made the score 33-0.

As well as the offense moved the ball, the defense was even more effective shutting down the Bosco attack. The Bears were held to 35 yards of offense and one first down through three quarters of football.

In the fourth, they were able to score on both drives with O'Malley throwing an 8-yard scoring strike to John Martel and a 47-yard bomb to Robbie DiFrummolo. Jim McLaughlin booted an extra point after the first score.

Linebackers Chris Ritchie and Zaniboni and defensive linemen Brian Wells, Norm Connell, Eric Malames, Joe McCarthy and Charlie Plaskasovitis dominated up front, forcing the Bosco ground game into non-existence (54 yards rushing, 30 in the first three quarters).

Defensive backs Rose, Matt Kielty, Pat Egan, Paul Greeley and Tim Semchenko were on the Bears receivers like a ten-dollar suit on one-legged man (Note: I have no idea what that means). They held O'Malley to one completion on nine attempts through the first three quarters.

In the fourth O'Malley turned it on, connecting on four of five attempts for 89 yards and the two TDs.

Manets, Elks In Title Game

The Houghs Neck Manets and West Quincy Elks will battle for the Quincy Youth Football League title this Sunday.

The championship game will be played at 2 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium. It is the first appearance in the title match in quite some time for the Elks. Last year, the Manets lost to the North Quincy Apaches in the final contest.

The finalists split their two previous meetings this year with Houghs Neck taking the most recent clash, 8-0, two weeks ago.

Both won their final regular-season games. The Elks (5-1) ended the season with an exciting 28-26 win over the Quincy Point Panthers (3-3).

West Quincy trailed 26-14 in the fourth quarter before storming back. Matt Gardner returned a kickoff 70 yards for a touchdown to make the score 26-20. With under three minutes to play, Jason Oriola raced 20 yards for the tying score. Gardner plunged through the middle of the Point defense for the decisive two-point conversion.

Point's Larry Antonellis opened the scoring when he hauled in a Didier Alther pass.

The Elks countered with a 55-yard scoring play as Oriola took in a Gardner pass on the first play of the second quarter to tie it at 6-6.

James Bennett returned the ensuing kickoff for a TD to give the Panthers a 12-6 lead, which remained the score at halftime.

The Elks went on top for the first time when Bob McDonald converted a fourth and goal play with a 5 yard run. Mike Turner carried a host of defenders into the end zone for the two-point conversion which made the score 14-12.

The Panthers regained the advantage in the first play of the fourth quarter as Alther raced 60 yards to the Elks 3 to set up a Bennett TD. Alther rushed for the conversion.

Panthers defenders Michael McClellan, Jarrod DeCelle and Keith Antonellis drove the Elks back deep into their own territory. On third and long, Gardner was picked off by Mark Robertson who raced into the end zone, giving Point the 26-14 lead.

West Quincy's Turner was injured with 5:31 to play and his teammates rallied around their fallen comrade to post the victory.

The winning defense was led by Matt Reggiani, Ryan Murray and James Shea, who made a key fourth-down stop to stifle a Panthers drive late in the game.

The offense was led by Steve King, Chris Worley, Joe Moran, Russ Mullen and Murray.

In the other final regular season match, the Manets stormed past the North Quincy Apaches, 30-8.

Mike Chenette opened the scoring for Houghs Neck with a 40-yard run.

Tim Pezzullo scored on an 80-yard kick return. Justin Analowski and Dan Kelly added scoring runs of 35 and 20 yards, respectively. Two-point conversions were scored by Chenette, John Barrieau and Rick Keefe.

Leading the Manets defense were Pezzullo, Chenette and Analowski. JV player Jordan Virtue ended an Apaches threat when he recovered a fumble.

Mike Torrey and Tim Curran scored for Mayor Sheets. They were set up by the footwork of Dan Wooster, Billy Bent and James LaFleur.

Mike Roach netted the only goals of the game as Co-op Bank topped Century Bank, 2-0.

Roach was assisted by Adam O'Hara and Colin Maxey.

Pat Duff, Paul Seaver and Mike Quilty played well for Century.

Girls Under 12: Led by Kellie Conley's three tallies, Quincy Rotary remained undefeated with a 3-0 win over

Wildcats Unscored Upon In 14 Quarters

Quincy Can't Crack Weymouth Defense

The last time the Weymouth High School football team surrendered a point was in the second quarter of a 14-6 loss to Barnstable.

That was in September. When the New England Patriots still had a chance.

The stonewall defense remained unbroken Friday night as the Wildcats (4-2) blanked Quincy, 27-0, for their third consecutive shutout victory.

The Presidents (2-4) came into the game apparently fired up and ready to meet the Weymouth challenge. The Quincy locker room before the game was a whirlwind of slamming lockers and pounding pads. They came out and battled to a 0-0 tie midway through the second quarter. But a series of mistakes allowed Weymouth to strike for three touchdowns in four and a half minutes and take a 21-0 lead into the break.

The schedule grants no favors to Quincy as they host undefeated Falmouth Friday night. The lone blemish on the Falmouth (5-0-1) record is a 0-0 tie with Bridgewater-Raynham (4-1-1) two weeks ago. Earlier in the year the Presidents fell to B-R, 6-0, showing that they have the capability to play with such a ball club.

Last week the speedy Clippers raced past Plymouth South, 35-6. They are averaging 30 points per game and have been led by 6-foot-3-inch, 190-pound running back Willie Ford. The junior is supposedly getting serious looks from a number of Division I football schools. He ran for three TDs last week, including romps of 63 and 91 yards.

It was another Old Colony League star, Jim Gagnon, who helped tip the scales in Weymouth's favor against Quincy. Midway through the second, the Presidents faced a third and 30 from their own 5. They opted for the quick punt. Gagnon had difficulty fielding the ball but got hold of it and raced 51 yards for a TD. It was his second punt return for touchdown in as many weeks. Chris McDonald's extra point kick made it 7-0.

"The quick kick was a good strategic move," said Presidents coach Peter Chella. "But that Gagnon is just a phenomenal player. He made it happen."

Things quickly unraveled for Quincy. On their ensuing possession, they fumbled in their own territory and the Wildcats recovered. Four plays later, QB Ryan Quill threw a 6-yard scoring strike to Mike Scott.

Weymouth turned another miscue into a score as they intercepted a Mark Glynn pass on the next series. A 45-yard return of the pick by Scott set up Gagnon's second TD as he brought the ball in from the 5. Quill threw a two-point conversion pass to Jeff Zella to give the Wildcats the 21-0 advantage.

"(The interception) was because of a bad coaching decision," said Chella. "It wasn't Glynn's fault at all. He's been getting better each week and he's making better decisions. But that was a play we shouldn't have called."

The half mirrored remarkably North Quincy's first half in a 28-0 loss to Weymouth last week. The Red Raiders also battled to a 0-0 deadlock in the first quarter before Gagnon ran for two touchdowns and returned a punt for another to give the Wildcats a 21-0 halftime lead.

Weymouth closed the scoring in the third quarter when Scott raced 59 yards for a touchdown.

The Presidents opened the game strong, putting together a four-plus minute drive before being forced to punt. They battled evenly with the powerful Wildcats for 15 minutes before things fell apart.

"We matched them moving the ball," said Chella. "We averaged about 4 yards a carry, which, against that team, is very good. We kept 'em off balance with short counters and play-action passes. But they have phenomenal team speed and it became a tough situation for us."

The offensive line of Jason Little, Peter Kolson, Greg Fernald, Jake Drohan and Don McCarthy paved the way as Kevin Connolly picked up 44 yards on 11 carries and Glynn added 41 yards on just five carries to complement the rest of the offense.

Chella singled out the defensive play of Scott MacPherson, Mike Russo and Mike Sheffer. "They did a great job for us," said the coach.

Sheffer picked off a pass in the first half. It was his fifth interception in the last five outings.

Mite A's Beat Fog, Framingham

The Quincy Youth Hockey Mite A team, sponsored by Northland Seafoods, dominated Framingham, 5-3, at a rink blanketed by fog.

The fog may have been a fisherman's nightmare, but it did not stop this school of young hockey players from lighting the beacon time and again.

Kevin (The Shark) Richardson took a bite out of the Framingham club with three goals. Andy Patten ventured into uncharted waters as the defenseman sunk an unassisted tally in the second.

Alex (Two If By Sea) Shaffer notched his first of the year as he lifted one over the Framingham netminder.

The Quincy forwards pressured throughout the game with Mark Lewis and Jonathon (Jaws) O'Connor getting numerous scoring opportunities. Billy Jones, Brendan Linnane and Paul Lennon hooked the Framingham forwards with their intense back-checking.

Danny (The Heater) Reggiani and David Oronte did yeoman work in the corners to keep play in the opposing zone.

Quincy's defense was keyed by speedy blueliners Myles (Barracuda) Clancy and Matt (Flash) Haskins. Brianna Nolan, Mike McKeon and Paul McLean also helped anchor the defense.

Goalie Pat Maloney protected the net well, clawing away almost everything that came his way.

New Mite B's, Same Old Tricks

It's a new cast of characters for the Quincy Mite B team, known and feared as the Killer Bees, but the results were the same as last year:

The Killer Bees stung Tri-County as they opened the season with a 2-1 win in a fog-filled contest.

Justin Thorley led the Killer Bee attack as he netted both tallies. He was set up by the fancy stick work of Dan Davis and Pat Devlin.

Bee keeper Ryan Barter protected the net well and got strong defensive support by swarming blueliners Paul Noonan, Nick Puopolo, Paul Fasoli and Jarrod Swierk.

Rounding out the vaunted Killer Bee club are Jessica Harrington, Rose Devlin, Brendan Clifford, Stephen Maggio, Evan Harrington, Paul Graham,

Chris Tierney and Matt Jones.

Sports Spotlight

By KERRY BYRNE

In the meandering stream of consciousness category: I have discovered what makes the good ol' USA different from the rest of the nations which blanket the globe.

Some people, such as Nobel-prize winning diplomats, economists and historians, argue that the difference is a durable written constitution which outlines the limits of government, delineates rights reserved for the people, allows for a fluid transfer of power and has provisions for amendment. I say they're wrong.

Sure the Constitution was a big deal 200 years ago, but it's been copied by just about everyone. Plus, since then, big-wig government muckety-mucks and the self-righteous, self-declared moral police have done everything in their power to whittle away each and every freedom listed as God-given by our Founding Fathers. But that's a story for another day.

Anyway, after years of travel and research I've discovered what separates Americans from the unwashed heathens of the world:

Cheerleaders.

That's right. Good, old-fashioned apple pie in the clear blue sky Cheerleaders. They're as American as fixing elections in small countries in the name of democracy or squashing those who attempt to exercise their Constitutional right to question the government.

Do you see cheerleaders at an English soccer match? Nope. The only cheers being led there are by a bunch of drunken Cockneys who chant unintelligible sing-songs to the tune of Doris Day's Que Sera, Sera. This before they pummel each other on the way to the nearest haven of deceit known as the pub.

How about at a Russian hockey game? Certainly no cheerleaders to be seen at one of those. Unless those barrel-chested, squat-nosed, vodka-stinking people behind the bench are cheerleaders. You know those Russian women.

French female Jell-o wrestling? No cheerleaders here. But there should be.

Then we have Scottish pole throwing. They tried cheerleaders, but the men were wearing the skirts and the idea of pom-pom girls in lumberjack outfits didn't catch on well. But an A for effort.

In The Sun Also Rises, Hemingway paints a classic picture of Spanish bullfighting. But no cheerleaders anywhere. Even if there were young, spry cheerleaders, there was not much Jake Barnes could do about it anyway. (Look up excruciating war wounds for more info.)

Basically, as I said, the US of A is the only nation with cheerleaders. They were born of the grand spectacle known as American football. In other countries a game is a game. But here, thanks to interstate, marching bands and cheerleaders, football is a massive civic happening, a weekly ritual on a scale of which could only happen in America.

While were on the cheerleading subject:

Bonnie Ford, of Quincy Point, has recently been selected a member of the National Cheerleading Association All-American Team.

As such, she will be Tampa, Florida on New Year's Day for the Hall of Fame college football bowl game.

Ford is a sophomore cheerleader at Archbishop Williams and has been a cheerleader for five years. Her previous experience includes cheering for St. Joseph's School and the Quincy Point Panthers of the Quincy Youth Football League.

She is joined on the All-American team by fellow Archies cheerleader Tara O'Brien of Braintree.

With the spectacle of American football outlined above, it's only fitting that we present a top 10 list of ways to tell you're not at a football game. This is, I repeat, a top 10 list of ways to tell you are not at a football game.

1. You can't smell freshly cut grass.
 2. Your team is losing to Army 42-0 at halftime.
 3. Someone cries out "Yahtzee!"
 4. The guy with the numbered shirt says, "Pst, buddy, I'll trade you these candy bars for a carton of smokes."
 5. No one on the field is bleeding.
 6. The game is being played on some sort of faux-green synthetic surface.
 7. The guy called Tuna says, "Give me a dozen jelly donuts and a large coffee. Now!"
 8. The event is cancelled because of rain, blizzard or golf-ball sized hail.
 9. A fat Latino man screams "Gooooooooooooooooo!" at the top of his lungs.
 10. The coach is named Henning.
- Bold predictions for the weekend:
BC football coach Dan Henning comes down with pneumonia. Unable to coach against Notre Dame Saturday. Eagles win, 31-27.
BC football coach Dan Henning perfectly healthy and on the sidelines Saturday. Eagles run down like a stray dog, 48-10.

previously unbeaten Bank of Boston.

Melissa Clifford had an assist while Meghan MacTaggart, Allison Hunt and Lauren McFarland looked sharp in the victory.

Meghan McLean, Christine Cleary and Jessica Jacques played well for Bank of Boston.

Continental Cable wrapped up Sons of Italy, 2-0.

Caitlin Munkley and Alissa Cardone scored. Munkley was set up by Cardone. Sine Callaran, Kerri Caldwell and Kristen DiMattio had strong outings for Continental.

Lucy Ross, Jill Leth, Nicole Coleman and Meagan Randall led the SOI effort.

Katy Mercurio was the only goal-scorer as J&T Contractors edged Barry's Deli, 1-0.

Mercurio was set up by Kristen Jones. Shannon Desmond, Kimberly Morrissey and Christina Sullivan also played well.

Kelly Manning, Erin McFarland and goalie Kelly Powers sparked the Barry's crew.

Jennifer Djerf was the top gun with three goals as Flavin & Flavin closed the lid on Sweeney Brothers Funeral Home, 7-0.

Carley Roush-kalus, Pam Sullivan, Katelyn McDonald and Diana Berberan also tallied. Assists were made by Christina Conley, Tricia Layden, Djerf and Roush-kalus.

Do Or Die Time For NQ Girls

The North Quincy High School girls soccer team played its best game of the year but dropped a 3-1 decision to Old Colony League power Weymouth at Teal Field last week.

They now need a win and a tie in their last two games to reach the post-season tournament for the first time in the program's history.

The Red Raiders (7-8-1) were scheduled to battle Bridgewater-Raynham this past Tuesday (Oct. 24). The Trojans sit atop the OCL, but one of the few blemishes on their record is a 1-1 tie with North Quincy earlier this season.

Saturday, the Red Raiders battle Quincy at 5 p.m. at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. North won the previous intra-city battle, 5-1.

Regardless of the results, the team has shown remarkable improvement over last year's one-win campaign.

Against Weymouth, the Red Raiders controlled the flow of play through the first 15 minutes as they used the entire field to spread the Wildcats defense.

Annie Bergen had the best North Quincy scoring chance but her shot missed wide right. The midfield trio of Hillary O'Donoghue, Liz Fitzpatrick and Jessie Ceurvels kept the visitors bottled in their own end with their fine play.

The Wildcats got on the board at 20:25 as Rachel DiBona took a back pass and drilled it from 18 yards. They took a 2-0 lead when Jill Caterer, the OCL's leading scorer, fired the ball in from 40 yards.

North came out strong again in the second half and dominated play. Freshman Keeper Kristen Bowes made a spectacular save of a point blank Caterer shot that seemed to spark the hosts.

Fitzpatrick pulled the Red Raiders to within one with 14 minutes to play when she converted a penalty kick after a teammate was held in the penalty area.

They pressed for the equalizer with Betsy Stone, Laurie Flynn and Bergen having good opportunities to score inside the box. With the Raiders attacking in desperation for a tie, the Wildcats managed a breakout for their third goal with less than a minute to play.

"The girls played a courageous game, showing a lot of grit after falling behind 2-0 early," said NQ first-year head coach Paul Bregoli.

"It was by far our best effort of the season," he said. "Our marking was excellent, our support good and the girls changed fields well. Fitzpatrick did a great job on Caterer and outplayed her in this game. Kristen Kelley also played as well as I've seen her play, as did Kelly Keegan, Ceurvels and Rachael Powers. Jocelyn West was her usual steady self and I though Bowes looked terrific in net for us."

Four Quincy Men On Westfield State Football Team

Four young local men are members of the Westfield State College football team this year.

Mike Bartlett of Quincy High and Matt Walsh, Jim Campbell and Bill Skutul of North Quincy High are the Quincy representatives on the Westfield State team.

Bartlett, a sophomore,

It took only seven days, but the North Quincy girls cross country managed to lose four meets, including two heartbreakers, while the boys lost three of four.

The Red Raiders girls fell to Weymouth, 22-33, Silver Lake, 27-28, Plymouth South, 22-37, and Barnstable, 26-29.

The boys lost to the first three - all very strong programs - but beat Barnstable for the first time ever, 26-29.

Kelly Duggan took first place in the girls meet against Weymouth. Her nearest teammate was Colleen Cotter at sixth. Rounding out the NQ contingent were Lauren Molloy (seventh), Diane Jordan (ninth) and Diane McGunigle (10th).

Against Silver Lake, Duggan, Molloy and Cotter finished 2-3-4 with McGunigle ninth and Jordan 10th.

Plymouth South and Barnstable were run against in a tri-meet at the PS campus. Duggan was third overall with Cotter placing ninth and Molloy placing tenth.

The new star to emerge for North Quincy was freshman Michelle Kentzel who took 15th and was NQ's fourth finisher just ahead of Carrie Jarvie.

In the Plymouth-Barnstable-NQ boys meet, Matt Quinn was the Red Raiders first finisher at 10th. Kevin McCue and Bryan Linskey were 12 and 13. Jimmy Wan was 16th while Joe Linskey was 19th. Plymouth South shut out North, 15-50.

Scorers in the 17-38 loss to Silver Lake were Bryan Linskey at fifth, McCue at sixth, Quinn at eighth, Joe Linskey at ninth and Wan at 10th.

Versus Weymouth (a 16-39 loss), the top North runner was Wan (fifth) while Bryan Linskey, Mike Devin, Joe Linskey and McCue placed 7-8-9-10.

At the Catholic Memorial Invitational, the North girls placed several medalists. Among freshmen girls, Jennifer Campbell, Kentzel, Nancy Gardner, Juliann Jones and Wendy Knowles all placed in the top 50.

Kelly Duggan placed 15th in the varsity meet while Cotter was a strong 54th but just out of the awards group. Most of North Quincy's varsity runners were unavailable because of PSATs.

In the freshmen boys group, Chris Barra just missed the medals group with a 52nd place finish. Kevin McCue and Brian O'Donnell ran their best races of the year over the 3.1-mile Franklin Park course.

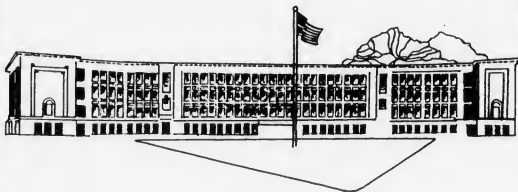

North was scheduled to take on Quincy this past Tuesday (Oct. 24) and will run in the OCL championships Tuesday, Oct. 31 at Wompatuck State Park in Hingham at 3 p.m.

On Saturday, Nov. 4, the Quincy school will participate in the State Coaches Invitational.

Fall Car Care It's Time To Be

Many Cars Still Overdue For Maintenance

Thousands of car owners risk serious car trouble by ignoring basic car maintenance.

At the same time, auto repair shops pass up opportunities to sell customers needed repair work. Amid frequent charges that repair shops sell customers they don't need, obvious car problems go unattended.

"Automobiles are under-repaired," says George Giek of American Automobile Association (AAA). Giek, AAA's managing director of automotive engineering and road service, cites figures from AAA that highlight the contradiction in repair industry practice. In inspecting 114,000 cars over an eight-year period, AAA found 43 percent had worn or under-inflated tires, 30 percent had worn or misadjusted belts, 30 percent were overdue for an oil change or were low on oil, 26 percent had emissions problems, and 21 percent needed battery maintenance.

Giek feels strongly that repair shops could earn back customer respect and loyalty if they did a better job attending to their customer's real needs.

"There is no need for the industry to over-repair vehicles," says Giek.

Car Care Council observations parallel those of AAA.

"For car owners, inattention to the basics of underhood fluid checks and simple tire pressure maintenance lead eventually to problems only a trained technician can solve," says Car Care Council President Don Midgley.

Instead of practicing preventive maintenance, people tend to ignore those easy car care procedures that can keep them out of repair shops. This often results in a roadside breakdown rather than a safe trip.

"Somehow," concludes Giek, "we need to create a partnership between car owners and the repair industry."

A few moments taken to refresh their car care knowledge can help drivers feel more confident than ever on the road.

The Car Care Council offers a free pamphlet called, "How To Find Your Way Under the Hood and Around the Car." To obtain a copy, just send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the Car Care Council, Department UH, One Grande Lake Drive, Port Clinton, OH 43452.

Quiz Book Adds Fun, Challenge To Car Care

If you'd answer "true" to the statement that spark plugs should be removed and oiled periodically or that a lock-up torque converter is an anti-theft device, "The Car Care Quiz Book: What Do You Know About Car Care?" may be for you.

That's the title of a fact-filled publication hot off the press from the Car Care Council.

Written for the motorist who's more than passively interested in keeping his/her vehicle operating safely and dependably, the book consists of 11 chapters of multiple choice quizzes, each followed by a chapter of answers.

To add a light touch to the text, the author sprinkles some whimsical choices among the 330 possible answers. For example, "...the driving phenomenon experienced in rainy weather is known as 'hydroplaning,' where the vehicle

(a) suddenly accelerates.

(b) loses contact with the road.

(c) bobs up and down as if it were a boat."

"Detailed explanations to each question are serious, as are the introductions to each chapter," emphasizes Don Midgley, president of the non-profit industry group.

The 90-page book presents an important, often complex subject in concise and easily understood terms.

"Automotive maintenance need not be an intimidating topic," says

Midgley. "Because of its challenging, sometimes humorous style, this book offers the reader an enjoyable as well as money-saving experience."

"The Car Care Quiz Book" was written by the Council's editor, Art Nellen; illustrations are by cartoonist Terry Colon.

The publication is offered at an introductory price of $5.95. To order, please send a check or money order to Car Care Council, c/o Book, One Grande Lake Drive, Port Clinton, OH 43452.

Gas Mileage

Do you keep a regular check on your car's gas mileage?

Car Care Council says it's a simple matter of having a note pad in the glove box...and jotting down odometer reading and fuel consumed from fill-up to fill-up. A noticeable increase in fuel consumption may mean you need a tune-up or other maintenance.

Replace Wipers In Good Weather

Fall Car Care

Don't Stretch Your Luck With The Timing Belt

Nighttime driving in unfamiliar territory is difficult when you're tired.

Add a little rain plus a smearing, noisy windshield wiper and you have a potentially dangerous finale to a long day on the road.

To prevent this scenario, plan to quit driving before dark, suggests the Car Care Council, and be sure your lights and windshield wipers are OK.

Windshield wipers are among the most popular replacement items on a car. To be sure you select the right type and size for your particular vehicle, shop for wiper blades in good weather. You'll see various aerodynamic features, single, double and triple blade designs and some with rubber boots to prevent freezing. Some brands offer a selection of colors.

The best time to learn how to install wiper blades is while you are in the store. There you can compare instructions on the packages and, if necessary, ask questions. Take the old blade in with you, as sizes range from 15 to 22 inches and blade assembly connectors vary from brand to brand, vehicle to vehicle. When choosing a blade that must be adapted to your vehicle, be sure the package includes necessary fittings.

If the wiper blade holder still is serviceable, you may want to buy blade refills only. But the frame and the arm that holds the squeegee should be replaced periodically for best wiping performance. The squeegee itself, being subjected to the elements, should be replaced every six to 12 months.

One of the most perfectly coordinated devices to modern man is the automobile engine. Its valves and pistons work in concert with the spark plugs and the fuel injectors, thousands of times per mile, with microsecond accuracy.

An integral part of this phenomenon is a flat rubber belt with notches that engage teeth on the camshaft pulleys. When this timing belt breaks or even slips, the coordinated opening and closing of the valves is, to say the least, interrupted. So is your trip.

The timing belt is lighter and quieter than the conventional timing gears or chain, and it requires no lubrication.

But, reminds the Car Care Council, being susceptible to wear, the belt should be checked and adjusted (or replaced) periodically. Check your owner's manual for your vehicle's specific service recommendations, which may vary from model to model.

Unlike a windshield wiper, battery or spark plug, which give some warning before total failure, a timing belt usually fails without notice, often disabling the vehicle on the spot. In some cases the result is severe engine damage.

Unfortunately, concludes the Council, there is no way, other than inspection, to know whether or not your timing belt is "running and out of time."

Preventive Car Care Can Save Lives

Accidents directly attributable to neglected vehicle maintenance (worn brakes and tires, poor vision, loose steering, etc.) could be costing the American public billions of dollars annually.

This statement, from the Car Care Council, is based on a National Highway Traffic Safety Administration estimate of $137.5 billion annual cost of vehicle accidents. Subtracting a third of which are D.U.I.-related driver impairment, this still leaves an accident tab totaling more than $90 billion. Five to 15 percent of this cost might be averted through periodic inspection and maintenance of vehicles, according to industry estimates. Even the more conservative figure, which would place a $4.5 billion price tag on mechanically-related accidents, stresses the need for greater concern for safety maintenance.

Beyond the economics, concludes the Council's statement, is the impact of personal injury, loss of life and property. Consider that for every American lost during the 42 days of Operation Desert Storm, several more died on our nation's highways because of accidents due to a vehicle failure. Both types of losses are both tragic and unacceptable, and certainly the latter is preventable.

A Thought For The Week

When you think about it, there is nothing mysterious or complex about "human nature" - Human nature is nothing other than human habits. Human nature is therefore changeable the same as human habits are changeable. Surprisingly, human nature is often mentioned to excuse personal offenses and misbehavior. It is equally surprising that the inherent goodness in man is seldom mentioned as human nature.

The human habits of love, tolerance and respect are certainly as much of human nature as the faults of greed, distrust and other vices. Actually, when you look around, you see far more love, trust and selflessness than hate, distrust and selfishness. In these troublesome times in human relations, it is still true that goodness exceeds the bad. And more importantly, it is good to stress that bad habits can be changed to good habits if a will to do so exists. In short, "human nature" can be changed. Just change "human nature" ...

Clerical Workers Picket City Hall

Sheets: Progress Made In Union Negotiations

Mayor James Sheets said this week progress is being made in negotiations with the remaining unions who have not yet settled their new contracts with the city.

But members of one of the unsettled unions that represents mainly clerical workers picketed outside City Hall Monday because of their dissatisfaction with what the city has offered them.

Sheets said five of the city's 21 unions, including that which represents the fire department, have agreed to an 11 percent raise over the next three years. Others, including the police and school unions, have not yet settled but talks are moving forward, he said.

Peter Hodes, a staff member of District 925 of the Service Employees International Union which represents the clerical workers, said the city's offer to them was far below 11 percent over three years. He said the city offered 2 percent over two years effective Jan. 1.

Hodes, who called the figure the "single biggest issue" causing the union's dissatisfaction, said about 150 union members and supporters attended Monday's picket. He added that he thinks the event will ultimately help the union.

"We expect that it will have some impact on the atmosphere of the negotiations because of support we had from the public," he said.

Sheets conceded that the city offered the union less than those who settled but that was because the union asked for a 30 percent increase for its highest-paid employees over three years (union officials have calculated the figure to be about 18 percent), an amount greater than what the others accepted.

"We have to come in (with a) low (figure)," said Sheets. "It's just the character of bargaining."

Sheets said the two sides met Friday and that he feels progress was made. Beyond that, he had little comment.

"It's really improper for me or Peter Hodes to talk about the negotiations," he said.

The next formal bargaining session is scheduled for Nov. 1.

Regarding the police and school unions, the mayor said, "We hope to settle soon with the patrolmen's association and superior officers' association. I don't know how close the teachers are, but the negotiations have been progressing."

Contracts with the city's unions expired at the end of June. If all the unions accept the same package, the pay increases will cost the city about $2 million this year, and between $2.1 million and $2.2 million each of the next two years, Sheets said.

The mayor offered the raises this year, the largest since he first took office in 1990, in part because the city had a $5.7 million surplus at the end of Fiscal Year 1995 which ended June 30. Many union employees went without raises during the first two years of the Sheets administration, when budgets were tight.

The City Council will consider raises for the five unions that have accepted them—firefighters, school nurses, public works employees, library workers and mid-level City Hall employees—at its Nov. 6 meeting.

Congressional Bill Puts Adams Site At Risk

The Adams National Historic Site in Quincy is among a number of historic sites and national parks throughout the country that could close under a bill being debated by Congress.

Officials have said as many as 12 such sites in Massachusetts alone could be closed if the bill is passed.

The national parks bill was defeated in the House of Representatives last month but revived as an amendment to a larger budget bill. A spokesman for Congressman Gerry Studds, a supporter of the Adams Site, said action on the bill is expected soon in the House.

Among other measures, the bill would establish a parks closure commission similar to the commission that recommended closing the South Weymouth Naval Air Station.

Mayor James Sheets, who has written to all Congressmen and both U.S. Senators representing Massachusetts urging them to oppose the bill, said city officials are hopeful things will work out but are keeping a close eye on the bill.

"We're watching the situation," he said.

•Granted a request to Peter Connell, owner of Redstone Pizza Co., 134 Washington St. (former Quincy Pizza) for a common victualer license when the present occupant leaves. (about Nov. 1)

•Continued a hearing until Oct. 31 from Bigel Express, 405 Hancock St. (former Atlas Hardware) for a common victualer license. Steven and Maria Giannetti, who plan to open the 25 seat coffee shop are awaiting reports from the traffic engineer and the North Quincy Business Association.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers presented plans to the license board to be reviewed.

•Continued for one week a hearing regarding the transfer of the common victualer-all alcoholic license and entertainment license from Stooges to Blue Note Exchange, 1626 Hancock St.

•Board heard complaints from Linda Germain of Columbia St. about traffic from Dunkin Donuts on Centre St. Chairman Joseph Shea said he will request that the owner appear at the next license board meeting. REAL ESTATE MARKET

Cranch Hill At The Turn Of The Century

By ART FOLEY

The following is the third and last story from the Real Estate promotional handbook put out by Within Brothers in 1905. Cranch Hill is a bit higher than Presidents Hill and is usually considered to be bounded by Glendale, Whitwell and Roselin Ave. At the time of this Real Estate promotion in 1905, there weren't any houses on Cranch Hill, so only the Cranch School shows on the map: "Comfortable houses can be secured on Cranch Hill From $2,000 to $4,000 dollars."

Cranch Hill was the Homestead tract of the Hon. Richard Cranch who was born in England in 1726. He emigrated to America in 1746 with Gen. Joseph Palmer. Together they leased the part of Quincy called German-town which is the site of the first glass factory in American.

Mr. Cranch represented Quincy in the Legislature and he was the Justice who called the first town meeting in Quincy after its incorporation. It was Mr. Cranch who was given the honor of naming the town which he called Quincy after Col. John Quincy. He died in 1811.

Another interested quote from the handbook: "Quincy is strongly entrenched in the no-license column and each year gives handsome majorities against the sale of intoxicating liquors within its borders. The fact that Quincy is today, perhaps, the fastest-growing city in New England, all point to one conclusion, that license is not essential to the progress of a city."

There's an interesting photo of Cranch Hill as seen from Presidents Hill. I assume the homes in the picture are on Whitwell Street.

While Quincy is no longer a "dry town," things really haven't changed a great deal.

Special Insurance Needed For Flooding

(NAPS)—The floods that devastated the Midwest, California, Texas and Georgia since 1993 have made it frighteningly clear that very few American homeowners are aware of the flood risk they face.

Millions of homes are vulnerable near coasts and ivers in the U.S. and thousands more are built in these areas each year.

What makes matters worse is that fewer than 25 percent of homeowners in high-hazard areas have flood insurance, even though the coverage is easily available in more than 18,000 communities through the National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP).

Myths and a lack of communication about the need for flood insurance are why so few people buy the coverage.

To help clear up the confusion, Aetna Life & Casualty, a participating insurer in the NFIP, offers the following facts and tips:

- Homeowners policies don't cover flood damage. Many people don't realize they're not covered for flood damage until it's too late. If you think your property could be at risk, contact an insurance agent and check into a separate flood insurance policy.

- Flood insurance is affordable. The nationwide average premium for flood coverage is about $350 a year, but varies according to level of flood risk. Coverage costs less than $100 a year in some areas. Compared to the cost to repair or rebuild a flood-damaged home, flood insurance is a bargain for many homeowners.

- You can't be denied flood coverage. A prior history or high risk of flooding does not disqualify you for flood insurance, no matter where you live or how many times you've been flooded. You can purchase flood insurance as long as your community participates in the NFIP, and there is a 30-day waiting period before coverage becomes effective.

- Don't count on a federal bailout. People who don't have insurance because they think the government will bail them out may be in for a surprise. The government offers some grants, but they're capped at $12,000, which is little help if you've lost everything. Most disaster assistance is in the form of loans. And to be eligible for any assistance, your community must be declared a federal disaster area, which happens in less than 50 percent of flooding incidents.

- "Low-risk" areas get flooded, too. You don't have to live near water to need protection. About one-third of the claims paid through the NFIP have been from "low-hazard" areas. In the 1993 Midwest flooding, the Mississippi River extended 15 miles beyond its banks in some areas.

- Make an informed decision. For more information about flood insurance, contact an insurance agent or call 1-800-713-FLOOD (1-800-713-3566) for names of agents in your area.

Council approval, since the land is zoned PUD. Meade said a Planning Board public hearing on the matter scheduled for last night (Wednesday) was canceled. City Clerk Joseph Shea said a City Council public hearing scheduled for Nov. 13 has been postponed indefinitely.

Continuum Care already had received approval from the Quincy Conservation Commission to take sample borings at the site, including one in an area known as Squantum's unofficial bird sanctuary. Such borings help determine whether the property can support the buildings, according to officials.

Some residents had voiced concerns that the borings would endanger area wildlife, but the commission said such fears are unwarranted.

The project ultimately also would have needed approval from the commission and the state Department of Environmental Protection.

Officials at Continuum, one of the largest health care developers in the Northeast, had said in the past that construction of the project would take about two years to complete.

"That's when it's going to tell, when it's the quietest time of year," he said.

Both Leigh and Manning think they think it's logical that downtown businesses may remain open later on another evening/other evenings if Thursday nights go well.

"It would behoove us to stay open if there's a crowd downtown," said Leigh, who added that he plans to address the Thursday evening issue at the QCBPA's Oct. 31 meeting.

Other members of the QCBPA Adjunct Committee include John Black of Presidential Camera, Lou Cicchetti of Big Daddy's, Gordon Lagrow of Quinwell Travel and Nancy McArdle of Hancock Tobacco.

'Fright Night' Friday, Saturday At USS Salem

The U.S. Naval & Shipbuilding Museum (USNSM), the non profit corporation which owns the USS Salem at the Fore River Shipyard, will host "Fright Night On The Witch Ship" Friday and Saturday.

The retired warship and former flagship of the Sixth Fleet will be transformed into a haunted vessel which the public will be able to tour both nights from 5 to 9 p.m.

"Fright Night On The

Witch Ship" will be a fun, safe, and obviously, very unique way to celebrate Halloween," said USS Salem Executive Director and Chief Officer William MacMullen. "We'll have some of the best ghouls in the business aboard. There will be refreshments and nightly contests too. With the exception of a few scared crew members, all of us at the USS Salem are excited about this weekend."

Children and adults are invited to attend the event. Those dressing in costume will be eligible for "Best Dressed" prizes. Refreshments will be served.

Cost is $8, children 12 and under $6. For group reservations or information, call 479-7900.

736 New Adult Voters Register For Election

officials had not yet determined the exact number of registered voters in Quincy before the Sun went to press Tuesday. Shea said the figure will likely be around 43,639. That's up significantly from the previous total of 43,083 registered voters several months ago.

Kids' Vote isn't the only development on the local voting front. The city is advertising bids for a new optical scanner vote tabulator. The state-of-the-art equipment is designed to provide complete voting results minutes after the polls close. It also more efficient to handle recounts.

"It counts immediately and gives us more punch for our dollars. Voters use a wand to connect the candidate of their choice and the machine counts the votes as the day goes on. At 8 o'clock, you turn a key and votes are tabulated.

"I've seen it at every city clerk's meeting I've been," said Shea who has been City Clerk for three years. "I'm very much impressed by it."

Shea said he has inquired about the machine for the last three to four years. His predecessor, former City Clerk John Gillis, also looked at it, Shea said.

Bids will be opened Thursday, Nov. 2. Shea said the new equipment, which is currently used in 81 municipalities including Braintree and Hingham, could cost approximately $260,000.

Shea said the present vote counting system utilized in Quincy, and E.V.M., was purchased in 1986. On occasion, the system has broken down and created long nights for candidates, election workers and the local press.

Shea said he thinks the time is right for the city's voting system to move into the 20th century.

After the bids are opened, Mayor James Sheets will decide whether the city will purchase the new system. That decision will be made after the election, Shea said.

Getting Out The Vote

UNCLE SAM ROUNSEVILLE stands in front of the Wollaston MBTA Station this week with a sign encouraging the city's Asian residents to vote. The hand-made sign, designed by C & C Painting of Quincy, reads in Chinese, "Please vote Nov. 7, Tuesday. It's your patriotic duty. It's easy, simple and fast." Rounseville planned to do the same in North Quincy and Boston's Chinatown, as well as bring a similar sign in Spanish to Cambridge, later this week.

City License Fees Increase Proposed

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

License Board Chairman Joseph Shea presented the license board a proposed increase in license fees at Tuesday's meeting to study and return in two weeks to vote upon the changes.

Shea noted that he wanted the vote before the 1996 liquor renewals are mailed in mid-November.

According to Shea, the increase is long overdue since the license board has not raised fees since 1972 which made the City of Quincy charging the lowest fee of any city this size.

Shea said "nobody likes to raise fees, however, the time has come to bring Quincy in line with other communities." Some fees increase by $500.

The following is a list of changes.

•Cabaret license: D.J., Karaoke, a piano bar or a four or less piece band. The fee will jump from $5 to $100.

•Entertainment license: Five or more pieces from $100 to $200.

•Dancing and serving alcohol on Sundays: from $100 to $150.

•Floor show and theatre clubs: Persons applying must already have an entertainment license to be eligible. The cost will be $200.

•Raffle and Bazaar permits: All groups (churches, clubs, etc.) who have a State Beano License issued by the Lottery, shall be issued a one year Raffle and Bazaar permit. The cost will be $25 a year.

•All other groups who want to have a raffle or a Las Vegas night must apply each time separately to the assistant city clerk and the State Lottery. The cost is $10 each.

50% Turnout Forecast

Council, School Races Highlight Tuesday Election

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

City Council and School Committee races will take the spotlight in next Tuesday's city election.

There are contests for three council at-large and five ward seats and three four-year terms on the school committee.

Mayor James Sheets has his first opposition in four years with a challenge by Roger Lyons as the third feature on the ballot.

City Clerk Joseph Shea sees 50 percent of the city's 43,641 registered voters going to the polls which will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

"I think with ward races and the hotly contested councillor-at-large race, this is a significant year," Shea said. "I think the school committee contest, traditionally in our city, has always generated a lot of activity. The people are interested in the schools and public education in Quincy.

"I think the turnout will be 50 percent. It's a municipal election and there is a little more activity this year than in 1991 and 1993 when the turnout was 39 percent and 37 percent respectively."

With one open seat for councillor-at-large and three open ward seats, at least four new councillors will be elected next Tuesday. That will mark the highest turnover on the city council since 1973 when five new councillors were elected: Leo Kelly (Ward 1), Jack Lydon (Ward 3), James Sheets (Ward 4), Warren Powers (Ward 5), and Dennis Harrington (Ward 6).

Sheets, seeking a fourth term, faces his first challenge since being elected in 1989. Lyons is a 78-year-old retired contractor who lives at 211 West Squantum St. The challenger has waged a low-key campaign against Sheets who was re-elected in 1991 and 1993 without opposition.

The council-at-large race features four well-known political names but only two true incumbents.

Councillors-at-large Tim Cahill and Michael

Cedrone, D'Amico, Fabrizio Top Fund-raisers

Sheets, Chretien, Cahill Top Campaign Spenders

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Mayor James Sheets, councillor-at-large candidate Lawrence Chretien and incumbent Councillor Timothy Cahill are the city's three top spenders as Quincy's municipal election Nov. 7 draws near.

According to financial reports filed with the city clerk's office this week, Sheets has spent $36,003.06 since his previous report while Chretien and Cahill have spent $17,793.82 and $12,406.90 respectively.

Previous reports had to be filed at least eight days before the city's preliminary election for Wards 4 and 5 held Sept. 19.

The three top fund-raisers since the previous reports were filed are School Committee candidate Christine Cedrone, who raised $5,852.49;

Ward 4 City Council candidate Michael D'Amico, $5,840; and incumbent Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio, $5,465. Cahill, placing fourth, raised $5,445 or $20 less than Fabrizio.

In the mayor's race, Sheets added receipts totaling $2,103 to a previous balance of $52,090.71 before making his expenditures. He finished with an ending balance of $18,190.65.

Sheets' challenger, Roger Lyons, started from scratch with a balance of zero and raised $1,170. He has since spent $5,389.65 and has loaned his campaign $5,000.

Other candidates have done the following:

Ward 1 Councillor

•Peter Kolson (incumbent): previous balance,

$3,025; receipts, zero; expenditures, $744; ending balance, $2,281.

•Joseph Kasparian: previous, zero; receipts, $187.74; expenditures, $187.74; ending, zero.

Ward 2 Councillor

•Daniel Raymond: previous, $24,966.16; receipts, $893.35; expenditures, $3,252.49; ending, $22,607.02.

•Mark Roberts: previous, $327.35; receipts, $500; expenditures, $663.40; ending, $163.95. Roberts and his wife Judy have loaned $2,155.89 to the campaign.

Ward 3 Councillor

•Stephen Doherty: previous, $3,378.14; receipts, $2,326; expenditures, $4,831.74; ending, $872.40. Doherty loaned $2,000 to the campaign.

Board Tells Donut Shop To Hire Police Traffic Detail

MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The Quincy License Board told owners of Dunkin' Donuts on Centre St. that a police detail has to be hired from 7 to 10 a.m. each morning as an interim solution until the traffic situation is resolved.

Complaints received regarding traffic conditions near the store have been brought to the attention of the board causing Police Chief Francis Mullen as well as other members of the board to echo that "the issue is traffic."

Mullen said he will send someone who will report back to the police until the problem is resolved. He said the same person will be at the site each morning.

Chairman Joseph Shea while commending Dunkin' Donuts for their "good record" conceded that there are parking and traffic problems in most of the city caused by narrow roads which date back years.

Dunkin' Donuts owners spoke about a change of signs in the area and maybe changing the width of the lanes leading to the shop.

Traffic engineer Jack Gillon who said there were not "enough spaces for a drive through" promised to work with the Dunkin' Donut traffic engineer for a permanent solution.

Owners who said they sometimes "find themselves under siege" reminded the license board that business at Crown Colony, traffic on Burgin Pkwy and Columbia St. also have an effect on the traffic pattern and problem.

The board will continue the hearing at their next meeting on Nov. 14.

Sheets Concerned About Weld Downsizing Plan

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Mayor James Sheets has expressed concerns about a plan by Gov. William Weld to downsize state government.

The plan calls for, among other things, privatization of operations of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) as well as some MBTA operations, including buses. Details of the plan were scheduled to be unveiled yesterday (Wednesday).

Sheets said at press time he is against privatization of the T buses, saying that a private company would likely place less emphasis on the comfort and safety of passengers and would instead focus more on profits by slashing bus lines they feel are unnecessary.

"Buses are a service to people," said Sheets, who has been an outspoken supporter of Weld in the past. "Under public control, management is continually sensitive to that."

Sheets said he is "not as dead-set against" MWRA privatization but said he is still leery about that plan as well.

"I think that's a little bit different," he said. "The service provided by the MWRA is more mechanical, much less humanistic. An individual would have to show me how a privatized MWRA would save money.

"But I think privatization, in general, may provide positive impact on your budget, but it may have a negative effect on your quality of life. I think you've got to be very careful about what you do with privatization, because it doesn't have a very high degree of sensitivity to human need."

Sheets would not comment on comments made Monday by state Sen. Michael Morrissey that Weld's proposal to privatize the MWRA may make "a better sound bite for the governor than it does a plan," but he agreed with the senator's statement that the authority appears to be responding to the public's cry for greater efficiency.

"I think that is due in large part to (MWRA Executive Director) Doug MacDonald," said Sheets. "I think Doug MacDonald is very sensitive to people, and I think the organization carries his mark now."

Weld's proposed overhaul also calls for reduction of the number of Cabinet secretaries from 11 to six, abolition of the Registry of Motor Vehicles, elimination of the state's Civil Service system and limitation of state managers to 12 years in government.

Delahunt First Democrat

Race Opens For Studds 10th Seat

Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William Delahunt this week stepped up to bat as the first official Democratic candidate for the 10th Congressional seat being vacated by Congressman Gerry Studds.

Delahunt, a Quincy resident and former Ward 5 city councillor, said Monday, "I've made a decision. I'm going to run."

Delahunt was a candidate in 1992 but bowed out and endorsed Studds in the new 10th district that now stretches from Quincy to Cape Cod and the Islands.

Former State Senator Paul Harold, who ran against Studds in 1992 and carried Quincy against him in the Democratic primary election is considered a potential candidate by political observers.

But Harold, who is running for city councillor at-large in next week's city election said Tuesday: "All my attention is focused on the councillor at-large seat. Any future plans will have to be looked at in the future."

Harold noted that Quincy is now the largest community in the 10th district since Brockton has been split into two districts and that a strong Quincy candidate would have a good chance to win the seat.

The last Congressman from Quincy, he said, was John Quincy Adams who served in the House of Representatives after one term as the nation's sixth President.

"It's a Quincy district now," he said. "I think it should be represented by a Quincy person."

Mayor James Sheets is also being mentioned as a possible candidate but he told The Sun Tuesday that he has no plans to run.

Big Council Turnover?

Next Tuesday's city election could produce the biggest turnover in the City Council in over 20 years.

There will be at least three new councillors elected, probably four and—possibly five.

It would be the most new council faces since the 1973 election that seated five new councillors.

Elected that year were Leo Kelly (Ward 1), Jack Lydon (Ward 3), James Sheets (Ward 4), Warren Powers (Ward 5), and Dennis Harrington (Ward 6).

Sheets, of course, is now mayor and Warren Powers is now an associate justice at Quincy District Court.

Three new councillors are guaranteed in next week's election with three ward seats open.

Daniel Raymond, a veteran of the Quincy political scene and newcomer Mark Roberts are after the Ward 2 seat being vacated by Ted DeCristofaro who is retiring after 14 years.

Coincidentally, Raymond was elected to that seat 20 years ago in 1975 and held it until 1981 when he lost a mayoral bid to Frank McCauley.

More coincidence: Raymond gave up his School Committee seat to run in Ward 2 in 1975 which he is doing again this year. And, one more coincidental tidbit: DeCristofaro succeeded him in 1981 and now Raymond wants to succeed him.

Ward 3 will get a new councillor, too. Pat McDermott and Steve Doherty seek the seat Larry Chretien is leaving to run at-large.

And there will be another new councillor in Ward 5 where Charles Phelan is stepping down. Steve Durkin, who is leaving the School, and Steve Reilly are vying for the seat. Durkin led Reilly by 673 votes in the preliminary election.

The spotlight, however, will be on the council-at-large race with four candidates and only three seats to go around.

One of the seats is open, the one Joseph LaRaia gave up to accept appointment as a city assessor. The other two are held by Council President Mike Cheney and Tim Cahill, both seeking re-election.

What makes the field interesting is that the other two candidates are Larry Chretien and former Senator Paul Harold.

One of the four isn't going to make it.

Political observers are giving one of the three seats to Harold which would make him the fourth new councillor in this election.

And, they think, because of his past strong vote-getting record, he could top the field. Harold holds the record for the most votes ever run up by a council at-large candidate. That was in 1977 when he polled 21,246 votes.

And, he hadn't lost his touch in 1992 when he carried Quincy against incumbent Gerry Studds in the Democratic Congressional race.

Most observers are giving Cahill the second seat on his past vote-getting performance. He has topped the at-large field in the last three city elections.

And if the observers are right, it would bring the battle for the third seat down to between Cheney and Chretien. And, at this writing, it looks close and no one appears willing to call it.

The best two-man fight is probably in Ward 4 where incumbent Tom Fabrizio has his hands full in challenger Michael D'Amico. The 20-year-old college student topped Fabrizio by a 180-vote margin in the preliminary election. It looks close and observers are calling it a "toss-up."

Peter Kolson is expected to prevail over Joseph Kasparian in Ward 1 and Bruce Ayers has a free ride in Ward 6.

THERE'S NOT MUCH excitement on the mayoral front. Challenger Roger Lyons would probably need a magic wand to upset one of the city's most popular chief executives, incumbent James Sheets. Lyons doesn't have one but he just sent out some 9,000 letters to voters asking for their support.

But you can bet mayoral hopefuls will be closely looking at the Sheets and Lyons votes next week.

They'll be looking for any sign of slippage in Sheets' popularity. Lyons is his first opponent in four years and if he pulls a good vote it may give the hopefuls some ideas of running two years from now.

FOOD POISONING: KNOW THE SIGNS

The 1993 deaths of several people who ate contaminated hamburgers pushed food poisoning into a higher public profile. Parents learned that children shouldn't eat undercooked meat. Everyone learned to be more careful with raw eggs. Still, how many of us know what the symptoms of food poisoning are or what to do about them? Signs of mild food poisoning often resemble the flu: fever, headache, muscle aches, nausea, diarrhea, and chills. A call to the doctor is in order if the diarrhea is bloody or if symptoms are severe, lasting more than two days. Early diagnosis is critical, as dehydration is a threat (particularly for children) and serious complications such as hemolytic uremic syndrome and kidney failure can develop.

P.S. The symptoms of food poisoning may appear from a few hours to two days after infection.

If you feel bad after a meal and that feeling persists, don't hesitate to contact your physician. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and I are here to help you endure your good health. We are conveniently located at 700 Congress St., in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Call 472-2550 for an appointment.

Scenes From Yesterday

Massachusetts Field School, Wollaston, Mass.

THIS 1908 POSTCARD is an early view of the Massachusetts Fields School built in 1896. At that time this section of Quincy was known as Park and Downs because it was where the Wollaston Park and Norfolk Downs land development companies land met. But the name of the school came from the early settlers who had named the plains along Quincy's shore "the Massachusetts Fields" because the Indians had their planting grounds there. The architectural plans for this school were also used for the Cranch and Gridley Bryant Schools. Expanded in the 1940's, this building was sold by the city to a condominium developer in 1984.

READERS FORUM

Quincy Citizens, Wollaston Park Assns. Oppose Concourse

[The following letter, written to the City Council and also sent to Mayor James Sheets, was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication.]

Gentlemen:

We are still opposed to both sides of the crosstown connector (a.k.a. the Quincy Center Concourse).

Quincy has been around for more than 200 years. The argument for extending Upland Road years ago was to bring more traffic to Quincy Center. Now we have so much traffic that supposedly we can't handle it. All it has done is split the city in half to make a mini-expressway for outsiders to pass through the city to and from work elsewhere.

The connector would cut the city into quarters so outsiders can be diverted from the Southern Artery or the Burgin Parkway in order to change their paths when traffic backs up. In the late 1970s, city officials said they would spend no more time and money on this project if the businessmen didn't accept it.

There is now no difficulty getting from one side of the city to the other and we don't need a road just to cross Hancock Street. We have parking on both sides of Hancock Street.

When local business properties are taken, this will remove taxable property from the tax rolls, so we will have to pay more taxes to make this loss up.

Why should small businesses be put out of business? Many have spent many years and their own money. If they are relocated, can they afford the new rents or can their products or services carry a larger rent?

Quincy Square is changing drastically physically. It's no longer the city or the shopping area we knew and want. We are fast becoming a mini-Boston and the bottom line is that we can't afford it. It's beating a dead horse to think we can compete with the South Shore Plaza and the huge shopping areas we have approved elsewhere in the city.

Instead of spending money on a road we really need money spent on remodeling existing buildings. Make it attractive to shop. We also need more retail space, not service-type activity on the first floor. As an example, on the east side of Hancock Street from Cottage Avenue to Granite Street, there are about 13 service-type activities, not counting eating establishments. Quincy 2000 and the city should be concentrating on relocating these businesses and locating small retail shops to replace them.

It doesn't make sense to dump traffic on Hancock Street and then tie up existing traffic there with another traffic signal. We have many ways to cross the city or get to Quincy Center. When they get there, there is parking on both sides of Hancock Street. Also, a traffic signal at the Burgin Parkway intersection will tie up that traffic, especially during commuter times.

To the end of all of this it will tie the city up in knots that computer traffic signals cannot solve. When and if this project fails, what do we do then? As it now stands, we can survive.

Most of these comments we expressed in 1981. Things have not changed.

Neighborhood Club Has Fulfilled Its Responsibilities

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On Oct. 26, 1989 the Quincy Neighborhood Club embarked on a program to expand their parking lot by cutting down over 200 trees in a wetland area.

Since that date, many persons and public agencies were involved including abutters and neighbors, elected local and state officials, the City of Quincy Conservation Commission, Massachusetts Department of Environment and the Neighborhood Club.

Several public hearings occurred along with many meetings with the club and their legal representatives. A compromise agreement was negotiated to allow a limited parking lot expansion, but with improvements to their drainage and landscaping plans.

The parking lot expansion has been accomplished along with the agreed-upon improvements in landscaping and drainage. I would like to thank all who participated in our meetings over the years. The project, in my opinion, has resulted in an overall enhancement to the neighborhood.

I would like to publicly thank Atty. Patrick Kenney, a neighbor, who represented us in the legal issues and meetings concerning this very important matter.

The Neighborhood Club has fulfilled their responsibilities under the agreement made. We should now look forward to a good relationship between the club and its neighbors.

Three Cheers For Nick

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Three cheers for Nick, the owner of the Sunoco across from Wollaston Beach, for being an asset to the community. Nick welcomed the public into his business all summer.

The section of the beach that was given new sand and lifeguards was not near the public restrooms. For many, this posed a problem.

The Sunoco gas station was much more convenient and Nick, the owner, always welcomed the non-purchasing public with a smile and pleasant "hello."

Thank you, Nick, from the beachgoers of Quincy.

Simon Fireman Presents $500,000 To Hebrew Center

Simon C. Fireman of Marina Bay, Quincy, recently presented a gift of $500,000 to Hebrew Rehabilitation Center for Aged, a preeminent leader in the field of geriatric care, research and training. Fireman presented the gift in honor of his wife, Norma, who is a vice president of the center's Women's Auxiliary.

Chairman of the Board Alfred Slifka recently made the surprise announcement at the Park Plaza Castle in Boston where 400 center supporters gathered for the Women's Auxiliary's annual gala fund-raiser event.

"This generous gift is being made in your honor as a recognition for the love and commitment that you feel toward the center," he told Mrs. Fireman.

Simon Fireman is chairman and chief executive officer of the Avon-based Aqua-Leisure Industries Inc., which he built into a multi-million dollar international manufacturing enterprise.

"I am grateful for my successes, and believe it is important to give back to the community," said Fireman. "By enhancing the physical facility, we can offer convenience and efficiency in the delivery of the center's expanded services."

"Simon and Norma Fireman are extraordinarily individuals, who have demonstrated their commitment to improving the quality of care for the elderly through ongoing support and leadership," said Slifka. "We are extremely appreciative of this generous, pace-setting gift toward the center's $26 Million 'Fulfilling the Promise' Capital Campaign, which will benefit current and future generations of seniors."

The "Fulfilling the Promise Campaign" represents the largest community-wide fundraising drive in the center's 92-year history and is designed to support the center's efforts to meet the needs of an increasing elderly population in this decade and beyond.

Hebrew Rehabilitation Center for Aged in Boston is a non-sectarian, non-profit organization that includes a 725-bed chronic care hospital and research and training institute, two specialized apartment complexes for seniors, a life care community, an adult day health program and geriatric consultative services.

Applications Available For State Teachers Award Program

State Sen. Michael Morrissey announces that applications are available for a new state program that will give new public school teachers who graduated at the top of their class up to $7,200 towards college loans.

Created as part of the Education Reform Act approved by the Legislature and signed by Gov. Weld in 1993, the "Attracting Excellence to Teaching Program" gives qualifying teachers up to $150 per month over four years to help pay for the cost of college. An amount of $150,000 was allocated in this year's state budget to fund the program.

To qualify, applicants must be new teachers, beginning after July 1, 1994, and have graduated in the top quarter of their undergraduate class. Under provision adopted by the state Board of Education, preference will be given to teachers who are employed in low-income school districts where 10 percent of students or more qualify for federal free and reduced lunch.

Administered by the Executive Office of Education, the loan program was created to help attract the best students to teaching at a time when the state is undergoing a major effort to improve the quality of public education.

"The program has been initiated at a critical time," said Morrissey. "According to the latest federal surveys, Massachusetts has the second oldest teaching corps in the nation."

For more information, contact the office of Sen. Michael Morrissey, State House Room 520, Boston, MA 02133, or call 722-1494; or the Executive Office of Education (EOE) at 722-1313.

MWRA Advisory Board Thanks Morrissey For Efforts To Eliminate Plant's Battery D

In the wake of Judge David Mazzone's decision to allow the MWRA to reduce the size of the Deer Island Treatment Plant, the MWRA Advisory Board has thanked Sen. Michael Morrissey for his efforts in support of the proposal to eliminate Battery D from the treatment plant, saving ratepayers $165 million.

The MWRA, at the urging of the MWRA Caucus and the Advisory Board, submitted a motion to the federal judge overseeing the Boston Harbor Project to eliminate the design and construction of one of four batteries of secondary treatment. The reduction is based on a two-year MWRA study which showed that the planned secondary treatment plant was at least 25 percent too large for the amount of wastewater the plant will actually treat.

"As a member of the MWRA Caucus, Sen. Morrissey was instrumental in backing the Advisory Board's early calls to right-size the plant, as well as in efforts to gain approval from DEP and EPA," stated Joseph E. Favaloro, Executive Director of the MWRA Advisory Board.

The MWRA Caucus traveled to Washington, D.C. earlier this year to seek federal funding for the Boston Harbor Project and to lobby the EPA for its support of elimination of Battery D. Both the EPA and DEP supported the MWRA motion in court.

"The Judge's decision is a victory for all MWRA ratepayers," Favaloro said. "Thanks to the efforts of Sen. Morrissey and the MWRA Caucus, ratepayers will save $165 million while achieving the environmental goals of the Boston Harbor Project."

Continental-QCTV Wins First-Place State Awards

Continental Cablevision's staff and Quincy Community Television volunteers have won four first-place awards in the Massachusetts Cable Television Commission's 10th annual Community Television Contest, a feat matched by only two other local programming operations in the state.

Continental also won one honorable mention award and had another program nominated as a finalist in the contest.

Taking first-place honors were "Senior Beat," produced by volunteer John Noonan; "Senior Olympics Wrap-Up," produced by Continental's Darlene Mendoza; "Taste of the South Shore," produced by volunteers Thom Connolly and Craig Peterson; and "City of Presidents Blues Festival" produced by Mendoza.

Winning an honorable mention was "Fall Festival at Quincy Farmers' Market," produced by volunteer John Lyons; and nominated as a finalist was "Building Blocks for Quincy's Tomorrow," produced by Continental in conjunction with the Quincy Planning Department.

"The number and diversity of Quincy Community Television programs winning awards reflects the commitment of Continental Cablevision, our programming staff and volunteers to truly serving the city and its viewers," said Continental Program Director Bill McColgan. "We are gratified that the talent and energy of our people that goes into that effort has been recognized."

"Senior Beat" was chosen the best program for and by seniors produced by a community volunteer. The monthly magazine show covers the issues, events and personalities important to the city's senior citizens, who comprise 25 percent of Quincy's population. John Noonan, chairman of the Quincy Council on Aging and also host of "Cable Talk," has been producing local television shows since the beginning of cable in Quincy in 1982.

"Senior Olympics Wrap-Up" was named the best program for an by seniors produced by media professional. Mendoza, Continental's education affairs producer, pulled together highlights of the city's annual week-long Senior Olympics which drew hundreds of athletes from throughout the area.

"Taste of the South Shore" was chosen the best public affairs program produced by a community volunteer. Connolly and Peterson captured the sights and sounds of the special fund-raiser for Horizons for Youth in which restaurants throughout the area sold samples of their fare at booths in downtown Quincy. McColgan hosted the program.

"City of Presidents Blues Festival" was named the best performing arts program produced by a media professional. Mendoza orchestrated day-long coverage of the event for a two-hour cable special. The event, designed to promote tourism in Quincy, featured appearances by Gov. William Weld and Mayor James Sheets.

"Fall Festival at Quincy Farmers' Market" received honorable mention in the community volunteer category of programming for and by seniors. Lyons, who also has been volunteering since 1982, created this longer version of his daily "Rhymes of the Times" segment devoted to the annual autumn event in the city. Collaborating was Continental Studio Manager Michael Robinson.

"Building Blocks for Quincy's Tomorrow," a finalist in the municipal issues category, was a collaboration of Continental's McColgan and the Planning Department, led by Principal Planner Angelito Santos, to detail how Quincy's Community Development Block Grant funds have and will be used to improve the city. Other key participants were Paul Johnson of Eastern Nazarene College and David Greig of the city's housing rehabilitation department.

Continental Cablevision systems across the state won 15 of the 32 first-place awards in the Community Television Contest.

Point-Webster Receives $25,000 From Atlantic Development

Ward 2 City Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, on behalf of the Point-Webster Elementary School, recently accepted a check in the amount of $25,000 from Atlantic Development of Hingham.

DeCristofaro will establish a fund that the Point-Webster Parent-Teacher Organization will access, through the principal, for the purpose of spending money to promote and enhance educational resources for the students at the school.

The money is part of the mitigation agreement by Atlantic Development's planned Granite Crossing shopping center project, which will include a Wal-Mart and Roches Bros. Supermarket, in Quincy Point.

"I've always had a deep interest in the education of our young children and I hope this modest amount will help the young children of South Quincy," said DeCristofaro. "I am pleased to be able to contribute in enhancing this educational opportunity."

DeCristofaro has been a long-time supporter of the Quincy Public Schools and youth athletic programs. In addition to serving the residents of Ward 2 as a city councillor, he spent many years on the Quincy Park and Recreation Board.

"I've always believed the youth in our community are representative of the youth of our country and I always try to do my part to help," he said.

The check presentation was made at a recent school assembly made up of parents, students and teachers.

POINT-WEBSTER SCHOOL recently received $25,000 from Atlantic Development of Hingham as part of a special permit condition for the Granite Crossing shopping plaza now under construction in Quincy Point. The school plans to use the money to construct a circular drive and landscaping to ease parking problems. From left are Thomas Godfrey of Atlantic Development, Point-Webster Principal Phil Connolly and Ward 2 City Councillor Ted DeCristofaro.

Beam On Track Disrupts T Service

Train service on the Red Line between the Quincy Center and JFK MBTA stations was interrupted between 9:52 and 10:35 a.m. Sunday after a steel beam fell across the tracks.

According to MBTA spokeswoman Amy Whiteside, there were no trains in the area at the time, no injuries and no damage to the tracks.

Whiteside said workers were repairing tracks near Furnace Brook Parkway when the beam fell across the tracks, which were shut down, and a parallel set that was in use. Power was shut off from JFK to Quincy Center while the beam was removed, she added.

Whiteside said the MBTA ran shuttle buses from JFK to Quincy Center, and all Braintree-bound trains were diverted to Ashmont station.

Quincy Hospital To Open Cardiac Rehabilitation Program

Quincy Hospital is opening a Cardiac Rehabilitation Program in early November that complements the range of cardiac services at the hospital.

The program is designed to help cardiac patients improve their cardiovascular fitness through both exercise and education.

The Cardiac Rehabilitation program includes a personal plan to enhance a patient's physical function and an educational program to help modify behavior and reduce coronary risk factors. The Rehabilitation Team utilizes state-of-the-art equipment and closely monitors the patient, and confers with the patient's personal physician regarding progress.

Anyone with coronary artery disease who has experienced heart attack, angina, or heart surgery is eligible and can benefit from the program. Approval from a physician is required for registration in the program, and since Cardiac Rehabilitation is considered a basic health insurance benefit, the cost of the program is covered by most insurance providers.

The Cardiac Rehabilitation facility offers a wide variety of exercise equipment including treadmills, stationary bicycles, arm ergometers, rowing machines, stair climbers and weights. Education and behavior modification are key elements of the program. Class offerings include diet modification, medication management, smoking cessation and individualized risk factor counseling.

The Cardiac Rehabilitation Program allows Quincy Hospital to provide an important new service to the community and improve patient care. To find out more about the program, call (617) 376-5580.

MWRA Transports One Million Construction Workers By Ferry

The Massachusetts Water Resource Authority (MWRA) announces it has successfully transported 1,000,000 construction workers to and from Deer Island via its water ferry system with terminals at Marina Bay in Quincy and Rowe's Wharf in downtown Boston.

"MWRA has kept a lot of traffic off the Central Artery and the streets of East Boston, Revere and, most importantly, Winthrop, where the roads leading to Deer Island are incapable of handling any more traffic," said MWRA Executive Director Douglas B. MacDonald. "Our water transportation system was designed to limit impacts on residents and hasten the construction of the $3.5 billion Boston Harbor project."

The millionth rider, Nicola Gangemi, a member of Local 22 Laborer's Union and an employee of Seagol/JFW, received a framed photo of the Deer Island construction site. Gangemi, 59, is a West Roxbury resident and has been using the water ferry for five years.

The transportation system began operating in June, 1990 to support the construction of the new Boston Harbor Treatment Plant on Deer Island. During peak construction, nearly 1,600 workers commuted daily by ferry from Marina Bay to Rowe's Wharf.

In addition to personnel, project vehicles, equipment, supplies and bulk materials travel by barge to Deer Island from the Fore River staging area in Quincy. Since the start of the project, the MWRA has barged nearly 158,000 trucks to the construction site.

While the water transportation system's greatest enemy is the weather, the system has been cancelled only a few times since it began operation. According to MWRA's agreement with the Town of Winthrop, 50 percent of the workers travel by water, while the other 50 percent commute via bus from Suffolk Downs in Revere.

CHRISTINE CEDRONE IS THE ONLY SCHOOL COMMITTEE CANDIDATE TO GRADUATE FROM THE QUINCY SCHOOL SYSTEM.

Paid for by The Cedrone Committee,
99 South Walnut Street, 479-2217
Campaign Manager, Vinny J. Scarnici; Treasurer, Mary Cedrone

CHRISTINE CEDRONE ran for School Committee two years ago and won by eight votes. After a tedious 41-hour recount resulting in a tie, the seat was awarded to her opponent. Since then she has been extremely active in many aspects of the City of Quincy. She is the Vice Chairperson of the Quincy Housing Authority's Board of Commissioners, former Vice President and Board Member of the Ward IV Neighborhood Association, an active member of the Ward IV Neighborhood Association, a regular participant in the annual Cleaner/Greener activities, a participant in the Quincy Serve-A-Thon, and a regular spectator at ALL school committee meetings.

CHRISTINE CEDRONE is aware of the issues that face our young people and our school system. As a graduate of the Quincy Public Schools, and a cum laude graduate of Suffolk University, she understands the barriers that are apparent and intends to repair them. She believes we need a generation that can do the job right, be responsible for their actions, and feel a sense of pride in their work. CHRISTINE CEDRONE feels that every profession is important and children need to understand that you do not need to be a doctor or lawyer to be respected. You have to be yourself and be proficient at what you do. The students of the Quincy Public Schools need to realize that they can reach for the stars and they can be anything they put their minds to. CHRISTINE CEDRONE does not feel that a school system should be a place to parent, but feels that without proper guidance, a student can miss out on his/her dreams and talents will be lost.

CHRISTINE CEDRONE needs your support in order to help our young people. Anything you can do to help elect her to the Quincy School Committee will be greatly appreciated. Please remember to vote for CHRISTINE CEDRONE for School Committee on November 7th.

Thank you for your support.

Civil Service Fire Examination April 27

Rep. Michael Bellotti announces that the next civil service examination for those wishing to be municipal fire fighters will take place April 27, 1996.

Individuals interested in taking the test must submit an application to the Massachusetts Department of Personnel and Administration by Jan. 26, 1996.

"Fire fighting is a profession which has rightfully earned the respect of one and all. An extremely challenging and rewarding career awaits those community-conscious individuals who respond to their first alarm by coming forward to take this test," said Bellotti.

The exam has two parts, a written section and a physical performance test. Applicants must take and pass both parts of the exam to be included on eligible lists for Massachusetts cities and towns.

According to Bellotti, a candidate must be between the ages of 19 and 32 as of Jan. 26. Some municipalities, however, do allow applicants over the age of 32 so long as they pass both sections of the test and meet certain medical and physical standards. A valid driver's license may also be required by some departments and only non-smokers will be accepted.

To secure an application, Bellotti said interested parties can visit the Massachusetts Department of Personnel and Administration at One Ashburton Place in Boston

Monday through Friday between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. As a service to those who cannot easily travel to this site during business hours, Bellotti will mail an application to them.

To obtain an application by mail, write to Rep. Bellotti, State House, Boston, MA 02133.

A First For Massachusetts 6,000 Youngsters Expected To Participate In Kids' Vote

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Nearly 6,000 local youngsters are expected to "vote" in Quincy's inaugural Kids' Vote next Tuesday, and, although their choices will not count officially, it will indirectly have some impact on the adult election.

"I think more adults will definitely vote because the kids will bring them to the polls. The kids will encourage their parents to vote," said local Kids' Vote Project Coordinator Harold Crowley.

"There's bound to be an increase (in the adult turnout because of Kids' Vote.) I think it will be at least three percent higher for the adult vote. It could go as high as 9 or 10 percent because of the Kids' Vote program. That's been shown in communities outside of Massachusetts," Crowley said.

City Clerk Joseph Shea, who expects 50 percent of the adult voters in Quincy to go to the polls, agreed with the Kids' Vote impact.

"I think Kids' Vote will increase the (adult) turnout by five to eight percent. I think it will help because some young people will encourage their parents to vote and some of these parents may not have been as diligent in voting as in the past," Shea said.

One indication of the Kids' Vote influence on the adults was demonstrated during voter registration over the last seven weeks. To participate in Kids Vote, youngsters had to register at their schools. Sometimes, the child who registered was accompanied by a parent who was not registered. In that particular instance, adults were able to register to vote at the same time their kids did.

Since early September, Shea said 786 adults registered to vote, of which 90 percent (or 707) came directly from the Kids' Vote registration sessions.

"I had very few people register at the counter (in City Hall). They were at the schools," Shea said.

Quincy is the first community in Massachusetts to experiment with Kids' Vote. The non-partisan, non-profit, grass-roots program is designed to give young people actual experience in the election process by casting ballots alongside their parents in real national, state and local elections.

Crowley said 9,915 Quincy school children have registered to vote for next Tuesday's municipal election. He predicts 60 percent, or 5,949 youngsters, will cast ballots for their same candidates and offices that their parents will: mayor, city councillor at-large, ward councillor and school committee.

Nearly 100 percent of the Quincy elementary school children registered while the junior high and high school figure is approximately 85 percent, Crowley said. In addition to the city's 15 public schools, students at four local parochial schools, Sacred Heart, St. Ann, St. Mary's and St. Joseph's School as well as the Woodward School will participate.

The voting procedure for children will simulate the adult process, Crowley said.

"The kids will go to the same polls as the adults, with their parents hopefully," Crowley said. "They'll be checked in and their name will be listed on voter list. They will be given a punch card ballot and vote."

One difference is the ballot. The kids will have ballots with photos of the candidates.

"There will be separate ballot boxes for the youngsters. After they vote, they will each get a sticker indicating they voted," Crowley said.

After the polls close at 8 p.m., the Kids' Vote ballots will be counted in the same manner as the adult votes. A separate vote tabulator machine manned by volunteers at City Hall will be used to count the kids' votes.

"The adult results and the Kids' Vote results will alternate. Adult votes will be counted first, the kid's votes second," Crowley said, adding the results will be announced at City Hall.

Because of Kids' Vote, Shea said he expects the official adult election results to be counted by 11 p.m.

"It will be held up by the Kids' Vote a little but we should be done by 11 p.m.," he said.

Because Quincy is the pilot community for the Kids' Vote program in Massachusetts, Marilyn Evans, the national president of Kids' Vote USA, will be in the city next Tuesday observing the election.

"We're very pleased she's chosen to come here," Crowley said. "She has gone to 23 other locations (throughout the country). She's very excited about the way the election is being conducted in Quincy."

"It's very close to how an election should be run."

Crowley thanked the volunteers and businesses who have contributed to the program.

"This would not have worked without all the volunteers. I'm really indebted to the volunteers and to the businesses who have helped."

"There are a lot of objectives and projects that we have out there in the city," he said. "I feel we ought to complete those."

Sheets was a candidate in 1978 in the then 11th Congressional District when incumbent James A. Burke retired. But Brian Donnelly, running out of Dorchester, took the seat. He is now ambassador to Trinidad.

Sheets said he has always dreamed of going to Congress.

"But," he said, "I don't think Congress is the same place it used to be. The Democrats can't accomplish there what they used to."

Sheets said, however, that he would not rule out a future run.

"I won't close out that option, obviously," he said. "You shouldn't close the door on any future possibilities."

State Rep. Michael Bellotti who has also been mentioned as a possible candidate said: "I received some calls on it but I'm not running."

Bellotti, whose father, Frank, is a former lieutenant governor and attorney general, said "it's definitely an option somewhere down the line."

"But," he added, "the bottom line is that I'm very happy where I am. I feel privileged to serve Quincy as a state representative."

Speculation that Studds would not seek re-election to a 13th term had circulated in Washington this past summer.

Word was that Studds who had a lot of political clout in Washington but lost it in the Republican-controlled Congress had become frustrated and wanted out.

Studds was stripped of his chairmanship of the Maritime and Fisheries Committee and then the committee itself was eliminated by the Republicans.

Studds lives in Cohasset where another potential candidate, Michael Kennedy, brother of Congressman Joseph Kennedy and nephew of Senator Edward Kennedy resides.

Kennedy, who managed his uncle's re-election campaign last year, is president of Citizens Energy Corp. and reportedly is considering a run. He is on a business trip to California and Africa and won't make a decision until he returns.

The Kennedy name, however, apparently doesn't frighten Delahunt who said he will stay in the race even if Kennedy does get in.

Harold said a candidate for Congress must raise more than $1 million to finance a serious campaign. He said Studds raised more than that when Harold challenged Studds in 1992.

"These contests are not political contests anymore," he said. "They're fund-raising contests."

Among the other candidates for the seat are

Massachusetts House Republican leader Edward Teague of Yarmouth, who announced his candidacy over the weekend, and Studds' 1994 GOP opponent, broker Keith Hemeon of Sandwich.

Other Republicans considering running include John Lakian of Woods Hole, who ran for U.S. Senate last year, and state Rep. Robert Hedlund of Weymouth.

Other Democrats mulling a run include Philip Johnston of Marshfield, the regional U.S. Health and Human Services administrator; state Sen. Therese Murray of Plymouth and state Rep. Eric Turkington of Falmouth.

LYONS vs. SHEETS FOR MAYOR

At the conclusion of the mayoral candidates' forum conducted by the Quincy Cablevision on Oct. 16, 1995, Mayor Sheets finally agreed to meet and discuss with us some questionable civic issues.

Fifteen days later, today Oct. 31, at 7 a.m., I received a call telling me the mayor cancelled our 9 a.m. meeting, and would contact me later.

Questions to be discussed—and answered:

Linkage and building permit fees amounting to over $100,000—benefiting certain individuals, and contractors were waived by the mayor's office. Why?

How and when is the mayor going to justify his actions?

When is he going to return these city-owned funds to the treasurer's office?

On May 18, 1993 a demand for payment of a $50,000 performance bond, issued in 1987, to the city, when the city found the money no longer exists.

What has the city done to collect this ($50,000) fifty thousand dollars?

Why were certain affordable housing unit buildings singled out and denied their "grandfather" rights, and instructed by the D.P.W. to get their own dumpsters and trash contractor, claiming they were in violation of the trash collection contract, that the city recently changed?

Since when was the law changed that used to protect its citizens and their property from unlawful seizure?

Why should these victims of discrimination now pay from $600.00 to $10,000.00 a year for their trash pick-up, which used to be included in their taxes?

Why didn't the city publish their deceitful action?

Mayor Sheets repeatedly claimed saving millions of dollars on city employees' health insurance and the trash contract.

Didn't he eliminate certain health benefits formerly included in their policy?

Are these the kind of issues he brags about when he says that he brought economic stability and improved the quality of life in the city?

Quincy Resident Graduates From Guiding Eyes For The Blind

Helen Daley of Quincy, and her guide dog Gretchen recently graduated from Guiding Eyes for the Blind, guide dog schools in Yorktown Heights, N.Y.

After a one-month residential class the pair graduated. This is Daley's third Guiding Eye dog and she is excited about her increased mobility and independence. Daley enjoys spending time with her eight children and ten grandchildren. She is also a member of a blind singing group called "The Eyeopeners", who perform at hospitals and nursing homes.

The Pech family of Pamona, N.Y., volunteer puppy raisers for Guiding Eyes for the Blind, raised Gretchen for one year before she was returned to the school for professional training. "The puppy raising program is a commitment of love, time and energy. It's definitely worthwhile," said Mary Pech.

It takes approximately $25,000 to raise, train and pair a Guiding Eyes dog with a blind partner, and there is not cost to the recipient. Funding comes

Quincy Battles Silver Lake Friday

Late Falmouth TDs Stun Presidents, 35-18

By KERRY BYRNE

The Quincy High School football team stood toe to toe with undefeated Falmouth and traded blows for three quarters.

With the Clippers (6-0-1) holding a tenuous 21-18 lead in the fourth quarter, Falmouth running back Jason Gourdine stunned the Presidents with a 93-yard scoring run. Four minutes later John Glover delivered the knockout punch as he raced for a 37-yard score (his third of the game) through the heart of the Quincy (2-5) defense.

Glover's TD finalized the Clippers 35-18 win Friday night against the underdog Quincy team.

Next on the docket for the Presidents is an early (5 p.m.) game Friday at Silver Lake (2-5). The Lakers are coming off a 26-21 win over North Quincy. Their other victory was against Duxbury during the first week of the season. They will rely on the offensive skills of running back Tucker Apple to carry the load.

Against Falmouth it was Glover's three TDs at key moments which proved the Presidents downfall. Quincy was trailing 7-6 late in the first half and had just stuffed the Clippers on three straight plays highlighted by a sack of quarterback Chad Amaral by Pete Kolson and Jake Drohan.

Falmouth punted but the ball was mishandled. The Clippers recovered at the Quincy 46 with seven seconds left in the half. On the next play Amaral stepped back and fired a dart to Glover who caught the ball on the fly at the goal line as time expired. Tom Bushy's kick gave the Clippers a 14-6 lead.

"I'm going to lose whatever hair I have left," said Presidents coach Peter Chella of the plays that led to his team's defeat. "We had 'em tonight. We played with emotion and we played tough. But those big plays killed us. In the fourth quarter we had them pinned at the 7 and the kid goes a thousand yards for a score. And that play at the end of the half devastated us."

The Presidents fought back with a solid 10-play, 63-yard drive for a score to open what became a tug-of-war in the second half. Kevin Connolly brought the ball in from 10 yards. The try for two failed, leaving the score at 14-12.

On the next series Glover answered with a 34-yard scoring sprint through an alley up the left side-line.

With the score 21-12, Connolly brought the Presidents to within three with a 7-yard TD run which capped the most impressive drive by either team: 12 plays, 80 yards, seven and a half minutes.

That would be it for Quincy as the Clippers scored the two late TDs to put the game away.

Falmouth's Anthony DeVito punched in the game's first TD on the opening drive with a 6-yard run.

Quincy quarterback Mark Glynn notched his team's first score late in the first quarter with a 1-yard dive behind center and left guard. Glynn had one of the best all-around games of his career as he accounted for over half of Quincy's 269 yards of total offense.

The junior QB has shown improved decision-making skills in running Quincy's option package. He picked up 77 yards rushing on seven carries, including a 58-yard run which is their longest play from scrimmage this season. Glynn also completed six of nine passes for 85 yards.

Senior Bill Dunn carried eight times for 51 yards and caught three passes for 36 yards. Backfield mate Connolly rushed for 63 yards and two scores. Mike Sheffer hauled in two passes for 44 yards.

The offensive line of Jason Little, Drohan, Kolson, Dan Nichol, Greg Fernald, Don McCarthy and tight end Jon Ryan did a superb job opening holes as the Presidents punted only once against a very strong defensive squad.

Defensively, Drohan had one of his finest games of the season. Joining him with heavy hits on the defensive line were Nichol and Scott MacPherson. The linebacking crew of Mike Russo, Bobby Walsh, Dunn and Ryan helped keep the Clippers from mounting any sustained drives. Walsh and Russo combined for the defensive play of the game when they belted Glover with a 13-yard loss.

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL'S Marissa Ross (No. 4) beats North Quincy's Annie Bergen to the ball in Monday's clash between the crosstown rivals.

NQ Girls Edge Quincy For Season Sweep

The North Quincy High School girls soccer team closed the season with a 2-1 win over Quincy Monday for a sweep of the season series between the arch-rivals.

The game was originally scheduled for Saturday afternoon at Veterans' Memorial Stadium but was cancelled due to rain and played at North Quincy's Teal Field.

The Red Raiders (7-9-1) entered the game as the heavy favorite but it was Quincy (2-15-1) which controlled play in the first half. Promising freshman star Leanne Martin put the Presidents on top with a first-half tally.

Quincy held the lead through the early stages of the second half before the Red Raiders started applying heavy pressure in the Presidents end.

It looked like North would tie the game when Kristen Kelley booted a well-placed corner kick which found the head of Kelly Keegan. But Keegan's hard header was ripped out of the air by Quincy keeper Mary Kelly who fought for good position then extended herself to stop the high scoring bid.

The Red Raiders managed the equalizer when Annie Bergen lofted a pass over the outstretched hands of Kelly and onto the foot of Betsy Stone who stood unmarked just a couple of yards from the net. Stone quickly converted to knot the game at 1-1.

Junior midfielder Hillary O'Donoghue netted the game-winner when she fired a blast from the top left corner of the goal area into the far side of the net.

"We're a different team now," said NQ coach Paul Gregoli. "We're much better than we were eight weeks ago. Our seniors went through a lot in their four years here and they really stepped it up this year." The Raiders won only one game last season.

The Presidents fought hard in an effort to tie the game. Senior midfielder Kelly Howard had a great scoring bid late in the game. Gaining control of the ball at midfield, she battled through a host of North Quincy defenders then fought for position just inside the goal area. As she was marked aggressively, she fired a bullet that just missed wide right.

"We looked together as a team and we came together well both offensively and defensively," said Quincy coach Sonya Herring. "We had some good performances and I thought the girls, particularly Janet Kane, Kelly Howard and Mary Kelly, played to the best of their abilities."

Red Raiders Kelley and Stone attempted to ice the game with a third goal but they were broken up by the strong goaltending of Mary Kelly and the defensive work of Jessica DiBona.

Quincy seniors Kelly, Howard, Kane, Andrea Gill and Erin Carterman, and NQ seniors Bergen, Kelley, Keegan, Ann Parisi, Liz Fitzpatrick, Jessie Ceurvels and Sara Mulvey each played in their final high school soccer game.

Quincy, NQ Boys Battle To 1-1 Tie

The Quincy and North Quincy boys soccer teams battled to a 1-1 stalemate Monday at Varsity Field.

The game was originally scheduled for Saturday night at Veterans' Memorial Stadium but was cancelled due to foul weather.

Promising Quincy freshman Mike Shore put his club on top early in the first half when his corner kick found its way into the net.

The two club's battled in a back and forth affair throughout the first half. Near intermission, Red Raiders senior co-captain Pete Johnson gained control of the ball briefly in the penalty area and was taken down hard by the Presidents defense.

Johnson converted the penalty kick with a hard shot that found the top right corner of the net beyond the reach of Quincy keeper Jared Downey.

Henry Hreibe and junior John Tormey. Senior Joe Tucker came up with a series of scoring bids but was unable to capitalize.

The Red Raiders were sparked by the offensive play of Chris Morris, Billy Barron and Chris Erler and the defensive work of senior stopper Dan Stone.

"We can't be down on ourselves for lack of effort," said Scanlan. The seniors playing in their final game were NQ's Johnson, Morris, Towne, Stone, Ken Hannaford, George Regas, Matt Baldock and Liam Lam and Quincy's Hreibe, Tucker and Martin.

The Presidents boast a wealth of young returning talent which should help bolster the team in the near future. "We finally got kids coming through the program," said Austin. "We had 16 freshman on the team. Hopefully we've turned the corner."

The pressured Presidents defense came up big thanks to the play of seniors Mike Martin and

Killer Bees Swarm Parkway

The Quincy Youth Hockey Mite B team, the Killer Bees, lived up to their name with a 9-0 demolition of Parkway.

Leading the swarming Killer Bees attack were Steve Maggio, Matt Jones and Rose Devlin with two goals each.

Justin (The Mighty) Thorley, Chris Tierney and Paul Fasoli inflicted single stings on the Parkway goalie. With two assists each were Jessica Harrington, Paul Noonan, Jarrod Swierk and Maggio. Nick Puopolo, Evan Harrington, Pat Devlin, Rose Devlin and Jones set up one goal each.

Bee keeper Ryan Barter was flawless as he kept his hive free of intruders.

Raiders Host B-R Friday Night

North Quincy Digs Own Grave In 26-21 Loss

The North Quincy Red Raiders got an early start on Halloween when they dug their own grave in a 26-21 loss to Old Colony League opponent Silver Lake Friday night.

The football loss to the host Lakers was surprising to say the least. But Silver Lake (2-5) capitalized on a couple of early turnovers and three successfully executed inside kicks (perhaps a carry over from the school's highly successful soccer program) which kept the Red Raiders (2-5) off balance and led to an early 20-0 deficit for the visitors.

North Quincy must now contend with perennial Old Colony League power Bridgewater-Raynham (4-2-1). The Trojans are reeling however following a 35-7 thrashing at the hands of Weymouth on Sunday.

North Quincy had run only one offensive play but found themselves down 14-0 in the first quarter as running back Matt Guevermont twice found the end zone. It became a 20-0 ball game when lanky (6 feet, 6 inches) junior quarterback Jon Bond threw a 43-yard scoring strike to Michael Doyle.

"We didn't even get off the bus and we were down 20-0," said North Quincy coach Ken McPhee. "But then we settled down and played some good football. We had just dug a hole too deep and couldn't bounce out of it."

The Red Raiders finally got on the board late in the half when fullback Tim Zaniboni ended a long drive with a 12-yard jaunt. The extra point failed.

It looked like they would come storming back and take control of the game when Sean Johnson came out in the second half and raced 37 yards for a touchdown. Quarterback J.R. Rendle threw to Tom Coughlin for the two-point conversion to make the score 20-14.

Just when it appeared that North Quincy had come back to life, Guevermont answered the challenge with his third scoring run to give the Lakers a 26-14 lead.

Rendle closed the scoring with a 7-yard touchdown pass to Charlie Plaskasovitis. Jim Finn added the extra point.

Rendle had one of his best stretches of the season as he attempted to lead the Red Raiders in the comeback effort. At one point he connected on seven consecutive passes, including the score.

Among Rendle's leading targets were Coughlin and Matt Kiely. Kiely has one of his best receiving days with four catches. Rendle threw for 164 yards.

The North Quincy defense was sparked by the tough defensive line play of co-captain Paul Picciano and the solid work in the secondary by Jim Finn.

Manets Roll In QYFL Title Game

The Houghs Neck Manets rolled past the West Quincy Elks, 30-0, Sunday to claim the Quincy Youth Football League championship.

Both teams ended with 5-2 records. Both West Quincy's losses came against the Manets. They were shut out, 8-0, in the most recent regular season meeting between the two. Houghs Neck lost once to the Elks and once to the Quincy Point Panthers.

Manets quarterback Dan Kelly sparked the offensive fireworks with an array of spectacular passes. Mike Sullivan caught the first of his two touchdown receptions when he outjumped a pack of Elks defenders for the game's opening score. Kelly ran for the two-point conversion.

Sullivan was on the receiving end of a 20-yard pass from Kelly and John Barrieau crashed in for the conversion as the Manets took a 16-0 lead into halftime.

In the second half, Mike Chenette, who played a solid two-way game, raced for a 50-yard score. Justin Curran changed in for the conversion as Houghs Neck mounted a 24-0 advantage. Justin Analowski closed the scoring with a 71-yard scoring romp.

Offensive center and defensive captain Nick DiStasi played an outstanding game at his outside linebacker position. Also playing superb football games were Tim Pezzulo, Brian Nolan and John Alves.

Cross-Country

Sawan Outruns Duggan But NQ Sweeps Quincy

Although the Old Colony League title was out of reach, the Quincy-North Quincy cross country meet followed suit with other great encounters between the two schools.

The event was distinguished by a number of great performances and a big-time atmosphere as the Red Raiders took both the boys and girls meets. The North boys won, 19-40, while the girls took a 28-31 decision in what was a mild upset.

Although the Presidents displayed outstanding talent, superior depth for the Red Raiders was the decisive factor.

The girls race was a seven-person battle over the first mile before Quincy's Liz Sawan and North Quincy's Kelly Duggan emerged from the pack.

Through the length of the 3.1 mile NQ course, Sawan gazed back to see the ever-present Duggan bearing down. At two miles they were still and arm's length apart but Sawan's speed proved too much for Duggan to overcome. Sawan crossed the finish line at 20:47, just nine seconds off the course record.

Duggan's 21:17 tied for eighth best ever along with former NQ great Suzanne Lewis who now runs for Brown University.

Other Red Raiders scorers were Colleen Cotter (fifth), Lauren Molloy (sixth), Diane Jordan (seventh), Diane McGunigle (eighth), Michelle Kentzel (ninth) and Carrie Jarvie (10th).

Quincy's Sawan was joined in the scoring column by Julie Dunn (third), Kathryn Lencki (fourth), Maryann Ashworth (11th) and Rachel Picard (12th).

The Presidents ended at 4-4 while the Raiders were 3-5.

In the boys meet, NQ took five of the top six spots with junior Matt Quinn winning his first race as a Red Raider.

The crowd-pleaser was ever-improving Quincy freshman phenom John Sorenson who placed second. Sorenson displayed a torrid finishing kick to overtake four Red Raiders and nearly steal the race from Quinn.

Rounding out the top six were NQ's senior captain Kevin McCue (third), Bryan Linskey (fourth), Jimmy Wan (fifth) and Joe Linskey (sixth). Senior captain Brian O'Donnell placed eighth.

Quincy's Hubert Lam was seventh while Henry Wan and John Duffy took ninth and 10th.

The Red Raiders ended the season at 2-6 while the Presidents finished at 1-7.

The teams ran Tuesday (Oct. 31) in the Old Colony League championships at Wompatuck State Park in Hingham. They will race Saturday in the State Coaches Meet at Franklin Park.

Cheering, JV Jamboree Highlight Championship Sunday

The annual cheerleading competition and an inaugural junior varsity jamboree were part of the Quincy Youth Football League's Championship Sunday festivities.

The North Quincy Apaches cheerleaders won their competition with 218 points as determined by a crew of National Cheerleading Association judges. They narrowly edged the Quincy Point Panthers squad which earned 216 points.

The competition was based on points in origiinality, dance, partner stunts and pyramids, voice and showmanship categories. Routines were held to a strict four-minute time limit.

Cheering for the Apaches were tri-captains Caitlin Powers, Ashley Murphy and Kim Locorazza with Janelle Jimenez, Caitlin O'Donnell, Melynda Bartoloni, Stephanie Holland, Megan Ginty, Samantha Pierce, Tammy Shea, Liz Furlong, Casey Dooley and Shauna Burnes.

Cheering for the Panthers were captain Jamie McCarthy, co-captains Kristen Perry and Elizabeth Dunlea, with Tiffany McAdam, Maeve Glynn, Joanna Ford, Kristen Brogna, Colleen Reid, Diana Amo, Caitlyn Roberts, Katelyn Sullivan and Kerry Eaton.

The junior varsity jamboree was held for the first time and helped make for a successful afternoon. Each of the four JV squads played a 10-minute, half-field game against all three opponents.

The Quincy Youth Hockey Squirt B's, sponsored by Continental Cable, beat Canton, 4-2, at Hyde Park.

Three first-period goals provided the winning margin.

Quincy's Ryan Tobin scored first off a pass from Brendan Craig. Rob Mooney then made a fantastic feed to Pat Clifford who spanked in the second goal.

Late in the first period

Justin Swierk gave Quincy a 3-0 lead as he came screaming down the ice to tip one in after a pass from Josh Giordani.

Report Released On Mixed Housing Bill

State Sen. Michael Morrissey announces that a joint House and Senate conference committee has released its report on the long-standing issue of "mixed housing," or elderly and non-elderly persons with disabilities living together in public housing.

The bill, H5270/S1979, An Act Improving Housing Opportunities for Elders and Non-Elderly Persons with Disabilities, attempts to remedy the situation in a fair and equitable manner by establishing a priority system of 86.5 percent of public housing units reserved for the elderly and 13.5 percent for non-elderly/disabled persons.

Morrissey said through the bill, strict standards of admission to public housing are established. The legislation eliminates substance abuse as a qualifying disability for admission. Eviction procedures will be sped up by eliminating a tenant hearing at the housing authority level, thus allowing the housing authority to proceed directly to court, and those tenants engaged in criminal and/or violent behavior will be removed quickly.

"It does not, however, take away the rights of any law-abiding public housing tenant, nor does it mandate eviction," said Morrissey.

The legislation also provides $4 million in new rental vouchers in order for non-elderly/disabled people to afford private housing. The vouchers may be used by all younger people with disabilities regardless of whether or not they are now or were ever a client of the Department of Public Health.

"This is a important component to offer new housing options," said Morrissey.

"I have been a long-time supporter and co-sponsor of legislation restricting elderly housing only to the elderly," he added. "For the last several years, I have proposed similar legislation consisting of a priority system of 90 percent of the housing units for the elderly and 10 percent for non-elderly/disabled residents."

Gov. William Weld has vetoed the legislation each year on the grounds that the percentage restrictions may be unconstitutional.

"I do not believe elderly citizens should be held prisoner inside their homes due to a few troublesome neighbors," said Morrissey. "We all have the right to live in a decent environment in which we will feel safe and comfortable and I will continue to support and sponsor legislation that provides such an environment."

The bill is currently awaiting final acceptance and action in the Senate, which is also anticipating taking action on issues such as the Massachusetts Megaplex and casino gambling as the session comes to a close.

Your Child: Safe At Home?

(NAPS)—Parents concerned about the safety of their children inside the home, don't overlook what's downstairs in the basement—a water heater that could explode if it isn't properly maintained.

Boiler and pressure vessel safety is equally important at many other places you and your children go each day—school, house of worship, day care center, restaurants, office buildings. Even the helium tank used for blowing up balloons at your child's birthday party could pose a safety hazard, if not properly maintained and inspected.

Regular inspections and state safety laws that are enforced can help prevent boiler and pressure vessel accidents—accidents that can cause property loss, injury, even death.

For the name of the chief boiler inspector in your area, contact The National Board's Communications Department at 1055 Crupper Avenue, Columbus, Ohio 43229-1183 or call 614-888-8320.

A Thought For The Week

America is the "Land of the Free;" "Home of the Brave;" America is "God's Country" with its bountiful gifts from the gardens, with its poetic scenery, with its radiant warmth in summer, and its arctic temperatures in winter. God created the earth, and all of mankind reaps its benefits and its beauty. Being Americans we reap more of the benefits than any other people on earth. Being Americans we have and give more than any other. Being Americans we have the freedom to go where we wish, say what we think and worship where we want.

There are many occasions during the year which occupy our time and demand a great deal of attention; one of those times is nearly upon us - ELECTION DAY - a day in which we can take a few precious moments from our daily routine and exercise one of our FREEDOMS - THE FREEDOM TO VOTE. Each and every American can and should take the few moments to PROTECT and ASSURE our freedoms will remain intact for our children and for their children.

REMEMBER POLITICAL OPINIONS ARE ONLY OPINIONS UNLESS YOU VOTE.

Council, School Races Highlight Election

Cheney are seeking re-election. Joining them in the race are outgoing Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien and former councillor and state Senator Paul Harold. The three top vote getters will win councillor-at-large seats.

Cahill is seeking his fifth term. Cheney, a Ward 1 councillor for five years before becoming a councillor-at-large, is seeking his fourth at-large term.

Chretien is vacating his Ward 3 seat after four terms to run for councillor-at-large. Harold was elected city councillor in 1977 but served only one term because he was elected state senator in 1978. He is attempting a return to local politics after losing a bid for Congress in 1992 to veteran Cong. Gerry Studds.

Five of the city's six ward council seats are contested, highlighted by open seats in Wards 2, 3 and 5. Only Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers is unopposed.

In Ward 1, incumbent councillor Peter Kolson is challenged by Joseph Kasparian, a retired police officer. Kolson, of 215 Palmer St., is seeking his fourth term. Kasparian, of 42 Rhude St., is making his first run for elective office.

In Ward 2, incumbent Ted DeCristofaro is stepping down after 14 years as councillor. Aiming to fill the seat are outgoing School Committeeman Dan Raymondi and political newcomer Mark Roberts. Raymondi, of 88 Elm St., was Ward 2 councillor from 1976 to 1981. Roberts, an attorney, lives at 30 Curtis Ave.

In Ward 3, two first-time candidates are seeking the seat being vacated by Chretien. Stephen Doherty, 36, of 206 Beale St. and Patrick McDermott, 25, of 146 Taylor St.

Doherty is an administrative recording clerk for the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds. McDermott is a legislative aide for state Sen. Michael Morrissey.

In Ward 4, incumbent Tom Fabrizio, a case worker for the Department of Social Services, is seeking his fourth term. He faces a tough challenge from Michael D'Amico, 20, of 602 Willard St., who topped the September preliminary election.

D'Amico, a student at Stonehill College, is making his second bid for the seat. In 1993, Fabrizio turned aside D'Amico who made an impressive political debut.

Political history will be made regardless of the outcome in the Ward 4 race. If Fabrizio wins, he would be the first incumbent in recent history to lose a preliminary election but win the final. If D'Amico wins, he would become the youngest person to be elected councillor.

In Ward 5, incumbent Charles Phelan Jr. is retiring. Seeking the seat are School Committeeman Stephen Durkin, who topped the four-candidate preliminary election, and political newcomer Steven Reilly, 37, of 287 Beach St.

Durkin is an attorney. Reilly is a lieutenant with the Norfolk County Sheriff's Department.

There will also be at least two new school committee members elected next Tuesday. Six candidates are vying for three four-year seats, two of which are being vacated by incumbents Raymondi and Durkin. A two-year seat will also be filled.

Seeking four-year seats are:

•Sean Barry, 184 Marlboro St., public affairs director for Quincy College. Barry was named to the School Committee by a joint convention of the City Council and School Committee after a recount deadlock the outcome of the 1993 election. He is vacating his two-year seat and seeking a four-year term on the committee.

•Incumbent Linda Stice, 74 Winthrop Ave., executive director of the Mayor's Commission on the Family. She is seeking her second four-year term.

•Christine Cedrone, 29 Doble St., a risk management consultant for Robert M. Curry & Associates, Boston. She tied Barry in the 1993 election but was passed over by the joint convention which appointed Barry.

•First-time candidate Sal Giarratani, 184 Atlantic St., a police officer for the state Department of Mental Health.

•Michael Jovanovic, 62 Town Hill St., director of Community Real Estate Co. He has made prior bids for school committee.

•Ronald McCarthy, 72 Norton Rd., vice principal of Middleboro High School. He also sought a seat in 1993.

Former Mayor Francis McCauley will make a triumphant return to local politics when he is elected to the two-year seat on the School Committee. McCauley, who left the mayor's office after eight years in 1989, is unopposed for the seat.

Dear Voter,

Respectfully, I ask that you make me, Larry Chretien, one of your three votes for councilor-at-large.

My wife Karen and I own a home and look forward to raising a family. Like you, we're concerned about the quality of our schools, the value of our property, crime, taxes, the cleanliness of the city, and many other things. Although not every problem we have can be solved by government, good government is needed now more than ever.

When you vote, please remember my record, qualifications, and what I've said during this campaign. If you have any questions, please feel free to call me at home, 472-1400. I would be happy to speak with you.

Sincerely,

Larry Chretien

Quincy voters elected five new city councillors Tuesday—the largest turnover in the council in 22 years.

One of the five, 20-year-old Michael D'Amico unseated Thomas Fabrizio in Ward 4 by a narrow 84 votes to become the youngest ever elected to the council in the city's history. D'Amico's vote was 1,886 to Fabrizio's 1,802.

At press time Fabrizio had not indicated whether he might seek a recount.

Paul Harold, former state senator and councillor, came back to the council after a 16-year absence with a pile-driving 12,244 vote to easily top the at-large field.

His vote was nearly 2,000 (1,998) more than second place winner Tim Cahill who had been the top-gun in the at-large field in the last three elections.

City Council President Michael Cheney turned in a strong performance to hold his seat, running by Larry Chretien with whom observers had expected to be in a close battle with for the third at-large seat.

Cheney topped Chretien by a 1,311 vote margin—10,080 to 8,769. His vote was only 166 behind Cahill.

In a battle of newcomers—the closest of the day, Patrick McDermott edged Stephen Doherty by 73 votes to win the Ward 3 seat that Chretien had vacated to run at-large. McDermott's vote was 1,593 to Doherty's 1,520.

trailed 1,524 votes behind with 706.

Stephen Durkin took the Ward 5 seat with an impressive 2,083 to 1,097 vote win over newcomer Steven Reilly. Incumbent Charles Phelan decided not to seek re-election.

Durkin, like Raymond, gave up his School Committee seat to make the run in Ward 5.

Incumbent Peter Kolson

City Election, Kids' Vote Charts Pages 18, 19

At press time, Doherty had not indicated whether he would ask for a recount.

Two political veterans rolled to easy wins in Ward 2 and Ward 5.

Daniel Raymond put a 2,230 vote claim on the Ward 2 seat to succeed Ted DeCristofaro who is retiring after 14 years. Raymond's opponent, newcomer Mark Roberts had little trouble holding his Ward 1 seat, running up a 2,008 margin over challenger Joseph Kasparian Jr. Kolson's vote was 2,657 to Kasparian's 649.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, who was the only incumbent councillor unopposed, polled 2,133 votes against 442 blanks.

To no one's surprise,

Kids On Target With Election Winners

Quincy youngsters going to the polls Tuesday for the first time in the Kids Vote Program batted .1000 in the winners' circle.

Some 4,737 public, private and parochial school students from kindergarten through high school cast their own ballots and voted for all the winners.

Their vote turnout percentage was 47.78 percent compared to 45.15 percent for the adult voters.

The kids picked Mayor James Sheets and the three School Committee winners in order—Christine Cedrone, Linda Stice and Sean Barry.

They had the three City Council at-large winners, but in reverse order—Michael Cheney, Tim Cahill and Paul Harold.

They had every ward councillor winner: Peter Kolson (Ward 1), Daniel Raymond (Ward 2), Patrick McDermott (Ward 3), Michael D'Amico

Pay Raises Approved For Five City Unions

Pay raises for five of the city's unions were approved by the City Council Monday night.

Workers represented by the unions, including firefighters, school nurses, public works employees, library workers and mid-level City Hall employee, will receive an 11 percent raise over the next three years.

The council approved the raises without discussion.

Mayor James Sheets offered the raises, the largest since he first took office in 1990, in part because the city had a $5.7 million surplus at the end of Fiscal Year 1995 (June 30). Many union employees went without raises during the first two years of the Sheets administration, when budgets were tight.

Other unions, including those representing the police and school departments, are still negotiating with the city. Sheets could not be reached for comment at press time because of Election Day activities.

KATHLEEN MCCARTHY, age 10, a student at the Bernazzani Elementary School, makes her ballot choices in the city's Kids' Vote election Tuesday at the Quincy Lodge of Elks, the polling precinct for Ward 4 Precinct 3.

Search Committee Members Named 90 Apply For Quincy College Presidency

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Ninety people have applied for the position of permanent president of Quincy College.

In addition, 13 people have been named to a search committee that will narrow the pool of candidates down to a list of three to five finalists to be submitted to the college's Board of Governors.

Dr. Stephen Kenney, director of development and grant services at the college who is acting as coordinator of the presidential search process, said at press time he has received 90 applications from interested candidates. Deadline for applications was Friday, Nov. 3.

Dr. Kenney said he is unsure if any more applications will come to his office, but he added that only those postmarked Nov. 3 or earlier will be accepted.

He also declined to comment on whether any of the applicants is from Quincy College.

Board of Governors Chairman Daniel Raymond announced the names of the search committee members this week. They include:

- Five Board of Governors members: Atty. Theresa Lord, who will serve as committee chairperson, and John Farmer, Ronald Mariano, Atty. Matthew McDonnell, and Peter O'Neil. All are Quincy residents.

- Three college faculty members: Dr. Louise Graham of Hanover, Dr. Edward Kelly of Braintree and Paul White of Hingham.

- Mary Beth Gilmore of Milton, controller, a member of the college's senior staff.

- William Hall of Quincy, associate bursar, a member of the professional staff.

- Nancy Dyer of Weymouth, student representative.

- Stan Bernstein of Plymouth, a representative of the Plymouth Campus Council, a non-partisan group that advises the administration at the college's Plymouth campus.

- Former City Clerk John Gillis of Quincy, community representative.

The formula for the committee was developed on the advice of a private consultant who recently conducted an all-day workshop on the process of a successful search at the college. The Board of Governors has chosen to select a permanent president to succeed Interim President Linda Wilson, who announced earlier this year she will not seek an extension of her one-year contract which expires Jan. 1.

Raymond, who selected the 13 committee members, said he is grateful for their participation in the presidential search process.

"I appreciate the willingness of these individuals to participate in this search committee," he said. "It's going to take a considerable amount of time and effort on their part to come up with a list of three to five finalists."

Raymond said the search committee will cut the total pool of candidates in half before narrowing them down to groups of 18 to 20 and, later, eight to 10 semi-finalists. The latter group will be extensively interviewed over a two-to-three-day period before the names of three to five finalists are submitted to the Board of Governors for consideration, he added.

Raymond told The Quincy Sun in September he was hopeful the search committee could provide the board with the list of finalists by Dec. 15. He said this week that may not still be possible, although he is hopeful the list is submitted by the end of the year.

"But the most important aspect of this is that the committee members do their job properly," he said. "They have to take the time to do the job right."

$200,000 Appropriated For Police Foot Patrols

The City Council appropriated $200,000 for the continuation of police foot patrols in the city.

Police Chief Francis Mullen said the patrols are in Quincy Point and in the Southwest Quincy area.

The money was taken from the city's free cash (cash reserve) account.

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro expressed support of the foot patrols, saying they are a throwback to the old days of police work.

"It's almost getting back to when I was a kid,"

he said.

WHEN TO CALL ABOUT A COLD

Almost everyone gets a cold now and then, and some colds are worse than others. So how do you know when what feels like one whopper of a cold is actually something more serious, calling for medical attention?

In otherwise healthy individuals, doctors often recommend simple self-care measures (rest, plenty of fluids, pain relievers) unless further warning signs are present. Such symptoms include coughing up thick, discolored phlegm; thick yellow sinus drainage; or diarrhea or a temperature over 100 degrees that lasts more than two days. If you have a cold plus any of the above, it may be time to call the doctor. In the meantime, get plenty of fluids and rest, and limit the use of cold remedies whose drugs may conflict with each other. P.S. Colds are the cause of more needless visits to the doctor's office than any other single complaint.

Any condition which persists longer than a few days without improvement is worth a call to your family provider. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and I specialize in the treatment and prevention of heart disease. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Hours by appointment. We're here at 700 Congress St., in Quincy. Call me or Dr. Lisa Antonelli with questions at 472-2550 for an appointment. One More Time . . .

(Henry Bosworth decided to take the day off. (He doesn't get many). So he hopes you don't mind if he recycles this one—with a few additions.)

Things I wish I could see, do, or hear once more. (But not necessarily in this order.)

•Take in a movie at the Lincoln, Strand or Quincy Theater.

•Sit down to a 45-cent luncheon special at the Howard Johnson restaurant downstairs at the Granite Trust. (Now Bank of Boston, formerly South Shore Bank.)

•Plunk a nickel in the jukebox and get Glenn Miller, Tommy Dorsey, Harry James or Jimmy Dorsey with Bob Eberly and Helen O'Connell.

•Look at Munroe MacLean on one side and Jack Donahue on the other plotting strategy at the Quincy-North Quincy Thanksgiving Day football game.

•Hear former Mayor and Councillor Tom Burgin stand up and tell his colleagues: "It's time to fish or cut bait."

•Henry Prairie at Point Junior High School stressing: "Always give it (effort) that extra ounce."

•Percy Lane, punster, newspaper man and bachelor observing: "You don't have to be crazy to be a newspaper man, but it helps".... "Marriage is an institution, but who wants to live in an institution?"

•Dorothy Lamour, at our second meeting 10 years later, pulling me down beside her at the Latin Quarter and kidding: "C'mon now, you're not a cub reporter anymore."

•Ruth Gordon, calling from her apartment in New York City or her home on Martha's Vineyard excited about her latest movie or TV show and asking me to keep an eye on her birth certificate at City Hall.

•President-elect John Kennedy in his father, Joseph's, home in the Kennedy compound a few hours after his slim win over Richard Nixon pouring drinks for and chatting with the press. When asked to explain what he thought made the difference between victory and defeat, he replied: "He (Nixon) screwed around too long in the South." And confessing he was going to play some golf when he got to Florida. "But don't print that, they'll think I'm another Ike."

•Watch Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa walking through City Hall turning off unnecessary lights.

•Ride a street car from Quincy Point to Quincy Square—and for only a nickel.

•See City Clerk John Gillis in a crew cut.

•Buy a suit or sport coat from Ray Josephine at Remick's.

•Or a TV set from Remo and Pete DeNicola.

•And a big band album from Jason Feldman at Jason's.

•Walk up the runway at Fenway Park and see Jimmie Foxx, Bobby Doerr, Joe Cronin and Ted Williams take batting practice.

•Take a seat in the stands at Fore River Field and see Jay Desmond, Fran Desmond, Nick Malvesti, Clappy Wildridge, Joe Shapiro, etc. in action.

•Stop at the Quincy Arena to boo Ted Germaine or Tony Papalino.

•Get up at 4 a.m. for Quincy High School hockey practice at the Boston Arena. (I'm not sure about doing that again.)

Plus these additions:

•Hearing Jim McIntyre sounding you out with his familiar: "What do you think?"

•Enjoying the sense of humor of Dick Barry who one night as a city councillor proposed that historic Hancock Cemetery be taken for a parking lot. He was only kidding but he had pillars of the community in an uproar.

•Councillor Edna Austin, the first woman councillor in the city's history, holding her own with eight male members some of who took awhile getting used to having "Madam Councillor" in their midst.

•Judge Gertrude Halloran at Quincy District Court virtually serving as defense attorney for defendants who couldn't afford a lawyer.

•Hank Conroy punting for the Quincy High School football team. (The Patriots could have used him today.)

•Driving into a gasoline station where the gas was under 50 cents a gallon, the air free and where they cleaned the windshield.

City To Receive $18,063 For State Elections

The city will receive $18,630 in state funds for the upcoming 1996 September state primary and November elections, according to State Auditor Joe DeNucci.

DeNucci said overall, $962,851 has been certified for distribution to the Commonwealth's cities and towns to cover costs related to the elections.

"Although citizens now have more time to vote, these extra hours have increased election day staffing costs for the Commonwealth's municipalities," said DeNucci, who cited a 1983 state mandate which established standardized, statewide polling hours from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

DeNucci said it is the responsibility of his Division of Local Mandates (DLM) to determine how much the state must pay cities and towns to implement state mandates. The polling law requires communities to document any additional election costs and submit them to DLM for certification. The Secretary of State's Office then distributes the funding.

Cities and towns will receive funds for the extra polling hours prior to the next state primary. The amounts range from $122,314 for Boston to $51 for Mount Washington. By the fall of 1996, DeNucci will have certified, and cities and towns will have received $7.5 million in local election spending under the law.

DeNucci noted that the amount earmarked for distribution does not apply to special elections for state offices.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1930 postcard of Wollaston Beach and the Boulevard. This scene is at the intersection with Davis St. The building on the right was most recently, and for many years, the home of Kent's carpet store until it was demolished after burning last year. At the time of this photo the building housed many of the attractions that made Wollaston Beach so popular. Including a private bath house, restaurants and a gift shop. Later Don Kent would broadcast his first radio weather reports over WJDA from a shack on the roof of this building.

McCormack Defeats Burgin For Senate

By PAUL HAROLD

By a margin of 787 votes, City Councillor James McCormack not only handed Sen. Thomas Burgin his first electoral defeat in 38 years, but also seized the Norfolk Senate seat from the Republicans for the first time in history.

The Democrats also gained the Worcester Senate seat with the victory of John Conte. Meanwhile, ballots across the state were under police protection pending a recount in John Volpe-Chub Peabody race for Governor, the closest in state history. City Clerk John Gillis estimated that the cost to the city for the police was $66 a day.

TRANSIT COMMITTEE APPOINTED

Dr. Charles Djerf, president of the Quincy Rotary Club, named a committee to meet with Governor-elect Peabody to push for a comprehensive South Shore transit plan.

The committee included John Herbert, editor of The Patriot Ledger; Heslip Sutherland, chairman of the board of managers of the South Shore Transportation group; George Yarrington, executive director of the Quincy Taxpayers' Association and George Reardon, chairman of the Quincy-South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

Herbert said, "Governor-elect Peabody is aware of the disenchantment of the South Shore with Gov. Volpe for his reversal from a Budd car plan to rapid transit and has said he definitely wants a program acceptable to the people of the area."

CITY COUNCIL - SCHOOL COMMITTEE CLASH

A member of the School Committee called a proposal by Councillor Charles Shea to combine QHS and Quincy Trade and to construct a new high school "stupid," setting the stage for a councillor-committee clash.

Dr. Paul Gossard, superintendent of schools, notified the council by letter that the committee did not support Shea's proposal.

Shea replied, "If they want to run the schools without help, let them vote a bond issue, which they cannot do. Both the School Committee and the Council have to integrate their work."

Salvation Army Seeks Volunteers, Donations

[The following was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication:] Dear Community Relations Director,

As the weather starts to cool, our thoughts here turn toward Christmas. We know that in a couple of months families and individuals will be asking us for help for the holidays.

We will help them, and we invite you to join us in partnership to make the holidays special. Your generosity in the past has made a difference and we hope that you are able to help again.

There are many ways you can help. If you have a large company, you might consider a food or toy drive. Smaller groups might consider sponsoring a family. Volunteers are needed to take applications, distribute gifts, and ring kettles. Of course, monetary gifts are always appreciated.

Please call us at 472-2345 for more information on how you can participate. Thank you and God bless you.

Thanks Quincy Emergency Management Agency

[The following letter, dated Oct. 30, was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication.] Dear Mayor Sheets,

On behalf of the staff of the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum, I would like to express my gratitude to Tony Siciliano and magnificent young people of Quincy's Emergency Management Agency, for their contribution to the success of the recent "Fright Night on the Witch Ship."

Despite having spent the day dealing with hazardous waste pick-ups and fallen trees, every one of them came to help on board with undiminished enthusiasm. I was so pleased that they were included on the Channel 7 News report.

You will no doubt recall that it was one year ago today that the USS Salem pulled into Boston prior to her final ride home in Quincy. I recall with amazement Tony's crew pulling themselves up the Jacob's ladder with brooms, trash bags and bottles of water, and proceed to clean the teak decks of every trace of grass and weed that had grown between her planks over the prior 35 years. Their teamwork and preparation was outstanding then and now.

We are already planning for next year's event and I sincerely hope that Quincy's Emergency Management team will be back with us.

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I'd like to take the time during National Hospice Month to acknowledge Hospice of the South Shore.

My family and I want to thank everyone at Hospice for the wonderful care and emotional support they provided during my husband Terry's illness.

Their team of nurses, especially Terry's primary nurse, Mary Beth, the home health aides and bereavement services were all so very caring and devoted.

The emotional and physical support has helped us all through a very difficult time. I thank them for everything. I just cannot commend Hospice of the South Shore sufficiently.

Anita's Mexican Spicy Casserole

At a recent night out at our niece Anita's home, we tasted one of the most delicious spicy Mexican casseroles ever. Her friend Harry, who joined us agreed.

Anita made this a day ahead and than baked it when we were expected.

ANITA'S MEXICAN SPICY CASSEROLE

- 1 tablespoon chili powder
- 1 can stewed tomatoes
- 12 ounces shredded cheddar cheese
- 8 ounces Velveeta cheese
- 2 cans chopped green chile peppers, drained

I can refried beans

In a slightly greased casserole dish, place the stewed tomatoes and pat down, until it flattens.

Add the refried beans and the cheddar cheese. Sprinkle the chili powder over than.

Add the chili peppers and top with slices of Velveeta cheese.

Bake in a 325 oven for about 15 minutes until the cheese is melted.

Anita toasted some pita pockets in pieces and we used those rather than the usual tostitos. But either one is delicious (one a little lower in calorie than the other).

Gallagher Announces Candidacy For U.S. Senate

Susan Gallagher announced her candidacy for the U.S. Senate Sunday in front of her real estate agency in Wollaston Center.

Gallagher is running as a member of the new Conservative Party.

About 150 people attended a reception for the candidate at S & S Beale Street Diner following the campaign kickoff.

"I chose this location to start my campaign because this is the heart of middle class America," said Gallagher. "Most people that live in this community know what it is like to carry the burden for the rest of America."

"In the 1950s, the government took about 2 percent of a family's income for tax purposes. Usually, only one parent had to work and most middle class Americans could afford to buy a home, a car, have medical insurance, vacation twice a year, and save for a retirement. Many people had the same job for 20 or 30 years.

"In the 1990s, the middle class has been decimated. Between 40 and 50 percent of a family's income now goes for taxes and other fees. Most families have two people working one or more jobs. Many middle class Americans don't have health insurance, job security, retirement benefits, or savings. For many, the dream of home ownership is unattainable. Yet the Washington elite representing Massachusetts have no idea of what it is like to be middle class.

"The Democrat, John Kerry, voted for NAFTA and GATT which has caused an unfair trade balance for the American worker and has cost many middle class jobs. These jobs have gone to Asia and Mexico where there are no child labor laws and prisoners work for slave labor wages. This is not free trade. To add insult to injury, Kerry also insulted many veterans by reopening relations with Vietnam and now Ford and Chrysler are planning to build plants there, further depleting the available jobs for the middle class work force."

Gallagher said she opposes affirmative action and quotas, gay rights, and the U.S. fighting under the U.N. flag. She is pro life and also favors school choice, capital punishment, and second amendment rights. Her campaign slogan is "faith, family and freedom."

For more information on the Gallagher for U.S. Senate campaign, call 773-4360.

Holiday Stress Tips

DON'T LET THE HOLIDAYS GET YOU DOWN.

Dr. Freedman has some sound advice based on his health care experience and training.

1. Before you jump on the merry-go-round of activities, pull out and pitch all the non-essential projects that were time consuming and wasteful the previous year.
2. Concentrate on essentials and pace yourself. Make up a list of projects to be done by priority and allow sufficient time for them.
3. Don't try to get all your entertainment into the holidays. If you "owe" someone dinner or social response, try to reschedule it after the holidays.
4. Resist the temptation to over-eat or to indulge in an excess of rich foods.
5. Get plenty of sleep, relaxation and exercise

Check For Energy Efficiency

A Fireplace Adds To The Value Of Your Home

A fireplace may take the chill out of those first frosty days of autumn in cold weather climates, but it may not really be effective in reducing your overall energy bill.

"A properly functioning fireplace flue will not only draw out smoke but also about 20 percent of the heated air in the room each hour," says James N. Stamos, president of the South Shore Association of Realtors. "Moreover, you are most likely only receiving 15 percent of potential heat produced by each burning log because much of the combustible material in the wood is lost as gas without burning or producing heat."

This doesn't mean you should give up your dream of cozy nights by the fire. A few simple modifications can increase the energy efficiency of your fireplace.

A heating grate made of hollow tubing that wraps around logs and extends over their tops can recirculate heat produced by the fireplace into the room. Certain models are equipped with electric blowers that direct hot air into the room instead of up the chimney.

"Fireplace covers also increase heating efficiency," Stamos says. "Steel covers with fire-resistant glass enable you to watch the fire while receiving radiant heat through the glass. But be sure to leave your damper open when the fire is burning or the coals are still glowing."

A cover should be placed over the opening of the fireplace at the end of the evening when the fire is nearly extinguished, but hot enough to require an open damper to release smoke. Make certain the cover is tight-fitting around the edges so that room heat does not escape.

New technology can improve the efficiency of an existing open fireplace. Open fireplaces exhaust large quantities of air up to the flue, resulting in drafts that pull heat out of the home. Thus, an open fireplace only has an energy efficiency of about five to six percent.

Home owners can boost the efficiency of an existing open fireplace by installing a gas-fueled or wood-burning fireplace insert. Inserts fill the existing fireplace opening and connect to the existing flue. These inserts, which use a catalytic combustion system, ensure clean-burning and provide a 78 percent efficiency. A fan provides natural convection heating and a thermostat ensures steady, even heat.

"The type of wood burned also can affect fireplace efficiency," Stamos advises. "Harder woods such as birch, oak and maple burn more slowly and give more evenly distributed heat. Softer woods such as pine burn faster and more unevenly. Beware of green, unseasoned wood which is difficult to burn and produces a great deal of smoke."

The damper should be kept closed whenever the fireplace is not in use, unless you are using natural ventilation to cool your home. Otherwise, you may find that it could pull expensive heated or cooled air from your house, which adds to your energy bill. To be sure the damper closes tightly, hold a hand mirror inside the chimney vase to check for light leaks.

As a safety precaution, it's also a good idea to have your chimney swept each year to remove debris and to check for obstructions.

Installing a fireplace also adds to the value of your home. According to statistics compiled by Remodeling Magazine, a fireplace can return as much as 140 percent of the home owner's investment.

The South Shore Association of Realtors is one of more than 1,800 local boards and associations of Realtors nationwide that comprise the National Association of Realtors. As the nation's largest trade association, NAR is "The Voice for Real Estate," representing nearly 750,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry.

Testing Your Home For Radon

Radon is estimated to be the second leading cause of lung cancer in the United States.

If you haven't yet tested your home for radon and you live in an area where high levels of radon exist, the American Lung Association of Greater Norfolk County urges you to test your home.

The American Lung Association offers the following testing tips.

• Any home can have a radon problem - even apartments if they are below the third floor. Testing for radon is a simple precaution that everyone should take. Homes with radon problems can be fixed.

• Do-it-yourself test kits can be ordered from the American Lung Association of Greater Norfolk County for $10 each.

• The American Lung Association kit meets Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) requirements for short-term screening (4-7 days). Look for the words, "EPA Listed" on the package.

• If a short-term test indicates an elevated radon level, confirm your findings with a second test before taking action.

• If you prefer, a professional testing firm listed by the EPA or the state can test your home for you.

• If your home does have a high radon level, don't panic. Repairs cost no more than many other common home repairs and will not change the appearance of your home. A variety of methods can be used, from sealing cracks in floors and walls to changing the flow of air into your home.

• Always consult an EPA-qualified or state-certified radon contractor. They can evaluate the problem and help you select the right solution.

• As when hiring a contractor for any other home repair, you may want to get more than one estimate and check references.

• Contact the American Lung Association at (508) 668-6729 for more information about radon.

Ward 6 Councillor

FRANCIS MCCAULEY
School Committee
2-Year Term

5 New City Councillors Elected

(Cont'd From Page 1)

Mayor James Sheets was re-elected to his fourth term with an easy 13,779 vote margin victory over Roger B. Lyons.

Sheets, facing his first opposition as an incumbent mayor, piled up 16,297 votes to Lyons' 2,518.

Sheets had been unopposed in the last two elections, the only mayor in the city's history to twice go unchallenged. Only two other mayors, Thomas Burgin and Francis McCauley had run unopposed but each only once.

Christine Cedrone was the top vote-getter in the School Committee field with a strong 10,968-vote performance.

Incumbents Linda Stice and Sean Barry took the second and third seats with respective votes of 10,160 and 8,993.

Two years ago Barry and Cedrone finished in a dead heat and Barry won the two-year seat in a special convention of the City Council and School Committee.

Ron McCarthy finished fourth place runner-up in Tuesday's election with a vote of 7,104 followed by Sal Giarratani, 2,230 and Michael Jovanovic, 1,679.

McCauley ran unopposed for the lone two-year seat on the council.

Voter turnout for the election was 45.15 percent. A total of 19,705 of the 43,641 registered voters in the city participated in the election.

Election Quotes

Paul Harold: "We were hoping just for a return to the council, but this is an overwhelming vote of confidence in the work I've done both previously on the council as well as my 14 years in the Senate. So it's a tribute to all the people who've worked in my campaign, the past work we've done for the city in both capacities, on the City Council and in the State Senate."

Tim Cahill: "I feel good. I'm glad I'm still on the City Council. I don't think anything I did could have changed the vote. Paul Harold has been around for 20 years to my eight, and he ran a great race. So did Mike Cheney. I'd also like to say that I'll miss working with my two colleagues, Larry Chretien and Tom Fabrizio. I enjoyed working with them very much."

Larry Chretien: "Well, I'm just obviously disappointed, and Karen and I will take a couple of months and unwind and relax and try to figure out how we can continue to make a difference...I don't want to make a decision (on running again) for awhile. I think we ought to look at all the opportunities that are out there, and make a decision a couple of months from now, or a year from now, when life is settled down."

Daniel Raymond: "I attribute my victory to hard work, a long period of time of commitment to the issues in Ward 2, and a campaign that from start to finish was supported by a tremendous amount of individuals on my behalf. And I have a record of being involved with issues in this city. I think people know me as a person who works hard; I deal with issues, and I get things done."

Mike D'Amico: "I'm thrilled to have the honor of serving the residents of Ward 4 and also to be the youngest councillor ever elected in the history of the city. I'm proud of the campaign I ran and the hard work my supporters and I put into it. It was a team effort."

Stephen Durkin: "I stuck to the issues, including public safety and education, and I think that's why the public responded to our campaign favorably. There will be some new challenges now, and I look forward to facing them."

Christine Cedrone: "It's been a long campaign, and I'm happy it's over. Now it's time to roll up my sleeves and get to work. The city has to look at the children, because the children are our future."

Linda Stice: "I'm a little exhausted, but I'm very, very happy on so many levels. I'm very happy I won, and I'm very happy Kids Vote went so well. I'm also very happy for Christine Cedrone. I think it's wonderful to have another woman in government. The campaign is over, and the real work is ahead of us."

Roger Lyons: "I would have been more satisfied if I had gotten a higher report. I did all I could to educate the people. But the mayor has finally agreed to meet with me to discuss a number of issues that have been left hanging, and I look forward to that."

(Ward 4), Stephen Durkin (Ward 5) and Bruce Ayers (Ward 6) running unopposed.

Harold Crowley, project coordinator for Quincy Kids' Vote, said Tuesday's inaugural election went "very, very well."

"The educational part of it itself was a victory. I think today is like the capping the victory like the frosting on the cake. I think the kids are really excited about voting and they know what they're doing. They're very matter-of-factly; they've figured out exactly who they're going to vote for.

"I think if they understand the importance of voting, and how difficult it is to make a decision about a particular candidate or a particular issue, I think they'll learn that out of this and be not afraid to vote when they turn 18. I think we've accomplished our mission."

Crowley noted Tuesday's turnout of 47.78% for the Kids' Vote is appreciably higher than the national average of 35 percent.

Of the 9,914 youngsters who registered to vote in Quincy Kids' Vote, 4,737 went to the polls accompanied by their parents.

Several youngsters who were interviewed after voting Tuesday said they enjoyed the experience.

"It was fun. I think it's great," said 10-year-old Kathleen McCarthy at the Lodge of Elks home on Quarry St. in West Quincy. "It'll help teach me to vote when I'm an adult," said McCarthy, a student at the Bernazzani Elementary School.

Another 10-year-old, Matthew Lawlor, agreed. "Voting was fine. I like it. I think it's important to vote," said Lawlor, a student at the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School which serves as the polling precinct for Ward 5 Precincts 4 and 5.

5 Councillors Also Elected In 1973

The last time five Quincy city councillors were elected at the same time was in 1973.

Elected that year were: Leo Kelly (Ward 1), John Lydon (ward 3), James Sheets (Ward 4), Warren Powers (Ward 5) and Dennis Harrington (Ward 6).

Sheets is now mayor and Powers is an associate justice at Quincy District Court.

John Smith Youngest Councillor Before D'Amico

At age 20, Michael D'Amico is the youngest ever to be elected to the Quincy City Council.

Until now, the honor went to John Smith who was elected in the early 1900s when he was 21 years and seven months.

Next youngest was Thomas Burgin who was 22 when elected in 1924. He went on to become mayor and state senator.

Harold Honors Rabin At Israeli Consulate

Former State Sen. Paul Harold took some time off from his Election Day activities Tuesday to sign the memorial book at the Israeli Consulate in Boston in memory of slain Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Harold did so in his capacity as president of the Boston Center for International Visitors.

Rabin was shot to death by an Israeli student Saturday following a peace rally in Tel Aviv.

EVAN HARRINGTON, 7, casts his vote as his parents, Danielle and Christo, watch and brother, Brendan, looks on.

Spotlight On Business

Anniversary Celebration Nov. 14 Varsity Club Has Hometown Appeal For Sports Fans

By KERRY BYRNE

Combining the best of the sports bar genre with hometown appeal, the Varsity Club has become one of Quincy's best-known entertainment establishments.

Located at 33 Independence Ave. near the Braintree line, the Varsity Club is bright, clean and friendly. It offers the same amenities as the big corporate-backed downtown sports bars, but with a decidedly personal and local flair. Dozens of framed Sports Illustrated covers and jerseys of famous athletes adorn the walls. But you'll also find the Archbishop Williams High School football schedule on the table mats and Quincy and North Quincy football helmets

It is the latter aspect which separates the Varsity Club from the competition and keeps its large and loyal customer base, well...large and loyal.

The emphasis on the customer is the work of owner Adam Kessler, who bought the Varsity Club in 1993, and manager Amy Finocchiaro, whose face may be one of the most familiar ones in the Quincy-Braintree area. The V Club opened in 1988 amid a sports bar craze, but has been one of the few to thrive well into the 1990s.

"Everyone works hard to give the customer a great experience so that they'll want to come back," said Kessler. "We wouldn't be satisfied with just any old place. The name Varsity Club means quality, so we have to live up to that. To me, I don't want it to be just so-so."

If the number of repeat customers is any indication, that attitude has paid off.

"It's almost like a family," said Finocchiaro. "People come here before they head into town, or for bachelor parties or just as a place to hang out. Most of them we know by name."

To celebrate his second year in business and show his appreciation for the customers that make the Varsity Club successful, Kessler is throwing an anniversary party Tuesday, Nov. 14 from 7 p.m. to closing. That means free buffet-style food ("very good stuff," said Kessler), prizes and surprises. "It's the night for us to thank our customers for their business," added the owner.

Kessler and Finocchiaro have hardly done it alone, and they are the first to admit it. They benefit from what Kessler calls the "best staff on the South Shore."

As in any restaurant-style establishment, service is the bottom line, and the one thing a customer is likely to remember when deciding if they want to stop in for a second visit. Bad service is bad business.

In the restaurant industry, staff turnover is of epidemic proportions. Not so at the Varsity Club. "We have a very low turnover," said Finocchiaro. "In fact, I've never lost a bartender and we have a waiting list to join."

As we sat at lunch, the manager pointed to a group of customers. "Those guys are here from Raytheon," she said. "They come in to see Mary." Besides being one of the V Club's popular bartenders, Mary happened to make the caramel pumpkin torte which was offered as a dessert that day. Just another of the trademark personal touches people have come to expect from the Varsity Club.

The sports at the Varsity Club are provided by the nine televisions which are found above the bar and in each corner of the restaurant. Everyone has a front row seat. As in any sports bar, business is often contingent upon the success of the local teams. Big nights at the V Club are Fridays and Saturdays, and any night the Boston Bruins are playing.

"This is a big hockey bar," said Finocchiaro.

Added Kessler: "We get a bigger Boston College and college football crowd on Saturdays than we do on Sundays. We can broadcast more games on Saturdays."

Kessler was philosophical when asked what the recent poor run by the local sports teams has meant for his business. "When sports teams do poorly, yeah, it affects our business. But it's like the weather: you can't do much about it."

The menu consists of heaping portions of food to appeal to the hungry sports fan, their friends, and the families who frequent the Varsity Club. The super-sized chef salad is a meal and then some. The Buffalo wings are hot and spicy and best if eaten with caution. The rest of the menu consists of a wealth of sports bar favorites complemented by a specials list which changes constantly.

The menu itself if regularly upgraded based on the specials which prove most successful. The kitchen is open from 11:30 a.m. to 11 p.m. (the bar stays open until midnight) each day. A take out menu is also available.

Doing business in the City of Quincy has been a pleasant experience for Kessler, who is a native of Philadelphia but married a local woman. "I've been really happy with the way we've been treated by the city," he said. He was also glad to say that the feelings were reciprocated. "Since taking over, we've got a lot of compliments from residents and officials regarding the way we do business."

The Varsity Club boasts a number of special event nights which are listed on the monthly calendars/table mats. Included among them is Cigar Night on the first Tuesday of each month. The event features selections from the Varsity Club's own list of fine cigars.

NORTH QUINCY TAILBACK Jay Turner turns the corner for a gain as the Bridgewater-Raynham defense gives chase. Turner, a sophomore, had done a superb job since picking up the offensive load for the Red Raiders four games ago.

Taunton May Be The Cure

Red Raiders Struggle In 20-0 Loss To B-R

By KERRY BYRNE

Lack of scoring punch has dogged the North Quincy High School football team this year.

That trend continued Friday night as the Red Raiders (2-6) lost to Bridgewater-Raynham, 20-0, in an Old Colony League outing.

However, help for the North Quincy attack is on the way. Friday the Red Raiders host OCL opponent Taunton in the final tune-up before their Thanksgiving Day showdown with Quincy. The Tigers bring to Veterans' Memorial Stadium a 2-6 record and the weakest defense in the league as they have surrendered well over 30 points per game.

Taunton won its most recent game, 28-24, over Div. 3 Coyle-Cassidy. It was the fewest points they've given up this season. Offensively, they boast talented players in running back Eddie Holt and quarterback Steve Santos.

Defense was not the problem for North Quincy as it handled itself well against the Bridgewater-Raynham (4-3-1) offense. The Trojans scored on two sustained drives and a 65-yard punt return by Eric Margie. Derek Lennen capped the scoring marches with touchdown runs of 26 and 2 yards in the first and fourth quarters, respectively. The score was just 6-0 in the third quarter when Margie's punt return broke the game open.

"We had some success but broke down a couple of times on third down and turned the ball over. That hurt us," said Red Raiders assistant coach Peter Chrisom, Jr. "But we can't take anything away from our kids, they played hard. But I think they tired us down at the end."

For the most part, B-R was held in check North Quincy's rock-solid defensive play. Linebackers and co-captains Tim Zaniboni and Chris Ritchie swallowed up the inside run game. Zaniboni made upwards of a dozen tackles while Ritchie made the hardest hit of the game when he decked Tim Pauline for no gain in the second quarter.

Tom Coughlin, who had perhaps his finest defensive game of the season, made a number of superb plays including a stretch in the second quarter when he sacked quarterback Keith Lane then batted away one of his passes soon after. Matt Kieilty accounted for NQ's lone takeaway with a fumble recovery in the third quarter.

Offensively, North Quincy was hampered by four turnovers and a number of dropped balls. However, J.R. Rendle connected on seven pass attempts with tight end Charlie Plaskasovitis hauling in three balls for 36 yards. Kieilty and Tim Semchenko each caught an 11-yard pass.

The Red Raiders attempted to get on the board with a pair of razzle-dazzle plays which proved successful earlier in the season. With the ball on the B-R 26, Rendle threw in the flat to Coughlin. Coughlin in turn looked down field and threw to Zaniboni, but the ball fell incomplete. On the next play, Rendle threw to Coughlin who then flipped the ball to Sean Johnson. The hook & lateral went for 6 yards.

Sophomore running back Jay Turner added to his superb average per carry with 33 yards on just five attempts. Fellow sophomore Steve Rose played a solid two-way game with a number of heavy hits on both sides of the ball.

Linemen Eric Malames and Steve Stentiford did their best Joe Jacoby-Russ Grimm imitation as they led Turner on a 19-yard counter-trey play for NQ's longest gain of the contest. Jacoby and Grimm made the play, in which the backside guard and tackle pull, famous in the 1980s when the Washington Redskins ruled pro football.

Long time Quincy coach, teacher and athletic director Marty Finnegan will be inducted into the Massachusetts Basketball Coaches Hall of Fame Nov. 10 at Boston University.

Finnegan graduated from BU in 1950 and began his career in Quincy that fall. He became head basketball coach at QHS in 1960 and held the position for 13 years. His teams were regular contenders for the state tournament and set several school records.

As Quincy athletic director, Finnegan helped develop a federal grant to create drug-free schools and communities. He has served on the Sportsmanship and Chemical Health committees of the MIAA.

The induction ceremony will be held at BU's Metcalf Ballroom. A cocktail hour at 5:30-6:30 will be followed by dinner. Tickets cost $35 and must be purchased in advance.

For more information call Hall of Fame chairman Scott Eaton at (508) 252-5055 or (508) 252-6512.

The second annual Quincy-North Quincy Alumni Hockey Games will take place Nov. 25 at the Quincy Youth Arena.

The first year of the event was a great success as over 50 graduates for each school took part. Alumni from as far away as Pennsylvania, Chicago and Denver will be taking part this year. Players are still needed.

The cost to play is $25 and all proceeds go to benefit the hockey programs at each school.

As in last year, two games will be played with the older alums battling in one game and the younger folks playing in the other. Members of the class of 1991 are eligible to play this time.

For more information call Nancy Stone at 773-8464 or Marilyn Lumaghini at 773-2395.

The Thanksgiving Day football game is fast approaching and I need your help. Last year in the Turkey Day preview issue we ran a successful feature on memories of the big game and we'd like to do it again.

If you have any fond memories of the game, whether you were player, coach, proud parent, spectator or whatever, we'd like to know what they are.

Call The Quincy Sun (471-3100) on Mondays or Tuesdays anytime between now and Nov. 17 to let us know your Turkey Day memories.

Imagine this:

The upstart New England Patriots are battling the mighty Dallas Cowboys in Super Bowl XXX (imagine hard).

The Patriots trail 31-24 with two minutes to play. They take over deep in their own territory and march down field to score a touchdown with no time on the clock. Trailing 31-30, and needing 2 yards for the conversion, the $42 million man steps back and fires a bullet to Big Bad Ben Coates, the most feared man in football; or perhaps clutch-yardage specialist Dave Meggett knives past the defense and into the end zone. The Patriots win 32-31. They are champions of football world.

Unfortunately, this will never happen. And not for the obvious reasons.

Even if the Pats were to make the Super Bowl, if they were to battle the Cowboys, if they were to tie the game with no time left, this would never happen.

The reason? There is not one coach in the National Football League who would opt for the two-point conversion. After sweating, heaving, corn-fed, iron-sculpted behemoths have battled for 60 minutes, they would rather let a miniature European man named Garo, Rolfe or Uwe boot a single point through the goal posts than let the Fates determine a coin flip to see who gets the ball in overtime. (This after they've spent endless days and sleepless nights poring of films of their opponent in an effort to find the slightest chink in the enemy's defense. In that time you would think they would come up with one play that would gain 2 yards in a bind. But noooooooooooooooooooooo!)

They would then hope the wind is blowing in the right direction and pray that they are the beneficiaries of good field position. Finally, if the whims of the Gods call for good fortune to befall the team, if the caprice of Mother Nature sees fit, then, and only then, would the miniature European man named Garo, Rolfe or Uwe trot back on to the field and attempt to kick the game-winning field goal. He may or may not be successful. We may have to go through this sad ritual again, with miniature European men deciding a game which they've probably never actually played.

So my question to you: Why not just go for the two points and end it right then and there? Why not let the football players decide the football game? Why not show some spine, some initiative, some common sense?

Two yards and it's over and you win. One play for all the marbles. Why does every coach leave it up to chance, whim, fate and Garo and Rolfe and Uwe in overtime?

Cross-Country

Local Runners Perform Well At OCL Meet

Both the North Quincy

boys and girls placed sixth while the Quincy boys and girls each placed seventh.

Quinn led the Red Raiders boys with a time of 16:37. Sorenson paced the Presidents with

Chance To Foil Barnstable's Undefeated Season Friday

Connolly, Quincy Pound Silver Lake

If room were lacking to write about the Quincy High School football team this week, it could sum it up in two words: Kevin Connolly.

The junior running back had a career game as he led the Presidents (3-5) to a 32-22 win over Silver Lake Friday night. Connolly racked up 208 yards and scored four touchdowns on 15 carries. The scoring runs were of 30, 6, 48 and 72 yards for Quincy's scoring leader. It was also the first 100-yard plus game by a Presidents runner this season.

Senior co-captain Bill Dunn punched in the other Presidents touchdown with a 20-yard romp.

Quincy can certainly use another attack of smashmouth football when they battle undefeated (8-0) Barnstable Friday night. A win by the Red Raiders of Cape Cod will secure the Old Colony League title and put them in the Div. I Super Bowl.

This brings up an interesting subplot for the upset-minded Presidents: In each of the last two seasons Quincy played the role of spoiler with wins that ended the Red Raiders Super Bowl chances. If Barnstable loses to Quincy again they will be forced to win or tie against third-place Falmouth (6-1) on Thanksgiving Day.

Quincy coach Pete

Chella says those thoughts are not on his mind: "We go into every game with what we feel is a winning game plan," he said. "This week is no different. We hope to take advantage of their weaknesses like we do in any game."

The Presidents will be forced to shut down a highly effective wishbone attack. Barnstable is powered by a beefy offensive line featuring tackle Paul LaQuerre, who, at 6 feet 4 inches and 280 pounds, is considered one of the best college prospects in the region.

As for last week, Connolly wasted no time against Silver Lake (2-6) as he capped the game's opening drive with the 30-yard sprint up the right sideline. Tim Santos boot-ed the first of two successful extra points. The score was made possible by a drive-sustaining 9-yard Mark Glynn-to-Jon Ryan pass play on third and 8. The scoring march went for 90 yards - Quincy's longest of the season.

Connolly added his second score late in the first half as the Presidents took a 13-6 lead into intermission. Matt Guevermont had scored for the Lakers on their opening possession.

The running game was made to work by the bruising play of offensive line-

KEVIN CONNOLLY, front and center, was the man of hour for Quincy High in its 32-22 win over Silver Lake. Connolly is surrounded by the rest of the Presidents ball carriers. Front, from left, Tim Lewis, Shaun Faherty, Connolly, Eric Stimpson and Steve Verlicco. Back row, Sean Thomas, Ed McGee, Tim Santos, Bill Dunn, Mike Russo, Andrew Byrne and Steve Maze.

men Jason Little, Jake Drohan, Dan Nichol, Pete Kolson, Don McCarthy, Greg Fernald, Jay Fennelly and tight end Ryan as the unit had its best game of the season.

"Our offensive line really just kicked butt," said Chella. "They were phenomenal, coming off the ball hard and doing the job up front just exactly the way we wanted them to play."

Dunn gave Quincy a 19-

6 advantage in the third quarter with a 20-yard scoring run. Connolly sealed the victory with his final two long scoring runs in the fourth quarter.

"Kevin obviously had the best game of his career," said Chella. "He just took the ball and went with it. He scored the four TDs on three different plays and each time it was a different read by him because he kept his head up and cut accordingly."

The Lakers had scored when Tucker Apple sacked Glynn for a safety, then scored on runs of 5 and 3 yards. Andre Mendes' added the two-point conversion following Apple's first touchdown.

Silver Lake's scoring was made possible in part by the absence of middle linebacker Dunn who was hurt in the first half. His injury worsened and he was unable to contribute much after the break.

"We're just a different team defensively without him in there," said Chella.

PRESSURE TACTICS

When a car overheats, it is a mistake to remove the radiator cap in an effort to make the engine cool off faster.

In fact, all removing the radiator cap probably will do is cause a further loss of coolant. More importantly, twisting off the radiator cap when the engine is hot poses a threat of injury to those who attempt it. This is because the engine's cooling system operates under pressure. Removing the radiator cap can thus send boiling coolant spraying in all directions. Unfortunately, hundreds of people are injured each year because they failed to wait for the engine to cool off before removing the radiator cap. To make sure that an engine has cooled sufficiently wait until the upper radiator hose is cool enough to grasp comfortably. And, once the radiator cap is removed, do not assume that adding more antifreeze will necessarily make the engine run better. The optimum mixture of antifreeze and water is 50/50. Leave it to an auto technician to diagnose and treat an overheating problem.

Carry electrical tape in your car to make temporary repairs to failed coolant hoses to allow the car to progress to a garage for repairs.

Next time you need cooling system work done bring your car into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Our highly trained ASE Certified technicians and our availability of parts will assure you of a job well done. We're proud of our staff and you can trust us to get you back on the road quickly. We're conveniently located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550). Our shop is open Mon-Fri 9am-5pm, Sat 9am-5pm, Sun 9am-5pm. Remember, we also supply propane for grills, motor homes and converted vehicles.

Boxing Show Nov. 11 At Quincy Armory

By JIMMY
FARRELL, JR.

Amateur boxing returns to Quincy on Veterans' Day, Nov. 11, at the National Guard Armory on Hancock St.

Fifteen bouts are scheduled involving Golden Glove, New England and Junior Olympic champions. The show is being put on by O'Malley's Gym of Quincy.

Among the local boxers who will be featured are Chris Conte, who was last year's Massachusetts Gold Glove champion, Jeff West, Shane Murray, Nick Cyr and super heavyweight Richie Whippen.

Jason Pires, the No. 1 ranked bantam weight in the country, will be among the featured athletes.

Other O'Malley's Gym fighters on the card are the Morganelli brothers, Nasty Nick and Mighty Mike of Whitman, Mike Murphy of Weymouth, Matt Carey of Abington, heavyweight Fast Freddie Sorrento of Scituate, Rob Ortega of Dorchester, Rob Stephens of Brockton, light heavyweight David Ripley of Brintree and Jamie (Red)

McKeague of Hyde Park.

Appearing at the show will be Tyrone Smith, Gene Jackson and Kevin Watts, each of whom represented the Quincy Police Athletic League in Dallas last week at the National Police Athletic League Boxing Championships.

Doors open at 6 p.m. with the first bout beginning at 7 p.m. Admission is $12 for adults and $6 for senior citizens and kids under 12. A portion of the proceeds will be donated to the Quincy PAL.

O'Malley's Gym Boxers Compete In Dallas

O'Malley's Gym recently sent three of its top fighters to Dallas to compete in the National Police Athletic League Boxing Championships.

Tyrone Smith, Gene Jackson and Kevin Watts put on strong performances. Smith won four bouts before falling in the semifinal round to Nate Jones, the No. 3 ranked boxer in the country is his weight class.

Jimmy Farrell of O'Malley's Gym was pleased with the performances of his boxers but feels the tournament highlighted what is needed for amateur boxing in New England to make the next step.

"The difference between New England kids and others is that we need to develop better amateur programs and fight better competition," he said. "Our kids just don't get the work that others do. Watts had only 20 fights but his opponent had 107 fights.

"Jackson had fought only 11 times and his opponent was coached by Al Mitchell who's the head coach at the Olympic Boxing Center. And our kid was in the fight!" he said.

Farrell and O'Malley's Gym namesake Dan O'Malley are working to increase the quality of amateur boxing in New England at their gym on Hancock St. in Quincy Center with boxing shows and constant training.

Among those they hope to get to help out at the gym is Pat Burns, an assistant coach at the Olympic Boxing Center.

"There's not much of a jump between New England kids and national kids," said Farrell. "We want to get over that hump."

"Chris is very competitive. He goes about his game quietly and invariably beats the guy he's

Dave Noonan and Chris Griffin teamed up to assist on two of the goals. Noonan added one other assist, as did Fitzgerald. John Sullivan played well in net.

Crisis Center Working To Keep Esther Sanger's Dream Alive

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Sometimes, although a dreamer dies, the dream lives on.

That's the message being put forward by the Quincy Crisis Center, which lost its founder and executive director, Rev. Esther Sanger, this past summer. Rev. Sanger, 71, who founded the agency in 1978, died Aug. 1 after a brief battle with cancer.

But although the loss of the woman known as "the Mother Teresa of the South Shore" was difficult, those who have been left behind have vowed to keep her dream alive.

"The Quincy Crisis Center is still here," said Merritt Nielson, 50, who has served as acting director of the Wollaston-based program since Oct. 1. "It's alive and well."

Nielson, 50, is executive pastor of the Wollaston Church of the Nazarene which has granted him a sabbatical in order for him to help keep the center operating smoothly. A seven-year member of the Quincy Crisis Center Board of Directors, he relinquished that position in order to become acting director.

While he acknowledged that Rev. Sanger, whom he knew for 25 years, can never be replaced, Nielson said that the center's goal now is to continue her works of mercy and compassion.

"As people grieve, so

too do organizations grieve," he said. "There's no replacing Esther. She was the organization. I don't think anyone can step in (to replace her). What we want to do is perpetuate her vision."

"What we're trying to focus on now is our mission and our message. We're trying to find our niche in human services, to see how we fit in with the city's other human agencies."

The Quincy Crisis Center delivers hot lunches Monday through Friday to needy residents throughout the South Shore. Last year, Nielson said, the center also served 13,000 meals at Covenant Congregational Church in Quincy Center.

"We're different from other food pantries because we'll take the food to people," said Nielson.

"And we're different because there's no red tape, no prequalifications (for people in need). Esther was always trying to help people at the point of crisis—at the point of despair—and she understood that a person in need really doesn't have time to sit down and fill out a form."

Nielson noted that there are many area families who are able to get by for most of the year without requesting a meal but require assistance during the holiday season. The center generally distributes between 200 and 300 holiday baskets for Thanksgiving and Christmas and likely will match that number this year, he added.

The center also operates a hot line for people in crisis who need food or other assistance. The hot line often is used as a referral service, Nielson said, and callers are directed to DOVE, Father Bill's Place, Impact Quincy, Quincy Community Action, or other programs that may be more specialized in helping them with their particular problems.

Another component of the Crisis Center is its Hingham-based program, the Mary-Martha Learning Center. The program, also founded by Rev. Sanger, provides a shelter and training center for mothers and children.

Nielson said the Crisis

Center's annual budget of $500,000 comes mostly from private donations and assistance from churches, groups, civic organizations and other groups and individuals. In June, however, with an ailing Rev. Sanger forced to curb her fund-raising activities, the center asked the City Council for an appropriation of $12,000, the first time in its history it requested city funding.

"The grant from the city has helped the center through a very difficult period, and we're very grateful for it," he said.

Nielson said the budget will be a focal point for him as he works with the Board of Directors to develop a strategic plan for the center's immediate future. He said he will serve about six more weeks as acting director, and a search for a permanent program director will begin around that time.

Nielson also praised the center's Board of Directors, staff and volunteers for their hard work and cooperation but said more volunteers are always needed. Donations of money and food, particularly frozen turkeys and other Thanksgiving fare, would be especially helpful at this time, he added.

"We just want to get through the holidays," he said, "and then we'll take it from there."

Those who are in need of assistance or would like to help the center in any way can call 471-7075.

A Thought For The Week

May we all live to see the day when disputes between all nations will be decided in an atmosphere of friendship and good will. While that is still only a hope, let Veteran's Day remind us that the strength, the courage, and the will to sacrifice which brought victory in wars are needed today to keep the peace in an uneasy world. Veteran's Day serves to remind us that peace and justice will prevail only when and where we have the strength to defend it.

As we approach Veteran's Day, it seems that there are some discontented who shun convictions or allegiance to any cause or principle. Pursuit of such a philosophy to its logical conclusion is an abandonment of observation of all the milestones in the history of our nation or in the history of mankind, for that matter.

History reveals that through the years there was an overwhelming dedication and belief in the United States. Patriotism was not something to be ashamed of or submerged in cynicism - nor were liberty, the principles of self-government or the American economic and political system. Strong convictions commanded respect and no one doubted our destiny as a nation. And so, on this Veteran's Day, let us turn out in tribute, because we wish to reaffirm those beliefs that make our nation great and which so many of our fellowmen gave up their lives.

LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, 258 Quincy Ave., Braintree, has become the first filling station in Massachusetts to sell propane as an automotive fuel. The event was recently commemorated at a special ceremony. Station co-owners, from left, Kevin McGroarty, Bill Starkie and Tony Centorino pump propane into a Sunoco car that has been converted to run on the alternative fuel. The car was driven from Philadelphia for the ceremony.

At Leo & Walt's Station First In State To Sell Propane As Auto Fuel

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A local Sunoco station has become the first in Massachusetts to sell propane as an automotive fuel.

In addition, Leo and Walt's, 258 Quincy Ave., Braintree (just over the Quincy line) will now serve as a conversion center for those who want their cars and trucks retooled to run on the increasingly popular alternative fuel. A special ceremony introducing the new service was recently held.

Station co-owner Tony Centorino said he and his partners, Bill Starkie and Kevin McGroarty, decided on the move after the Braintree Electric Light Co. made them aware of the importance of the federal Clean Air Act of 1990 and Energy Policy Act of 1992. Basically, the two federal acts make it mandatory for companies with large vehicle fleets—such as Sunoco—to initiate a clean-fuel fleet by establishing an alternative fuels program for a percentage of fleet vehicles.

Centorino said individual stations, including his, are not necessarily impacted by the two acts. He added, however, that it simply makes sense to take advantage of alternative fuels.

"It's great business opportunity," he said. "Somebody has to be the first (station in Massachusetts to offer propane), so it might as well be us. We're also concerned about the environment."

The environment is one reason propane is growing in popularity, according to Helen Doherty, Sunoco manager of alternative fuels and emissions testing, research and development.

"Because propane is such a simple fuel, it burns cleaner," she said. "Gasoline is a mixture of over 100 compounds, but propane is a single compound fuel."

Doherty said economics is another reason people are turning to propane. At Leo & Walt's, for instance, it sells for only 98¢ a gallon.

One downside to the propane is the fact that it doesn't offer the same mileage motorists get from gasoline. While a certain amount of gasoline allows one to drive 100 miles, the same amount of propane will only let a motorist travel 90 miles.

Doherty noted, however, that propane is the most productive of alternative fuels. For example, the same amount of E85 (85 percent ethanol, 15 percent gasoline), allows one to travel only 70 miles; M85 (85 percent methanol, 15 percent gasoline), 54 miles; and CNG (compressed natural gas), 21 miles.

Officials noted that a

Sunoco car that has been converted to run on propane was driven all the way from Philadelphia for the recent ceremony at Leo & Walt's.

Doherty also said propane is incorrectly perceived to be a highly dangerous substance.

"It's got over 60 years of safe history," she said. "It's used extensively in school buses in the Midwest, places like Texas and Oklahoma, which I think is a testimony to how safe it is. And many people use it in gas grills and in their tractors and farm equipment."

Doherty added that there are currently more than 3,500 public filling stations across the country that sell propane as an automotive fuel.

Centorino agreed that the idea of propane being exceedingly dangerous is merely a myth.

"It's as safe as gasoline," he said. "Like gasoline, it's a volatile substance, and like any volatile substance, it has to be treated with respect."

Centorino noted that the staff at Leo & Walt's Sunoco can now repair and service vehicles that run on gasoline, propane, or diesel fuel. He estimated that it would cost about $3,000 for the average gasoline-powered vehicle to be converted to one that runs on propane, and likely "another couple of hundred dollars" for the same to be converted to a "bi-fuel" vehicle that has the capability of running, at separate times, on either fuel.

He added that greater use of alternative fuels by businesses and consumers alike is something that people will probably see a lot more of in the future.

"Propane is playing a very important part in it," he said.

For more information about the services offered at Leo & Walt's Sunoco, call 843-1550.

JOHN DeVILLARS (left), regional administrator for the state Environmental Protection Agency, listens as Leo & Walt's Sunoco co-owner Bill Starkie explains that this Braintree Electric Light Co. truck has been converted to run on propane.

Liquor Stores Open Regular Hours On Veterans' Day

The Quincy License board announces that liquor stores will be open at their regular hours Saturday, Nov. 11 Veteran's Day.

All licensees may sell or deliver alcoholic beverages. Package stores may remain open until 11:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 10.

Police Chief Frank Mullen said the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission sent a memo concerning the opening and closing of establishments and Quincy abides by it. He said since the legislation removed the Blue Laws, so to speak, "a different format is adhered to." He said liquor stores are now usually open on Veteran's Day.

The license board also issued Sunday package store openings during the holiday season as follows.

Package stores are allowed to be opened in all communities on Sundays during the holiday season, beginning with the Sunday before Thanksgiving, Nov. 19 and extending through the Sunday before New Year's Day, Dec. 31. These Sunday openings are subject to the following conditions:

•Local licensing authority approval is required in the form of a permit issued by the authority after a public hearing.

•Stores may not open before noon.

•On Nov. 19, 26, Dec. 3, 10 and 17, stores must close not later than 11 p.m. On Dec. 24 and Dec. 31, stores may be open until 11:30 p.m. subject to approval by the local licensing authority. The local authority may require an earlier closing.

•Employees must be paid at a rate not less than one and one half times the employee's regular rate.

•No employee shall be required to work, and refusal to work on a Sunday shall not be grounds for discrimination, dismissal, deduction of hours or any other penalty.

CITY COUNCIL BRIEFS

The City Council took the following action Monday night:

•Appropriated $28,579 from the city's free cash (cash reserve) account to the building inspector for the demolition of two abandoned buildings on Bay View Street in Quincy Point.

•Appropriated $60,000 from the city's sale of real estate account to the city solicitor for purchase of an abandoned property at 1086-1088 Sea Street in Houghs Neck which is to be demolished for open space and turned into a park area.

•Accepted a gift of $5,000 from the Copeland Family Foundation for the purchase of a defibrillator for the North Quincy Fire Station.

•Accepted gifts from various donors totaling $1,235 for the Quincy Emergency Management Volunteers. Donors included Citizens Bank, $1,000; The Quincy Sun, $100; Keohane Funeral Home, $50; Caroline M. Morad, $20; Quincy-South Shore Cultural Commission, $25; Joan C. Hansen, $15 and Signature Signs, $25.

License Board Meeting Nov. 14

The Quincy License Board will hold a previously unscheduled meeting Tuesday Nov. 14 at 10 a.m. in the council chambers at City Hall.

According to Chairman Joseph Shea, the meeting was called because at last week's meeting, he presented the board a proposed increase in license fees to study and return in two weeks.

Shea said he wanted the vote before the 1996 liquor renewals are mailed in mid-November.

Hopes Youngsters Will Become More Confident, Civic-Minded

National President Hails First Quincy Kids' Vote Election

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

By participating in the city's first Kids' Vote Tuesday, the president of the national organization said she hopes local youngsters will learn the importance of the three C's: civics, community and confidence.

Marilyn Evans, president of Kids' Vote USA, observed the Massachusetts pilot project at most of Quincy's voting precincts Tuesday. Evans said she hopes Kids' Vote will encourage youngsters to get involved in their community and become a vital part of the democratic process.

"When they leave the precinct we hope they will have left with a great satisfaction and feeling that they have made a contribution and that their voice is going to be heard. They will read about and listen from the local media of how they and their peers voted and knowing the adults are very interested in how they voted.

"We hope youngsters learn that it's exciting to become informed, that it's a great process to debate candidates and issues, that they feel fully confident in making decisions. We think they will have developed the skills as good, competent voters, the value that it's important to be involved and the habit of voting so we're thrilled absolutely."

It's not how they vote but the fact that they do vote is what's important, Evans emphasized.

"We know that how a five-year-old will decide to vote on a candidate may be much different than an 18-year-old or a 14-year-old but that they feel confident in making decisions and they feel that it boosts their responsibility to be involved as a voter."

Evans said she was impressed with the Kids' Vote organization in Quincy, calling it a near model community for the grass-roots educational project.

"I've met volunteers, seen the set-up and watch the kids in process and it seems like it's almost perfect," Evans said in an interview at the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School Tuesday afternoon.

"Quincy is probably the perfect sort of a community to start up a new (Kids' Vote) project in a new state in that there is a strong sense of community and a history of dedication to each other and so it is not easy to spark the interest and get the volunteer organization in place to make it successful.

"I think (Quincy) is very, very close to being a model community. People have lived and worked together for generations so they know each other. Apparently there's a strong dedication to children, lots of interest in politics, too," she said.

Evans said she was very impressed with how the Kids' Vote simulated an actual election.

"The Quincy project, which is the first in New England, has mirrored the adult election process even more closely than most of our projects which have been in place a few years. For the kids to be voting on the same ballot that adults are voting on, except it's a different color and they get to have the cue of pictures help them is terrific instead of a more fabricated process.

"So for the kids in this room to come up here on this stage (Beechwood Elementary School) and MARILYN EVANS, president of Kids' Vote USA, explains the voting process to Beechwood Elementary School student Matthew Lawlor, age 10. Lawlor was one of the thousands of local youngsters who participated in Quincy's first Kids' Vote program Tuesday.

vote and yet watch the adults vote in the real voting process is perfect, absolutely perfect."

Evans pointed out another Kids' Vote benefit. It also encourages adults to take part in elections.

At the Snug Harbor Community School, Evans said a young mother with two children told her she had never voted before until Tuesday. "Her kids encouraged her to become registered and to vote and Harold (Crowley, project coordinator in Quincy) said to her, 'wasn't it easy' and she said 'yes, it was.'"

"We saw lots of parents coming in with their children and waiting in line in some places for a few minutes didn't seem to be frustrating for them."

Quincy is one of three new pilot Kids' Vote projects launched this fall. The others were in Idaho and Connecticut. In all, 23 states and the District of Columbia are involved in the effort.

"We're expecting next year for the Presidential Election that we'll have more than 40 states," Evans said. "We certainly hope so. It usually starts in one community or two or three communities and then the local leadership on a project figures out how to expand into other communities. Apparently, there's already other interest in communities in Massachusetts so that's exactly what we want to happen."

Evans, who has headed Kids' Vote USA since 1989, said her own vision of the national organization is "once we have projects set up in all 50 states, and I hope that will happen by 1998, and that we have assisted in the early stages for projects to start out with a fine pilot program, like you're observing here today in Quincy, and that they expand it to other communities so that we can get rid of the national organization because what's most important about kids voting is what happens to that child in their classroom and within their home and within their precinct and their school and their community

"I hope we get kids' vote institutionalized, like it is in Costa Rica, the nation that's given this model, so that we always expect, beginning in kindergarten, kids are prepared with exciting civics lessons as voters and they're seen observing things in the media and they're talking to adults within their environment and their peers about elections and all generations are celebrating democracy on Election Day as they go to the polls together.

"That should be a part of our democracy and every democracy."

GOV. WILLIAM WELD (second from left) presents Quincy officials with cardboard "check" representing a $2 million state Public Works Economic Development Grant that will be used to fund the construction of a municipal parking facility in Quincy Center. Weld also announced during his visit to the city last Friday that Old Colony commuter rail stations will be built in both Quincy and Braintree. Also in photo from left are state Sen. Michael Morrissey, Mayor James Sheets and City Councillor Timothy Cahill.

For Design Work, Cost Estimate City Seeks Architect For New Point School

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The city is preparing a request for proposals that will be sent out to find an architect who will create a design for a proposed elementary school in Quincy Point.

Mayor James Sheets said at press time the Department of Public Works is putting together the R.F.P. in conjunction with School Supt. Eugene Creedon. The DPW is responsible for preparing the R.F.P. because the city will build the school, he said.

Sheets said the architect chosen also will help determine an approximate cost for the plan, which includes construction of the new school as well as the renovation of two others in an effort to relieve overcrowding at Sterling Middle School. The mayor added that while bonding definitely will be required for the project, a cost estimate is necessary before the proposal is sent to the City Council for review.

Sheets said construction of the new school will not be that costly for the city because 63 percent of such projects is reimbursed by the state.

He added that the new school is necessary for the city's educational future.

"It's absolutely essential to meet the overcrowding problems at the middle school level," he said. "It's a quality of education issue. It's a matter of educational excellence."

Sheets said he is uncertain how quickly the architect's work can be completed or whether the current City Council will review the project before the end of the year. But despite the fact that five of nine councillors will be replaced in January, the mayor expressed confidence that whoever reviews the plan will be supportive of the project.

"I'm confident both the old City Council and the new City Council will understand the need for the school," he said.

The council will have the final say on the project, which received unanimous support from the School Committee last week. Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro and Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien—who both will leave the council in January—already have expressed support of the project, while other councillors are undecided.

The council's approval is needed to borrow the millions of dollars needed to pay for the work. No cost estimate has been made.

Members of the School Committee have said they hope the entire project can be completed as soon as possible and that the new school can be built by the fall of 1997. A number of area parents also have

Sheets Sees Tourism, Other Benefits Railroad Station Puts Center Hotel Plans On Track

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Mayor James Sheets says plans for an Old Colony commuter rail station in the city are essential to the construction of a hotel in the downtown and other development and tourism plans.

The mayor made his comments following an announcement by Gov. William Weld that both Quincy Center and Braintree will receive Old Colony stations.

Weld made the announcement last Friday in front of the Quincy Center MBTA Station. At the same time, he said Quincy will receive a $2 million Public Works Economic Development Grant to fund construction of a municipal parking facility in Quincy Center.

Sheets, who flew in from Pittsburgh for the governor's announcement, said the city will benefit greatly from both the commuter rail station and the new parking facility.

"Quincy is a city on the cutting edge of change, and we're fortunate that we have a governor who is serious about promoting business and development and creating jobs," he said. "This commuter rail station will help us tie into Plymouth and will provide a total boost for tourism in this city."

"This announcement also makes construction of a hotel in Quincy Center more certain, much more certain."

Sheets said he is also pleased about the state funds for the planned parking facility, adding that the second floor of the new building will be linked by a crosswalk with the second level of City Hall to give residents a quicker, more convenient entrance to the place where they conduct their city business.

Weld said he thinks the new parking area will help Quincy's plans for development almost as much as the $4 million Old Colony station.

"This project is crucial to the city's development plans for the future," said the governor.

U.S. Shutdown Forces Adams Site To Close

The Adams National Historic Site in Quincy has been shut down.

Marianne Peak, superintendent of the site, said National Park Service (NPS) Director Roger Kennedy told her the park service had no choice but to close and secure the site Tuesday because of a lapse of federal appropriations and a shutdown for government operations.

Peak said at press time the announcement means the closing of the Visitor Center at 1250 Hancock St. and the site's headquarters and administrative offices located in the 1873 Carriage House on the "Old House" grounds at 135 Adams St.

The site will remain closed due to a lack of appropriated funds until it receives an agency directive to reopen, she added.

Peak said nationally, the following has occurred because of the government shutdown:

Favorable Reaction For Ricciuti Drive Restaurant

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Although there was no vote taken at Tuesday's Quincy License Board meeting, plans by the Shea family for the construction of a new restaurant on Ricciuti Drive drew many favorable comments from friends and neighbors.

The restaurant, which will be reconstructed on an existing building and adding a second floor, will be 4,800 square feet and seat about 160 customers.

With a cafe motif, James Shea said, it will feature burgers, steaks, steamed clams plus other foods on a blackboard menu.

It will also have a bar and lounge plus a function room downstairs, Shea said.

Calling it a "family-type business," Shea said his wife, daughters and brother will all be involved in the operation of the business. The hours will be from 8 a.m. to 1 a.m. Monday through Saturday, and from noon to 1 a.m. on Sundays.

Former City Clerk John Gillis and now Norfolk County Commissioner said he had known the Shea family for many years and called them one of the "finest families who would be an asset to the city."

City Council President

Michael Cheney said he supports the move "enthusiastically" and that he is gratified that a lifelong Quincy resident would be investing in a business here in the city.

Others speaking in favor were Bob Curry, owner of Curry's Hardware and former Assistant City Clerk Thomas Burke who said the Shea family was a "credit to Quincy, without question."

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, a License Board member, reminisced about the Shea family being in the dynamite business for years and said "you have to be pretty reliable to be in that kind of business."

Building Inspector Matt Mulvey said he was happy to have some development in the area of Ricciuti Drive to discourage a "junkyard atmosphere."

City Clerk Joseph Shea, the board chairman, said a vote will be taken at the board's next meeting.

Central's Mary Catherine Iannoni Leaving After 50-Year Career

Legendary Quincy Educator To Retire

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A legend of the Quincy Public Schools is retiring after 50 years in the field of education.

Mary Catherine Iannoni, head guidance counselor at Central Middle School, is stepping down after five decades of helping students get off to a good start in life. She informed School Supt. Eugene Creedon of her request for retirement Monday and presented him with a letter of resignation to be submitted to the School Committee at its meeting last night (Wednesday).

Iannoni is trying to handle the reality of her upcoming retirement as quietly and professionally as possible until she steps down next month.

"It's business as usual until Dec. 22," she said with a smile. "But I'm going to miss the kids, I'm going to miss the staff, I'm going to miss a lot of things."

Iannoni, who began her career in education in 1944, signed her first contract with the Quincy Public Schools in 1951 and served as an English teacher and guidance counselor at the former Central Junior High School before becoming a full-time counselor at the former Broad Meadows Junior High School in 1957. Four years later, she returned to Central as head counselor, a title she would hold for the remainder of her career.

A lifelong Brockton resident, Iannoni graduated from St. Patrick's High School there and received bachelor's and master's degrees respectively from Bridgewater State College and the former Hymniss State College. She also received additional education from Harvard University, Boston University and the former Colorado College for Women, which has since been absorbed by the University of Denver.

In 1980, she was inducted into the Academy of Fellows for Distinguished Educators at the University of Denver.

"That was my proudest moment," she said.

Iannoni noted that her decision to retire has nothing to do with health problems or boredom. Now simply feels like the right time to leave, she said, particularly since she plans to enjoy her free time by doing some extra traveling and attending musical and theatrical events.

"It's important for me to leave while I'm well," she said. "I don't want to go away on a pair of crutches or a wheelchair."

"Trust me. Had I disliked what this position entailed, I'd have left a long time ago. But I like what I do. Perhaps no one else does, or did, but I did, and I do," she added with a laugh.

Iannoni said she first thought of retiring following Central's 100th anniversary celebration in April 1994 but was unable to because she spent a busy summer last year working on home projects and traveling.

She added that she subsequently considered stepping down before the beginning of this year but decided not to because of a promise she previously

Partnership Seeks Charter School Status In Squantum

E3 Enterprise, an Arlington-based partnership, is anticipating applying for Charter School status in Massachusetts for the Centurion House Learning Environment.

The school is planned for the Squantum area of Quincy.

The Nov. 1 draft of the 1996 Charter School Application for Centurion is available for public review at the Reference Desk of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

The application will be submitted Monday, Nov. 20 to the executive offices of the Massachusetts Board of Education to be considered for one of the five awardable charters in 1996.

E3 Enterprise partners are requesting letters of response from Quincy residents regarding having Centurion House Learning Environment in the city by Saturday. This allows time to include these communications in the submitted application.

Centurion House Learning Environment is a school for student ages 3-18 year olds applying Montessori Methods of education for the academic aspect of the schedule. Centurion is a year round school with hours matching parents' work schedules designed to relieve the stress on the family by having it go to work-school as a unit and return home in the evening as a unit. Family vacations can be scheduled at any time during the year.

SUPPORT FOR ALZHEIMER'S CARE

There is no doubt that loved ones of people with Alzheimer's disease can benefit from participating in support groups with others in similar situations. However, researchers are now concluding that Alzheimer patients themselves may have much to gain from sharing their experiences with each other. Doctors have found that for people in the early stages of Alzheimer's, patient support groups can help individuals understand what is happening to them. Such patients may feel less depressed and more accepting of the illness. Patients often report that among the most devastating aspects of Alzheimer's are becoming dependent and feeling friends withdraw. Being able to share their situation can ease the pain. P.S. The Alzheimer Association offers information and referrals for support groups. Call 1-800-272-3900.

Support is available in all forms, but often you need to ask for it, so be sure to consult your physician about options available to your family. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, located at 700 Congress St., in Quincy, we take your concerns seriously. We specialize in treating heart problems, hypertension and cholesterol. Sheets Seen Not Running Don't bet on Jim Sheets running for Congress. And, mayoral hopefuls shouldn't go to sleep nights with dreams of a vacant mayor's office dancing in their heads.

Those close to Sheets would be quite surprised—probably stunned—if he decided to make a run for the 10th Congressional seat Gerry Studds is leaving.

And if you listen to him talk he doesn't sound like a candidate waiting in the wings to make a momentous announcement.

He talks about things he feels still have to be done—in Quincy—not in Washington. Things to be done during his administration.

He sounds like a man with an agenda and intends to see it to conclusion before he closes the door for the final time to the third floor office at City Hall.

There's no doubt he would like to have been a Congressman. Seventeen years ago he wanted to, very much.

He ran for the then 11th District seat in 1978 when incumbent James Burke retired. But Brian Donnelly, running out of Dorchester, took the seat.

Donnelly, who is now ambassador to Trinidad, got his fill of Washington and departed in 1992. The seat, which was shifted into a new 10th District was won by Studds who now apparently has had his fill of Washington, too and is bowing out.

Seventeen years ago was a good time to be in Congress as a Democrat. Not so good, today, with Republicans holding the big cards.

Sheets would have been happy in Washington in 1978. Not now.

It will take an estimated $2 million to run a successful primary and final election. That's big bucks compared to financing a mayoral campaign.

Running out of Quincy would be a plus as it is the biggest community in the district. But that is no guarantee a Quincy candidate would come up a winner.

Paul Harold can tell you that. He carried Quincy against Studds in the Democratic primary in 1992 but Studds rolled through most of the rest of the district.

Of course, Studds was an incumbent and now the seat is wide open.

But it doesn't appear tempting enough for Sheets.

And Harold doesn't appear to be warming up to another run despite his strong performance in last week's city election when he topped the City Council at-large field by just under 2,000 votes.

Dist. Atty. William Delahunt, a Quincy resident, has already said he's running for the seat. And already has a chunk of the money needed.

Two or more Quincy candidates would badly split the Quincy vote and available money, giving a candidate from somewhere else in the district a good chance to grab the seat.

Sheets looks, and sounds, like he will be around City Hall for awhile yet.

SPEAKING OF SHEETS, it would seem that he is in good shape as far as the mayor's office is concerned.

He piled up a 16,297 vote to challenger Roger Lyons' 2,518, in last week's city election. There were 868 blanks.

No one expected Lyons to win or come close.

The significant thing was that Lyons was the first opponent Sheets has had as an incumbent mayor, running unopposed in the two previous elections.

So here was an opportunity for those dissatisfied with Sheets' hand at the city's helm to vote for an opponent and show it.

(Blanks cast when a candidate is unopposed don't give a true reading as to dissatisfaction because some people who blank a candidate do so because they consider him already elected.)

But when a mayor has an opponent and tops that opponent by 13,779 votes it indicates that most people think he's doing a pretty good job.

It's not too rare for a little known opponent to rack up as many as 10,000 votes against an incumbent mayor.

SHEETS

YOU MIGHT SAY that Christine Cedrone who topped the six-candidate School Committee field has a nice political touch.

The day after her impressive victory, she and her campaign manager, Vin Scarnici, were standing on a traffic island at Franklin and Schools Sts. with "Thank You" signs. And that must have impressed a few passers-by.

Cedrone says she was surprised that she was the top vote-getter. She thought she might be second.

Does the big win give her thoughts about running for a higher level office in the near future?

"No," she says. "I'm not thinking about anything like that right now. The most important thing I am interested in is a good education for our children. And that is why I ran for the School Committee."

(She reveals that she had been urged to run for the City Council but she preferred the School Committee.)

FORMER SCHOOL COMMITTEEMAN Frank Anselmo is still a spry old warrior at age 97.

Anselmo, a veteran of both World War I and World War II, was invited to say a few words at the Quincy Veterans' Day ceremonies Saturday and picked a few crowd-pleasing ones.

"I was drafted in World War I," he told the audience. "I was drafted in World War II. And if there is a World War III—I'm ready to go."

The American flag means a lot to Anselmo and he showed it Sunday at the Quincy Jewish War Veterans breakfast honoring John (Jake) Comer, past national commander of the American Legion as its "Citizen of the Year."

Anselmo had previously donated $10,000 to the Citizens Flag Alliance to help its campaign for a Constitutional amendment to protect the flag from abuse.

At the breakfast he handed Comer, one of the spearheads for the amendment, a check for $5,000 more.

(Anselmo has also donated $80,000 to Quincy College for scholarships.)

MILESTONE: Retiring Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan and his wife, Michelle are parents of a son, their first child, Charles John Phelan, III born Nov. 9 at 1:10 p.m. at Quincy Hospital. He weighed in at 8 pounds, one ounce.

Grandparents are Charles and Marie Phelan and Jack and Diane Lydon, all of Quincy.

The granddads are pretty well known around town: Jack is a former Ward 3 city councillor and Charles was a popular Quincy police officer for some 32 years.

AND A PERSONAL milestone: Jay Bosworth Newman made an impressive debut at 9 pounds, 6 ounces at South Shore Hospital Nov. 10. His mom and dad, Dollye and Jeff Newman of Quincy, big sister, Kellie (2), and—of course—us grandparents couldn't be happier. A real handsome little guy.

Norfolk Downs Depot

THIS IS A 1919 real photo postcard of the old Norfolk Downs railroad depot at the end of Billings Road. This whole scene has changed today. The station was on the Newport Avenue side of the tracks and is now the site of the Co-operative Bank. The building behind the station on the right was the original Pneumatic Scale building later replaced with the large building that will soon be demolished to make room for a Stop and Shop. The building on the left was a movie theater and later the Pay and Take furniture store. After burning in the 70's, that space became a parking lot for Walsh's Restaurant.

Parents' Right Bill Deserves A Vote

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

According to a news story in the Nov. 10 Boston Phoenix, a lawsuit brought in 1993 against a controversial AIDS educator was dismissed on Oct. 24 by the First US Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston.

According to the sex educator's lawyer, "This (AIDS, education and sex education) is a health issue that must be addressed and basically the court ruling said if these kids or their parents were offended, then that is just tough."

After reading that Phoenix story and several quotes from the lawyer representing Suzi Landolfi, I have more questions about a public school system inviting a sex educator trained as a lecturer by the AIDS Action Committee. Parents had a right to be upset and I believe the federal court erred in concluding that no rights of students and parents had been violated by mandatory attendance at a so-called AIDS education student assembly.

This case up in Chelmsford as well as an earlier one down in Falmouth, where the school committee allowed, as policy, the distribution of condoms to junior and high school students shows the need for the so-called Parents' Rights bill now bottled up in the House up on Beacon Hill.

Whether it is the federal court and Chelmsford or the State Supreme Judicial Court and Falmouth, now is the time for parents to be both seen and heard. Schools are not parents and can not take the place of parents. State Rep. David Cohen, D-Newton calls this legislation the "parental interference bill" and has succeeded in getting the measure tied up in committee, preventing a vote on the House floor. It is always a big temptation to turn the position of people the other side of a public debate into caricatures. Right now this is happening in the discussion over parental rights in public schools and this approach shuts down discussion and makes it extremely difficult to come to reasonable conclusions.

I oppose any special interest groups using the public schools to advance their agenda on captive audiences of students whether it be Chelmsford, Falmouth or right here in Quincy. I wouldn't allow the Christian Coalition into our schools anymore than I would allow the AIDS Action Committee.

Parents should not be viewed as obstacles to be avoided or moved and support for a parents' rights bill should not be assumed by liberal critics to be nothing more than a part of a larger and/or religious agenda.

Quincy parents should call members of the Quincy delegation in the state House of Representatives urging that the Parents' Right bill be placed on the House floor for a vote.

If some liberals don't like this bill that's one thing but to bury it in committee is politically incorrect from this parent's point of view. "Tough" talk from apparently arrogant liberals with a seemingly disdain for parental rights is nothing but silly rhetoric. When it comes to parental rights, there should be neither liberal nor conservative reaction. The Parents' Rights bill isn't about ideology, it's about parents being in charge rather than schools. It's about schools listening to parents rather than telling parents what to do. It's not about interference, it's about involvement in their children's lives and concern for their future.

Thanks State Legislators For Supporting Education

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On behalf of the 16,000 undergraduate students of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, I want to thank members of the Massachusetts Legislature, particularly Reps. Ronald Mariano, Michael Bellotti and Stephen Tobin, for strongly supporting public higher education.

By supporting a $10.4 million dollar increase in state funding for the University of Massachusetts, the Legislature protected an important investment in Massachusetts' future, demonstrating their further support by voting to override Governor Weld's public higher education veto.

It is due to the courageous acts of these legislators that the University of Massachusetts has been able to freeze tuition for the second year in a row and increase the quality of education at the university.

Mrs. Charles O'Connell of S. Central Ave. was presented the Edward MacEwan cup which was awarded annually to an outstanding worker in the fund and in the community.

FIRST CHURCH CUPOLA TO BE GROUNDED

The cupola and belfry of the United First Parish Church were scheduled to be removed next week as part of the ongoing repairs to the church's tower and belfry.

The W.A. MacLeod Company of Boston made the decision to lower the belfry to the ground as it became apparent that the deterioration of the tower and its pillars had advanced beyond what was originally estimated.

A 140-foot crane would be needed to accomplish the "monumental" removal.

QUINCY-ISMS

With Councillors George Burke, Joseph LaRaia and John Quinn locked in a three-way battle for Council president, newly-elected members Francis McCauley, Walter Hannon and John Koegler would hold the balance of power. School Committee vice chairman Charles Sweeney, a former soccer player at Dartmouth College, picked off the first ball for the QHS-NQHS soccer game at Memorial Stadium. Top bowlers for the Jewish War Veterans team were Dan Lubarsky, Danny Cohen, Ed Rubin, Mel Applebaum and Harry Prolman. Miss Ann of Oval Road read cards at her home. She spoke seven languages. More than two thirds of the adults at Sunday services at Bethany Church opposed the recent Supreme Court's decision to limit prayer and Bible readings. The poll was conducted by Rev. William Dever, minister of Christian education. Alexis Horkun married Vincent Solimini. Mrs. Charles Campbell was chairman for the Diamond Jubilee Benefit Ball for the Quincy Women's Club at the Sheraton Motor Inn. Jim Edwards and the Imperials were at Fil's Cafe on Washington St. Louis Caruso, an unsuccessful candidate for Mayor, said he would next run for either Ward Three or At-large councillor. Marie's Kitchen

By MARIE J. D'OLIMPIO

Nancy's Hamburg Surprise

While visiting with our daughter Nancy recently, this great odor from her kitchen signaled to me a potential recipe for today's column. And I was right. Nancy gave me a sample and it was delicious.

The following recipe can be made with ground turkey, veal or a combination of meats. For this day, Nancy used ground beef.

Nancy's Hamburg Surprise
2 pounds ground meat
1 medium onion
2 tablespoons olive oil
salt and pepper to taste

1 cup shredded cheddar cheese
1/2 cup bisquick
1 cup milk
2 eggs

In the hot oil, saute the onion and hamburger. Add the salt and pepper.

In a greased nine inch pan, spread the hamburger mixture. Top it with the cheddar cheese.

Mix the bisquick with the eggs and milk until blended and pour over the hamburger. Bake in a 400 degree oven for 25 minutes. Let cool for a few minutes and then cut into squares.

Legendary Quincy Educator To Retire

had made to the sixth graders who began attending Central in September.

"I told the incoming sixth graders, I'll be there when you come in the door on the first day of school," she said. "I couldn't go back on my word to them."

Iannoni said the countless students she has helped over the years "have all been wonderful." She added that while some, such as Boston School Supt. Thomas Payzant, have gone on to higher profile positions, she is equally proud of all her students.

"There are a lot of people who have done ordinary things extraordinarily well, and my hat's off to them," she said.

She also spoke of a Charles Schultz comic strip where Linus tells Charlie Brown he wants to be "deliriously happy" when he grows up.

"I'd like to think all the kids I've counseled are deliriously happy," she said. "A great deal of satisfaction for me is seeing happy people, whether it's on the job, in the classroom or on a ballfield."

Iannoni's dedication to her job is perhaps best exemplified by the fact that she has accumulated 429 sick days during her time in Quincy. According to her contract, she can be paid for no more than 30, a fact that doesn't bother her.

"Sick days are for when you're sick," she said.

Iannoni also praised the city where she has worked for 44 years as well as the five Quincy principals she has served under: Harry Beede, Chet Young, Dick Chrystal, Vinnie Moscardelli and Lou DiMartino.

"Quincy's been very good to me," she said. "The city has been extremely supportive. And every principal for whom I've worked provided a latitude for me to perform my duties."

"Being a counselor, I'm not confined by curriculum or time slots. I don't have the constraints that everyone else in the building has. There's a freedom I've enjoyed that few other positions in education allow."

Iannoni said she hopes whoever replaces her gets the same satisfaction from the job she has experienced.

"I hope she's as happy I as was," she said. "And I hope I'll have left a neat place for my replacement. I actually entertained thoughts of getting a dumpster to neat up the files."

Iannoni is not leaving Central completely behind. She said she still plans to participate in Central's Camp Wing in Duxbury in the springtime and hopes to attend other student programs and concerts in the future.

"I'll turn up like a bad penny," she said.

But it won't be the same as being head counselor, she admitted.

"When I told Eugene Creedon I was retiring, I told him, 'I probably had more fun being a teacher and counselor than most people in the business.' And I did. I really loved it."

McKay & Fried went with a bank that sees the big picture.

"When we started our advertising agency, we looked for a bank that could see more than the numbers on the balance sheet. That's why we chose Bank of Braintree. They put together a financial package that helped us aggressively pursue growth in a very competitive business, and came through with invaluable advice. They saw beyond where we are today; they saw where we can go."

QHS To Link With National Weather Forecasting Network

Students and teachers from Quincy High School will soon be accessing real time weather data from any of 1,000 other schools nationwide which are linked by SchoolNet, the Nationwide School Weather Network, a fully automated weather observation station specifically designed for education.

Produced by Automated Weather Source (AWS), which provides meteorological data to local TV stations, the education/broadcast TV partnership will allow WBZ-

TV, Channel 4 meteorologists to access and "air" real time weather data compiled by the students at Quincy High School.

Integrating SchoolNet came as a surprise to Principal Lloyd Hill, executive director of the Community Partnership Program Arthur Keough, and several department heads and students recently when it was announced by The Hibernia Savings Bank Chairman and CEO Mark Osborne during a formal signing at the high school of the Quincy School-Community Partnership agreement between the bank and the school.

The bank has been involved in educational initiatives with the high school since Sept. 1994 when it opened a branch office in the supervised by bank personnel and staffed by students and a hands-on-educational facility.

"The idea behind the Quincy School-Community Partnership is to create enlightened self-interest for both partners," said Keough. "However, I can't help but think that Quincy High School is getting more than that. The Hibernia Savings Bank. First we have a full-fledged retail branch office that is not profitable for the bank, and now the bank is paying for a weather station. What you see here is a bank that's very loyal to its neighborhood and its community."

"We have some very valuable assets in terms of the bank's support to Quincy High School," said Hill. "They've given us the branch, which links us to the community as our young people work with adults and now they've taken the initiative to give us SchoolNet which will link us to the community in another way. This is a bank that has a true community spirit and is willing to invest in our young people. They are spending significant funds on SchoolNet, and we will make good use of it."

The bank will fund both the state-of-the-art technology and the hands-on interdisciplinary curriculum. At the high school level, AWS classroom applications impact the mathematics, science, computer skills, social studies and English departments.

At Quincy High, students who plan to move into the communications field in weather forecasting will create a telecast studio and use SchoolNet information to mimic a live television weather forecast.

Osborne read about the concept of SchoolNet, and considered it not only an important educational tool but also fun and interesting. After the bank and the high school agreed to form the partnership, he inquired about the school's interest in SchoolNet and was met with an enthusiastic response.

"We saw this as a positive and substantive educational opportunity to enhance the educational curriculum being provided to the students of Quincy High School. The routine "on-air" use by WBZ-TV heightens the interest and enthusiasm in school both for the students and our community," said Osborne.

U.S. Shutdown Forces Adams Site To Close

•Nationwide sites such as the Statue of Liberty, Ellis Island, Washington Monument, St. Louis Arch (Jefferson National Expansion Memorial), White House Visitor Center, Independence Hall, Alcatraz Island and visitor centers throughout the country closed immediately.

•Entrance stations are closed at all national parks. These include Yosemite, Acadia and Grand Canyon, which have lodging and campgrounds. However, visitors staying in overnight facilities inside the parks would be allowed to remain unless the shutdown continued for more than 24 hours. In the event of a prolonged

George Hill Scholarship Semi-Finalist

George Hill has been selected as a semi-finalist by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation.

He is the son of Will and Lydia Hill of Piermont, N.H. and grandson of Theresa Petrella of Quincy.

Hill is a member of the Woodsville High School National Honor Society, editor of the school newspaper, and captain of the 1995 Granite State Challenge academic quiz team.

Last year, he was the only junior in New Hampshire named as a Century II Scholar and also was selected as a candidate for the U.S. Senate Leadership Program for which he served as a Youth Senator.

shutdown, the NPS will be unable to ensure the safety of park visitors. Consequently, concession operations will be significantly curtailed and visitors will be given approximately 48 hours to leave the park.

•All park visitors centers and other facilities are closed, educational programs are curtailed, special events have been cancelled, and permits issued for special activities are being rescinded. Most park roads are closed except those used as throughways and those serving concession facilities, which remain open.

Peak said park superintendents and site managers have the authority to determine which basic services and personnel are required during a prolonged shutdown. Required personnel will provide law enforcement and protection of park resources and facilities. NPS employees will continue necessary maintenance to assure public health and safety, including management of park water treatment plants and other essential utilities.

The Park Service estimates that about 2,500 employees, including U.S. Park Police, will remain on duty for the shutdown's duration. Currently, 20,000 employees work for the NPS.

The National Park System is comprised of 369 areas covering more than 83 million acres in every state except Delaware and the District of Columbia. The system includes national parks, monuments, battlefields, military parks, historical parks, historic sites, lakeshores, seashores, recreation areas, scenic rivers and trails, and the White House.

No Recounts In 3, 4

There will be no recounts following the close voting results in the races for Ward 3 and Ward 4 city councillor from last week's municipal election.

In the closest race of the election, Patrick McDermott edged Stephen Doherty to become the new Ward 3 councillor by only 73 votes (1,593 to 1,520). Doherty, however, told The Quincy Sun he does not plan to seek a recount because the results would more than likely be the same.

"We gave it considerable thought, but we just thought it would be too much of a stretch," he said.

In the biggest upset of the election, 20-year-old college student Michael D'Amico defeated Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio's bid for a fourth term to become the youngest councillor elected in the city's history. D'Amico won the election by 84 votes (1,886 to 1,802).

Fabrizio said he will not seek a recount because it would be unfair to put that financial burden on the city's taxpayers following a reasonably decisive margin of victory for D'Amico.

City Clerk Joseph Shea estimated it would cost the city between $3,000 and $4,000 for a recount in either ward.

voiced their support for the project.

School Committee Vice Chairman Daniel Raymond, elected last week to the City Council, and committee member Ronald Mariano devised the plan, which includes converting the Point-Webster Elementary School in Quincy Point to a middle school and renovating Sterling, which has begun to experience overcrowding problems.

Half the pupils who attend Sterling, which is in South Quincy, are bused there from Quincy Point after they finish the fifth grade at Point-Webster.

The new elementary school would house the 623 children who attend Point-Webster for kindergarten through Grade 5. Point-Webster would be transformed into the neighborhood's middle school, relieving stress on Sterling which has more than 600 students.

City funds also will be needed to buy the proposed site for the new elementary school, a pair of vacant lots on Cleverly Court near the Fore River shipyard which are owned by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority. Sheets said preliminary negotiations with MWRA officials are under way, but no deal has been struck.

Critics, 'Monday Morning Quarterbacks Tinkering With History'

Sun Publisher Defends Use Of Atomic Bomb

Revisionists who criticize the use of the atomic bomb against Japan were themselves criticized on Veterans Day by Quincy Sun publisher Henry Bosworth as "Monday morning quarterbacks tinkering with history" a half-century later.

A World War II veteran who served aboard the destroyer USS Cogswell with the carriers in the Pacific, Bosworth was guest speaker at Quincy's Veterans Day ceremonies sponsored by the Quincy Veterans Council.

He said the alternative to the atomic bomb--an invasion of Japan--would have resulted in "a staggering loss of lives for them and for us."

Bosworth said that those who fought in the Pacific found no fault with President Harry Truman's decision to use the atomic bomb.

And to today's critics he asked: "Were you out there in the Pacific at the time?"

"Don't let anyone kid you that the Japanese were ready to quit fighting," he told those attending the ceremonies at Adams Academy.

"The fact that it took two atomic bombs--not one, but two--to convince them to surrender attests to their willingness to have fought on and on. Give them credit. They were a determined, tough enemy that believed dying was an honor."

"The sad thing about World War II is not the atomic bomb," he said, "but that we thought it was the war to end all wars--and it wasn't."

"We never suspected that a Korea, Vietnam, Persian Gulf and all the skirmishes in between were yet to come."

Bosworth said the critics concentrate on the atomic bomb but seem to overlook the rest of the war in the Pacific.

"They seldom mention the attack on Pearl Harbor--not just an attack but a sneak attack--that forced us into the war," he said.

"Do they ever think of all those sailors still entombed in sunken battleships at the bottom of Pearl Harbor?"

"Do they ever think of the atrocities suffered by American prisoners of war?"

"Do they ever think of the Gold Star Mothers whose young sons never came home?"

"I interviewed a former Quincy boy--Major General Charles Sweeney--some years ago on an anniversary of the atomic bombs dropped at Hiroshima and Nagasaki. As you know, he took part in both missions and was the pilot on the second."

"Would you do it again," I asked him.

"Yes," he said without hesitation. "I would do it again--under the same circumstances."

circumstances.

"He still feels the same way."

"Those circumstances were right a half century ago. And they can't be changed a half century later."

"Another former Quincy boy--Congressional Medal of Honor winner Charles McGilvary, probably summed it up best when he recently observed:

"If there hadn't been a Pearl Harbor, there wouldn't have been an atomic bomb!"

"The bomb at Hiroshima and the one at Nagasaki eliminated the need for what would have been a very costly invasion."

"The Japanese were even training young boys as suicide pilots and they had some 5,000 suicide planes waiting and ready."

"They also had something else."

"I was in a scouting party that landed at Yokosuka, a Japanese naval base town south of Tokyo before the formal surrender on Sept. 2, 1945.

"In caves we found suicide speed boats which were to be piled with explosives to ram our ships and landing craft in an invasion."

"And this--I'll never forget. The speed boats had 1936 or 1937 Chevrolet engines. And just down the street, believe it or not, was a Socony gas station."

Bosworth urged veterans to continue the fight for a Constitutional amendment to protect the American flag from abuse.

"If destroying a mail box is an offense, destroying the American flag should be, too. Our flag is more than a piece of cloth. It is the symbol of our country."

"Anyone who desecrates the flag--I feel--also desecrates our country."

"Opponents argue that if you take away the right to burn the flag as a freedom of expression it could lead to the loss of other freedoms such as freedom of religion, freedom of the press and the right to assembly."

"I don't agree. I think it's the other way around."

"If they can abuse the flag what else will they eventually be able to abuse? Desecrate a church, a synagogue, a hallowed cemetery as a freedom of expression?"

"With freedom of speech and expression should come responsibility and respect."

"You shouldn't have the right to run up a movie theater aisle yelling FIRE! just because you have freedom of speech."

I doesn't give you the right to stick your head inside a bank and yell holdup!

"Or stand in Quincy Square and yell obscenities across Hancock St."

"Some people say, 'What's the big fuss?' Not many flags have been burned, they tell you. But I say to them that burning just one flag is too many."

"I think if anyone who burns our flag had to live under the flag of another country for awhile, he would be darn glad to come home and give Old Glory a big salute. If not a big kiss."

"This country--I'm sure we all agree--has some faults and problems."

"The reaction to the verdict in the O.J. Simpson trial revealed a much wider division between whites and blacks than we thought. That gap has to be closed. Or, we are in real trouble!"

"The drug problem has mushroomed. We now have bombings like the one in Oklahoma City."

"You can be gunned down if you happen to be in the wrong place at the wrong time."

"We can't even list the home address in a death notice in the newspaper anymore because some one will be breaking into your home while you're burying a loved one."

"There are other problems. But, this country still has a lot going for it. It still is the greatest country. And you veterans helped make it great and keep it great."

Bosworth praised veterans for "helping to make and keep this country great" and told them: "Be proud to be a veteran. Be proud whether you were in a so-called popular war, an unpopular war or a so-called forgotten war."

"It doesn't matter what kind of war. What matters is that you were there when your country called."

He said as veterans they did their job and did it well but that there is still a job to be done.

"As veterans you have another important role. You are guardians of the cherished principles and ideals on which this country was founded."

"Don't let anyone erode them. Abuse of the flag is a warning that erosion may have begun. Fight to protect our flag from abuse and stop the erosion from spreading."

He concluded:

"As bad-if not worse than a sneak attack from without, is an enemy sneaking within."

City Council President Michael Cheney said he believes there should be a statue honoring World War II veterans placed on the front lawn of the Adams Academy with the World War I Doughboy statue.

"Veterans shouldn't be forgotten," he said. "Veterans groups aren't just meeting halls. They are out there day after day performing charitable acts in and out of Quincy."

"If Uncle Sam is crazy enough to draft me again, I'll go again," he said, bringing smiles to those attending.

Comer Receives JWV 'Citizen Of Year' Award

John (Jake) Comer, Quincy Housing Authority director and past national commander of the American Legion, was honored Sunday by the Quincy Jewish War Veterans Post as its "Citizen of The Year."

Comer was presented the award, the 45th annual, at a breakfast at the Beth Israel Synagogue attended by city and state officials, veterans, family and friends.

The award, which is given annually in the theme of "people helping people," was presented to Comer by Irving Isaacson, program chairman and emcee.

Guest speaker John J. Mulkern, past national vice commander of the American Legion, said Comer was one of the most effective and popular national commanders the Legion has ever had.

He recalled Comer facing up to former Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega and criticizing him for conditions in Nicaragua at the time.

Rabbi Jacob Mann of Beth Israel Synagogue said, however, that Comer was being honored not as a past national commander of the American Legion but for his compassion to those in need.

"A man we can all respect," he said.

Comer's son, John, Jr., speaking for his mother, Eileen, and the family, praised his father as one "who is always there for us" despite his many activities in the Legion and the Quincy Housing Authority.
